Downing Street, 17th March, 1925.

WITH reference to my despatch [To all except Newfoundland and Southern Rhodesia: Dominions Treaty No. 11,] [To Newfoundland: No. 20,] [To Southern Rhodesia: No. 79,*] of the 4th March, I have the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [you,] for the information of your Ministers, the accompanying [certified copy] [copy] of a note from the Bolivian Legation in Paris regarding the denunciation by the Bolivian Government of the International Air Navigation Convention of 1919, together with copies of letters from the International Commission for Air Navigation with regard to the applications made by His Majesty's Government and the Governments of Canada, France and Belgium for derogations from Article 5 of the above Convention.

2. I also enclose copies of letters from the International Commission for Air Navigation transmitting a statement showing the position with regard to the coming into operation of the Protocols concerning amendments to Articles 5 and 34 of the Air Convention, and notifying the adhesion of the Czechoslovak Republic to these Protocols.

Enclosure 1 in No. 1.

(No. 161.)

Legation de Bolivie, Paris,
le 10 janvier, 1925.

MONSIEUR LE PRÉSIDENT DU CONSEIL,

En date du 30 août, 1923, j'ai eu l'honneur de communiquer à M. le Secrétaire-Général de la Commission Internationale de Navigation aérienne que des circonstances imprévues obligeaient le Gouvernement bolivien à ne plus faire partie de ladite Commission.

Cette communication, conformément à l'article 43 de la Convention portant réglementation de la Navigation aérienne, aurait dû être transmise, en même temps, au Gouvernement de la République française.

Ceci n'ayant pas été fait, mon Gouvernement, d'accord avec l'avis exprimé par la C.I.N.A. dans sa résolution No. 179, adoptée au cours de sa septième session, tenue à Paris en octobre, 1924, à savoir : que la communication du 30 août, 1923, du Ministre de Bolivie à Paris au Secrétaire-Général de la Commission doit être considérée comme une dénonciation de la Convention, faite à cette date, me charge de Vous prier de bien vouloir considérer cette communication comme la dénonciation définitive faite par le Gouvernement de la République de Bolivie de la Convention portant réglementation de la Navigation aérienne signée à Paris le 13 octobre, 1919; dénonciation ayant effet, conformément à l'article 43 de la Convention à la date du 30 août, 1924.

Je vous prie d'agréer, etc.,
F. A. ARAMAYO.

Copie certifiée conforme : Le Ministre plenipotentiaire,
Chef du Service du Protocole,
P. DE FOUQUIERES.

Son Excellence Monsieur Edouard Herriot,
Président du Conseil,
Ministre des Affaires Etrangères,
Paris.

Enclosure 2 in No. 1.

(No. 121.)

Commission Internationale de Navigation Aérienne, Secretariat General,
6th February, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to inform you that in consequence of the denunciation by Bolivia of the Air Convention of the 13th of October, 1919, the applications made by Belgium, France and Canada for derogations from Article 5 of the said Convention, are in the position of having been accepted by all the Governments of the States that were parties to the Convention at the time the said applications were approved by the International Commission for Air Navigation.

These derogations will, therefore, take effect, in accordance with the terms of the additional Protocol of the 1st of May, 1920, and of Resolution No. 139 of the Commission (Official Bulletin No. 6, page 23), as from the 30th of August, 1924, the date of the denunciation of the Convention by the Bolivian Government.

I have, &c.,
ALBERT ROPER,
General Secretary.

The Secretary,
Air Ministry,
London, W.C.2.

Enclosure 3 in No. 1.

(No. 215.)

Commission Internationale de Navigation Aérienne, Secretariat General,

25th February, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to inform you that the Government of the Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes notified me on the 24th of February, 1925, of its acceptance of the application for a derogation from Article 5 of the Air Convention made by the British Government on behalf of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

In consequence of this application and of the denunciation of the Convention by Bolivia, this application for a derogation has been accepted by all the Governments of the States which were parties to the Convention at the time of the approval of this application by the International Commission for Air Navigation.

This derogation will, therefore, take effect in accordance with the terms of the Additional Protocol of the 1st of May, 1920, and of Resolution No. 139 of the Commission (Official Bulletin No. 6, page 23) as from the 24th of February, 1925.

I have, &c.,

ALBERT ROPER,
General Secretary.

The Secretary,

In pursuance of their policy of themselves conducting any negotiations with foreign powers regarding South-West Africa, my Ministers have asked me to approach the High Commissioner for Angola with a view to re-opening negotiations for the delimitation of the boundary, which have remained in abeyance since my predecessor's telegram of 8th June, 1923.* I am accordingly addressing High Commissioner as desired with a request that should his Government be not prepared now to accept the draft agreement drawn up in 1920 by the mixed Boundary Commission they should nominate fully accredited representative(s) to meet representative(s) of Union Government preferably at Cape Town to discuss the matter. Ministers intend that any agreement or convention that may result shall be signed by the Union Government as mandatory. Will keep you informed of progress of negotiations. As stated above Ministers action is based upon their position as holders of a mandate directly from the League of Nations, but as the matter appears to be of purely local interest it seems to come within the scope of Resolution IX, Part 2, of the Imperial Conference, 1923, providing for independent conduct by Dominions of negotiations of this nature.—ATHLONE.

SIR, Governor-General's Office, Cape Town, 10th March, 1925.

WITH reference to my despatch No. 66 of the 24th February† regarding the re-opening of the negotiations for the delimitation of the Angola-South West Africa boundary, I have the honour to transmit herewith a copy of the Minute from my Ministers which formed the basis of my despatch to the High Commissioner of Angola.

I have, &c.,
ATHLONE,
Governor-General.

*28909/23: not printed; it contained the views of the Union Government as to the lines of an agreement with the Portuguese Government. †12117/25: not printed; it enclosed a copy of the despatch to the High Commissioner of Angola referred to in No. 17.

Enclosure in No. 18.

MINUTE No. 120.

Prime Minister's Office, 13th February, 1925.

MINISTERS have the honour to address His Excellency the Governor-General in reference to Minute No. 66/20 addressed to their predecessors for their information by His Royal Highness the late Governor-General on the 22nd October, 1923. With that Minute was enclosed a copy of a Note from the Portuguese Minister in London relative to the draft Agreement of 5th July, 1920, in regard to the frontier between South-West Africa and Portuguese West Africa (Angola) and the use of the waters of a certain river—the Kunene. The Portuguese Minister's Note reached His Royal Highness, and was transmitted to Ministers' predecessors, under cover of despatch No. 238 of 22nd September, 1923, from the then Secretary of State for the Colonies. As, however, the Note was for information only, it required no reply. It would appear from correspondence which is before Ministers that it was then intended that the subject of the Note should be discussed in London between General Smuts as Prime Minister of the Union and a specially accredited representative of the Portuguese Government. Owing to accidental circumstances no such discussion took place and no further action in regard to the draft Agreement of 1920 was taken.

2. Since October, 1923, certain incidents have taken place near the Portuguese frontier of South-West Africa which have been brought to the attention of Ministers. Short reference is made to these incidents in the Memorandum attached to this Minute.

3. Ministers have arrived at the conclusion that a discussion is desirable on the matters outstanding between the Union Government as mandatory of South-West Africa and the Portuguese Government, and if possible a re-opening of negotiations with a view to the signature of the draft Agreement of 5th July, 1920, with or without modifications.

4. Ministers, therefore, would be grateful if His Excellency would address to the High Commissioner for the Portuguese Government in Angola a communication inquiring whether he or his Government is now in a position either to approve of the proposals of the Union Government conveyed to His Royal Highness Prince Arthur of Connaught on the 6th June, 1923, or to authorize a fully accredited representative of the Portuguese Government to discuss the details of the proposal or any modification thereof with a representative of the Union Government at some place to be arranged—preferably in Cape Town.

5. Ministers annex to this Minute for His Excellency's information, a Memorandum setting out shortly what appear to them to be the essential or salient facts of the present position in regard to the whole matter. Ministers will, of course, submit any further information which His Excellency may desire to have.

6. Ministers feel sure that His Excellency appreciates that the Union Government, as mandatory of the League of Nations for South-West Africa, can alone on behalf of the territory enter into negotiations in regard to this matter and sign any agreement or convention with the Portuguese Government which may result therefrom.

J. B. M. HERTZOG.

MEMORANDUM.

In the Agreement signed at Ruacana on the 5th July, 1920 (subject to the approval of the respective Governments), between the British Commission, composed of Messrs. F. E. Kanthack, C.M.G., Director of Irrigation of the Union, H. E. Schoch, Surveyor-General of the Union, and Major C. N. Manning, Resident Commissioner of Ovamboland, and the Portuguese Commission, Part I refers to the delimitation of the boundary between Angola and South-West Africa: Part II relates to the division and diversion of the waters of the Kunene River above the Great Ruacana Falls for the purpose of generating hydraulic power: Part III refers to the utilization and regulation, for irrigation or inundation, of the water of the Kunene River into the territory of South-West Africa towards the south and south-east.

The Portuguese delegates had at the time only instructions regarding Parts I and II; and the following was decided as regards these parts:—

Part I.—That the Anglo-Portuguese frontier of the South of Angola shall follow the middle of the main channel of the Kunene River from its mouth to the centre of the crest or lip of the Great Ruacana Cataract (or Falls); thence the frontier will follow the parallel of latitude to the Kubango or Okavango River near Kwangar.

Part II.—The Great Ruacana Cataract, being on both sides of the international boundary, and, according to international law, one half of the water flowing at any time in the river and the hydraulic power obtainable therefrom belongs to each of the territories abutting on the river at all times of the year; the dam, weir or barrage for the joint use of the two contracting parties to be built up-stream of the great Fall at a distance not exceeding three kilometres from the beacon in the middle of the crest of the great Fall; the Government of South-West Africa to have the right to impound its half share of the water and divert it into its canals on the left bank of the river; the power canal on the left bank of the river, where it traverses Portuguese territory to be located on an alignment, most economical and practical to the Government of South-West Africa; the limits within which construction operations to take place within Portuguese territory to be bounded by the Kunene River, on the right side of the canal, and by a line 300 metres parallel to and on the left side of the canal, and for a distance of 300 metres measured along the Kunene River up-stream of the weir, dam or barrage. Over this triangular piece of ground Portuguese to retain dominium. The Government of South-West Africa to have right to send engineers, etc., and labourers to prepare power project and construct works for diverting its half share of water, but not to use right bank of Kunene River for that purpose; cost of construction of dam, etc., which will be used jointly by the two contracting parties, to be borne by the party which first undertakes the construction of the work, but when the party which has not in first instance constructed dam, etc., wishes to construct works for development of water power on its own side of the river, such party shall not construct the necessary regulator at the dam, weir or barrage, or divert water until it has paid the party which first constructed the dam, etc., half of the cost thereof. The Portuguese Government to grant the Government of South-West Africa all facilities of access for survey operations and the construction of the works.

Part III.—(In regard to which the Portuguese Delegates had no instructions.)

The following is a brief extract from the statement made by the British Delegates, and received by the Portuguese Delegates without prejudice, for submission to the Portuguese Government:—

The British Delegates claim the following servitudinal Rights:—

That the South-West African Government shall have right:

- (a) To one-half of flow of Kunene River at all seasons of the year below Humbe for irrigation and power purposes:
- (b) To divert whole or part of such water at one or more points along the Kunene River between Humbe and a point one kilometre above the rapids below Erickson's Drift (commonly known as the Kavale or Okavare Falls) for irrigation or inundation purposes by means of dams, weirs or other diversion works.
- (c) To construct such dams or weirs across Kunene River abutting on to both banks of river.
- (d) To construct and maintain head regulators at diversion works and canals, channels or other aqueducts across Portuguese territory to South-West Africa.
- (e) To occupy zone of 250 metres on each side of centre line of such canals, channels or aqueducts.
- (f) To send engineers, etc., and employ workmen to make surveys, trial pits and borings, anywhere within an area bounded on west by Kunene River, on north by a line running from Humbe to Ondjiva, on east by a line running from Ondjiva along the Oshana or Omuramba, which passes close to Namakunde and on the south by the International boundary.

The Portuguese Government accepted Parts I and II of the Agreement (which, of course, conceded all their claims as regards the boundary line), but could not accept Part III, contending that that would involve a diminution of their Sovereign Rights, and no solution has up to now been found.

The Union Government on 6th June, 1923, advised the Secretary of State that it could not see its way clear to agreeing to Parts I and II only of the draft Agreement, unless the Portuguese Government approved also of Part III in reference to the diversion and use of half the waters of the Kunene (to which South-West Africa is entitled according to International Law), as it regarded the acceptance of Part III as an essential condition of the Union's acceptance of the other two parts. If the Portuguese Government were in principle prepared to approve Part III the Union Government was prepared to reconsider a modification of its details with a view to contracting the area within which its share of the water can be taken from the river, it having been informed that the area within which it is feasible to divert water is from the rapids or smaller falls of Kavale to a point a little above Erickson's Drift, and that it will not be necessary to go as far north as Humbe.

The Portuguese Government, while admitting that the taking of the half share of the water at Erickson's Drift would greatly facilitate matters, maintains that this point is still well within Portuguese territory, and that it cannot undertake negotiations on such a matter (which it regards as an entirely new question) until the question of the recognition of the frontier, which it claims, has been settled, and that therefore Parts I and II of the draft Agreement should first be accepted.

The Portuguese have become very active of late in the so-called "Neutral Zone," i.e., that between the line claimed by the late German Government and the line claimed by the Portuguese Government. The Portuguese have shown an increasing tendency to establish themselves at Namakunde, in the neutral zone, by the construction of special motor roads and mention of their intention to erect a further telephone line. They at one time went so far as to collect tax or tribute from the natives living in the zone. They have also erected a new building, which is a large structure of imported material resting on a concrete foundation. Brick outhouses have been built alongside, an orchard planted and other work has been done. It is also reported that the Portuguese Government has informed the natives that the South-West Africa Administration will have to evacuate the zone.

A considerable time has elapsed since any progress has been made in the negotiations regarding the boundary question and the presence of the disputed zone separating the territory of South-West Africa from Angola is a source of danger to the order, security and economic prosperity of the northern part of South-West Africa.

The time has, therefore, arrived for a settlement of this outstanding matter, and the conclusion of an agreement with the Portuguese Government, and it is unlikely that the first move will be made by the Portuguese, owing to their having virtually taken possession of the disputed neutral zone.

Note.—The matter was referred to in the Report by the Permanent Mandates Commission on its Sixth Session and at the 12th Meeting of the 35th Session of the Council of the League of Nations, on the 15th September, 1925. It was eventually arranged that the questions arising should be discussed between the Union Government and a Portuguese mission in the Union.

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 6th January, 1925.

WITH reference to your letter of the 24th ultimo* regarding the proposal of the Secretary of State for the Colonies that early steps should be taken to assert British rights over the Antarctic regions, I am directed by Mr. Secretary Chamberlain to state that, in the absence of definite information as to the precise extent of the territory claimed by the French Government, it is somewhat difficult for him to offer any useful observations on the attitude to be adopted towards those claims.

* No. 19 in Dominions No. 93.

2. It will be seen that the enclosed further copy of the French Presidential Decree of 26th March, 1924, issued by the Ministry of Marine, which has been communicated privately by the French Embassy, differs from that forwarded with the letter from this Department of 16th August last* by the addition of a footnote to the effect that the longitude constituting the boundaries of "Adélie or Wilkes Land" would be indicated in the decree to be issued by the Ministry of Colonies. As Mr. Amery is aware, when the latter was issued on 27th March it made no reference to boundaries.

3. Mr. Chamberlain is, of course, anxious to avoid giving any impression that His Majesty's Government are endeavouring to oust the French Government from territory already admitted to be theirs; at the same time he realizes that it would not be advisable to refrain from taking any action at all to give effect to the policy laid down in 1920, as the result of such inaction might be the annexation of further territory by the French Government. In these circumstances he proposes, subject to Mr. Amery's concurrence, to instruct His Majesty's Ambassador at Paris to endeavour to ascertain discreetly whether any boundaries have ever been fixed by the French Government, and, if so, what they are. If no such boundaries have been defined, His Majesty's Government will not lay themselves open to the accusation of asserting their sovereignty over territory which does not belong to them.

4. A copy of this letter is being sent to the Admiralty.

TELEGRAM.

[Answered by No. 23.]

16TH FEBRUARY. Secret. My telegram of 4th December, 1924.* Antarctic Regions. According to Press reports the French Government promulgated Decree 27th November last annexing Adélie Land. This appears to be step additional to Decree of 27th March, 1924.

My Ministers would be glad to learn the present position and limit(s), if any, the French Government has assigned to the territory over which it has asserted rights. Ministers point out that Australia's interest in this part of the Antarctic is very great owing to exploration work undertaken by Australians and to whaling resources of the adjacent waters, and they feel that British discovery and exploration confer definite rights on the Empire over this territory which should be of sufficient weight to be serious counter claims to the French claim.—FORSTER.

EXTRACT FROM THE "JOURNAL OFFICIEL DE LA RÉPUBLIQUE FRANÇAISE" OF 27TH NOVEMBER, 1924.

MINISTÈRE DES COLONIES.

Rapport au Président de la République Française.

MONSIEUR LE PRÉSIDENT,

Paris, le 21 novembre, 1924.

J'AI l'honneur de soumettre à votre haute sanction un projet de décret rattachant administrativement les îles Saint-Paul et Amsterdam, les archipels Kerguelen et Crozet et la terre Adélie au gouvernement général de Madagascar.

Ces lointaines parties de notre domaine colonial n'avaient fait jusqu'ici l'objet d'aucune organisation administrative permanente. Dans l'ignorance où l'on fut longtemps de la valeur économique de ces terres inhabitées, situées à l'écart des grandes routes maritimes, il n'avait point paru indispensable, en effet, de confirmer, par l'établissement d'une autorité effective, les droits de souveraineté que, de longue date, la France s'était acquis sur les archipels et sur les parties du continent antarctique reconnues par nos navigateurs.

Les missions scientifiques effectuées au début de ce siècle dans les mers australes ont établi que ces dépendances longtemps négligées de notre domaine d'outremer pouvaient offrir à l'industrie des grandes pêches des ressources extrêmement précieuses: les baleines, les phoques et les éléphants de mer sont en effet très abondants dans ces parages et la grande valeur industrielle des produits fournis par ces espèces animales n'a pas tardé à provoquer la création d'entreprises de pêche et de chasse dont les premières campagnes se sont révélées des plus fructueuses.

* No. 18 in Dominions No. 93.

En vue d'exercer sur l'exploitation de ces richesses nationales le contrôle effectif et suivi qui s'impose, il a paru nécessaire de pourvoir à l'organisation administrative de ces îles et terres australes et d'envisager à cet effet, leur rattachement à un gouvernement colonial déjà constitué: celui de Madagascar m'a semblé naturellement désigné, par la situation géographique de cette colonie et par les moyens d'action dont il peut disposer, pour assurer l'autorité souveraine de la France sur cette partie de notre domaine colonial. Consulté sur le principe de ce rattachement, M. le gouverneur général de Madagascar s'est déclaré favorable à cette mesure et vient de faire connaître à mon département qu'il décidait l'inscription au budget de la colonie d'un premier crédit représentant la participation de Madagascar aux dépenses d'organisation de ces nouvelles dépendances de la Grande Ile.

Dans ces conditions, j'ai l'honneur de vous prier, monsieur le Président, de vouloir bien revêtir de votre signature le projet de décret ci-joint qui place les îles Saint-Paul et Amsterdam, les archipels Kerguelen et Crozet et la terre Adélie sous l'autorité du gouverneur général de Madagascar et confie à ce haut fonctionnaire le soin d'organiser, sous le contrôle de mon département, l'administration effective de ces territoires.

Je vous prie d'agréer, etc.,

Le ministre des colonies,
DALADIER.

Le Président de la République française,
Vu le sénatus-consulte du 3 mai, 1854;
Sur le rapport du ministre des colonies,
Décrète :

Art. 1^{er}.—Les îles Saint-Paul et Amsterdam, les archipels Kerguelen et Crozet et la terre Adélie sont rattachés au gouvernement général de Madagascar et constituent l'une des dépendances administratives de cette colonie.

Art. 2.—Des arrêtés du gouverneur général de Madagascar soumis à l'approbation du ministre des colonies fixeront les conditions d'application du présent décret.

Art. 3.—Le ministre des colonies est chargé de l'exécution du présent décret qui sera publié aux Journaux Officiels de la République française et de la colonie de Madagascar et inséré au Bulletin des lois et au Bulletin officiel du ministère des colonies.

Fait à Paris, le 21 novembre, 1924.

sector 90-160 E. Question what action should be taken as regards any French claim extending beyond Adélie Land as above defined, depends, of course, upon area claimed, and steps will be taken to ascertain limits of region to which France considers herself entitled. It has, however, to be borne in mind that it would be very hard to frame any criterion of validity which should restrict French claim while not affecting those of this country, and that, if we should seek to restrict territorial claims to actual extent of coastline sighted by each particular discoverer, we should weaken our claim to Graham Land where majority of coastline has been discovered by explorers of other nations.

Further telegram will be sent as soon as extent of territory claimed by France is known.—AMERY.

SIR,

Downing Street, 23rd February, 1925.

WITH reference to your Secret letter of the 6th of January,* regarding the question of the assertion of British rights over the Antarctic regions, I am directed by Mr. Secretary Amery to transmit to you, to be laid before Mr. Secretary Chamberlain, a copy of a further telegram† on this subject from the Governor-General of the Commonwealth of Australia, together with a copy of a telegram‡ which has been sent to him in reply to this telegram and to his previous telegram of the 4th of December.§

2. The concurrence of Mr. Chamberlain and of the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty in the terms of this reply was obtained semi-officially prior to its despatch.

3. Since that telegram was despatched Mr. Amery has seen the French Decree and the explanatory memorandum of the 21st of November last.¶ The Decree differs from the previous Decree of the 27th of March‡ in referring to "la terre Adélie" instead of "la terre Adélie ou Wilkes," and the memorandum refers to "les parties du continent antarctique reconnues par nos navigateurs." It seems possible therefore that the French claim does not in fact extend beyond the sector sighted and charted by D'Urville in 1840. Mr. Amery would, however, be glad if His Majesty's Ambassador at Paris could be requested to ascertain, in such manner as Mr. Chamberlain may think most appropriate, the precise coastal limits to which the claim on which the decree is based extends. This form of inquiry will have the advantage of conveying that it is the assumption of His Majesty's Government that the French Government claim only Adélie Land in the narrowest sense, and as a coastal strip, and that no claim is being advanced to any great depth of "hinterland."

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 4th March, 1925.

WITH reference to your letter of the 23rd ultimo relative to British and French territorial claims in the Antarctic regions, I am directed by Mr. Secretary Chamberlain to observe that upon reconsideration of the matter he is disposed to doubt whether the best method of procedure will be to approach the French Government and inquire the precise coastal limits of the territory which they claim. It would be necessary to approach the French Government with an official inquiry in writing, since nothing but a reply in the same form would be a valid statement, which could be quoted in future; and such action on the part of His Majesty's Government might well lead the French Government to increase the limits of their claim, if only as a precautionary measure.

2. It seems to Mr. Chamberlain that in many respects it would be preferable for His Majesty's Government themselves to define their claim on the assumption that the claim thus defined does not include Adélie Land, and to negotiate with the French Government if and when the latter protest. It would, of course, be necessary to consult the Australian Government fully and frankly and to warn them that such definition would be provisional only and that the claim might have subsequently to be adjusted with the French Government.

3. If Mr. Secretary Amery concurs, I am to request that the telegram to the Australian Government, which will necessarily be of a highly confidential nature, may be communicated to Mr. Chamberlain before despatch.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, to be laid before Your Ministers, the accompanying copy of a note from the Norwegian Minister relating to territorial interests in the Antarctic.

Enclosure in No. 26.

(No. 30/1925.)

Norwegian Legation, London.

24th February, 1925.

SIR,

IT has come to the notice of the Norwegian Government that the British Government by "Order in Council" of July 30, 1923, has declared all islands and territories between the 160th degree of East Longitude and the 150th degree of West Longitude, which are situated south of the 60th degree of South Latitude, to be a British settlement under the name of the Ross Dependency, and that the administrative authority as regards the said settlement has been vested in the Governor of New Zealand, who is to be also the Governor of the new Dependency.

In view of the said Order in Council I have the honour, acting under instructions from my Government, to call your attention to the fact that although, as regards certain provisions, it does not at the present moment appear quite clear to my Government what the Order implies, my Government cannot overlook the fact that the annexation in question may have the effect of jeopardizing present or future Norwegian interests and rights.

In this connexion my Government have requested me to point out to you that they take it for granted:—

(1) That, apart from such islands which may be situated within territorial waters of Victoria Land and Edward VII's Land, the annexation is meant to comprise such islands only the existence of which is at present known and which have been discovered by British citizens or by expeditions under the British flag.

(2) That the southern boundaries of the Dependency—of which nothing is said in the Order in Council referred to—and its eastern boundaries south of Edward VII's Land, are meant to be drawn in such a way as not to make the annexation comprise any part of the territory immediately circumjacent to the South Pole, which, as will be known, was taken possession of in the name of the King of Norway by Captain Ronald Amundsen in December, 1911, under the name of Haakon VII's Plateau, nor to comprise the territories on both sides of Captain Amundsen's route to the South Pole south of the said Edward VII's Land and including i.a., Queen Maud's Range.

My Government have instructed me to add that while it is not their intention at the present time to claim sovereignty to the territories referred to under (2) above, they consider that the said discovery and annexation constitute a valid basis for a claim of priority to acquire such territories whenever the requirements of International law as to effective occupation of a new territory shall have been fulfilled.

SIR,

Downing Street, 29th May, 1925.

WITH reference to your Secret letter of the 23rd January* regarding British and French territorial claims in the Antarctic regions, I am directed by Mr. Secretary Amery to transmit to you, to be laid before the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, the enclosed copy of a letter† from the Foreign Office, from which it will be seen that upon reconsideration of the matter Mr. Chamberlain is disposed to doubt whether the best method of procedure will be to approach the French Government and inquire the precise coastal limits of the territory which they claim, and that it seems to him that in many respects it will be preferable for His Majesty's Government themselves to define their claim on the assumption that the claim thus defined does not include "Adélie Land" and to negotiate with the French Government if and when the latter protest.

2. Upon further careful consideration of all the circumstances, Mr. Amery is inclined to concur in Mr. Chamberlain's view, and as a preliminary to further discussion he would be glad if Their Lordships would cause, at their early convenience, a memorandum to be prepared defining the geographical limits of the maximum area, not already annexed to the British Dominions, in the whole Antarctic region exclusive of "Adélie Land" which can now be reasonably annexed. The question of the form of annexation and of the part, or parts, of the British Empire by which the area to be annexed would best be administered are matters which will require further consideration in consultation with the Commonwealth and probably the New Zealand Government. But the first step would appear to be for His Majesty's Government to decide what is the maximum extent of area which can reasonably be claimed.

SIR,

Government House, Wellington, 7th May, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to inform you that my Ministers advise me that they have perused a letter, dated 10th October, 1924, from the Admiralty to the Secretary of the Navy Board, Wellington, relative to the French claim to Adélie Land.

2. With regard to the French Decree of the 27th March, 1924,* relative to the Crozet and other Islands in the Southern Ocean, Ministers state that during the 1923-24 whaling season in the Ross Sea Dependency it was established that numbers of commercially profitable whales entered the territorial waters of the Ross Dependency at its western longitudinal boundary and that during the present season (1924-25) operations were commenced off shore in the vicinity of Cape Cotter, South Victoria Land, and were successful in intercepting whales which had approached from that boundary.

3. From the foregoing, Ministers think it may be assumed that a profitable whaling industry may exist westward of the Meridian of 160° East Longitude, which is the western boundary of the Ross Dependency. They therefore ask me to bring the information under your notice as indicating the desirability of extending the western boundary of the Ross Dependency westward beyond the Meridian of 150° East Longitude, if occasion should arise to enable this extension to be achieved.

SIR, Admiralty, S.W. 1, 15th July, 1925.
WITH reference to your letter of the 29th May last,† and to previous correspondence regarding British and French territorial claims in the Antarctic regions and requesting particulars of the geographical limits of the maximum area, not already annexed to the British Dominions, in the whole Antarctic region exclusive of "Adélie Land" which can now be reasonably annexed, I am commanded by My Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty to forward the following observations for the information of the Secretary of State for the Colonies.

My Lords are of opinion that, in defining their claim, His Majesty's Government should base it on the fact that the land has been discovered by British explorers, without taking into consideration the continuity or otherwise of such land with other land not claimed.

The areas outside the Falkland Island Dependency and the Ross Sea Dependency, which My Lords suggest can reasonably be claimed on the above basis are the Caird Coast, Coats Land, Enderby Land, Kemp Land, Queen Mary Land, Wilkes Land, King George V. Land and Oates Land. These areas could be described as follows:—

Coats Land, lying between longitudes 20°W. and 17°W., i.e., a continuation to the Eastward of that Portion now included in the area constituted a dependency of the Falkland Islands.

Wilkes Land, lying between longitudes 131°E. and 137°E. (i.e., up to the West Limit of the Coastline of Adélie Land discovered by D'Urville in 1840).

King George V. and Oates Land from 142°E. (i.e., the East Limit of the Coastline of Adélie Land discovered by D'Urville in 1840) to 160°E., or the western boundary of the Ross Sea Dependency.

The French claim to Adélie or Wilkes Land if it is confined to that part which was discovered and charted by D'Urville in 1840 lies between approximately 142°E. and 137°E.

A clear view of these lands and their limits is shown on Chart "A" attached to the monograph,‡ entitled "Territorial Claims in the Antarctic Regions," forwarded to the Colonial Office with Admiralty letter M. 25456 of 10th October, 1919.§

A copy of this letter has been sent to the Foreign Office.

I am, &c.,
CHARLES WALKER.

DOMINIONS OFFICE to ADMIRALTY.

SIR, Downing Street, 18th July, 1925.
WITH reference to the letter from this Department of the 29th of May* and previous correspondence regarding British and French claims in the Antarctic regions, I am directed by Mr. Secretary Amery to transmit to you a copy of a despatch† which has been received from the Governor-General of New Zealand. A copy of the letter from the Admiralty to the Secretary of the Navy Board, Wellington, to which reference is made in this despatch, has been obtained semi-officially from the Admiralty.

2. The Admiralty letter to the Navy Board (which, it is observed, is in similar terms to the Admiralty letter to the Colonial Office of the 10th of October‡), deals with a large question of policy which is at the present time receiving the careful consideration of His Majesty's Government and with regard to which it will be necessary to address the New Zealand and Commonwealth Governments officially as soon as the examination of the question by His Majesty's Government is concluded. The subject is clearly one which, in accordance with the rules of procedure laid down in the Admiralty memorandum,§ a copy of which was enclosed in Admiralty letter of the 2nd December, 1919,|| should only be dealt with by correspondence through the ordinary official channels, and Mr. Amery feels compelled to add that he thinks it particularly undesirable that the nature of inter-departmental correspondence such as that referred to in paragraph 11 of the letter to the New Zealand Navy Board should be communicated to Dominion Governments. The Secretary of State appreciates the desire of the Lords Commissioners to furnish the Commonwealth and New Zealand Navy Boards with any item of naval intelligence which it would be of interest or advantage to them to know from the naval point of view, but he feels sure that, on consideration, Their Lordships will agree with him that it is important that this direct communication of intelligence should be confined to matters of purely naval interest, and that very serious difficulties are likely to ensue unless the rules laid down in the Admiralty memorandum are strictly adhered to.

3. In this connexion I am to invite reference to the letter from this Department of even date¶ relating to the visit of the United States fleet to Australian and New Zealand waters.

4. Mr. Amery would not propose to send any reply to Sir C. Fergusson's despatch pending further consideration of the general question of policy in the Antarctic in the light of the memorandum which Their Lordships were asked in the letter under reference to cause to be prepared.

I am, &c.,
C. T. DAVIS.

SIR, Downing Street, S.W. 1, 29th August, 1925.
WITH reference to Colonial Office letter of 29th May last, I am directed by Mr. Secretary Amery to state that he understands that Mr. Secretary Chamberlain has been furnished with a copy of Admiralty letter to the Colonial Office of the 15th July†† forwarding the observations of the Lords Commissioners as to the areas in the Antarctic outside Adélie Land which can reasonably be annexed as British territory.

2. As Mr. Chamberlain is aware, Mr. Amery is very anxious to communicate the views of His Majesty's Government in this matter to the Governments of the Commonwealth and New Zealand with as little delay as possible. In this connexion

* No. 27. † No. 28. ‡ 48411/24: not printed; it discussed the bearing of the French Decree of the 27th March, 1924. § No. 161 in Dominions No. 72. || 68804/19: not printed; it enclosed a copy of the memorandum in question. ¶ 30783/25: not printed; it dealt with a similar case of correspondence between the Admiralty and the Navy Board.  See No. 27. †† No. 29.

I am to enclose an Australian newspaper cutting* which shows that public interest in this question is being evinced in Australia and that the Commonwealth Government are being pressed to assert the Australian claims. I am also to invite reference to Colonial Office letter of 20th July† enclosing a copy of a despatch from the Governor-General of New Zealand‡ which indicates the concern of that Government in the matter. There are, however, certain questions arising out of the Admiralty letter on which it appears necessary for His Majesty's Government to arrive at a decision before any further communication is made to the Commonwealth and New Zealand Governments, and as to these Mr. Amery would be glad to be furnished with Mr. Chamberlain's observations at his early convenience.

(1) Whether it is agreed that the various areas mentioned in the Admiralty letter can now be treated as British Territory.

(2) If so, whether there would be any objection to the action to be taken with the above object extending to the whole coast (with the exception of Adélie Land) between the two extreme points mentioned in the Admiralty letter, viz., between 160° E. and 20° W. (moving westwards).

(3) Whatever the coastal area or areas it be decided to treat as British territory, whether the action to be taken should extend to all land within a sector or sectors stretching down to the South Pole, following the precedent of the Ross Dependency.

(4) If so, whether it would be necessary to treat the French claim to Adélie Land as having the same Southward Extent.

(5) Whether, on the assumption that it is desirable to assert the British claim without reference to any foreign Government, it would be possible and proper to accept for the definition of Adélie Land the limits, 137°-142° E., mentioned in the Admiralty letter.

(6) Whether there is any method of publicly asserting the British claim pending arrangements for the administration of the area or areas in question. It will be remembered that, in the case of the Ross Dependency and the Falkland Islands Dependency, action proceeded by way of instruments placing these areas under the Government of New Zealand and the Government of the Falkland Islands respectively. Instruments of this nature might in the present case take some time to settle, and indeed it might be an advantage for there to be an interval before the actual issue of any formal instrument or instruments providing for administration, in which to see what attitude the French Government adopt in the matter.

3. When His Majesty's Government have arrived at a decision on these points, it will be necessary to consult the Canadian Government as well as the Commonwealth and New Zealand Governments with regard to the conclusions reached and the action proposed, in view of the fact that the Canadian claim to sovereignty of all lands north of the Canadian mainland as far as the North Pole has now become a matter of practical interest.

I am, &c.,
C. T. DAVIS.

MEMORANDUM.

BRITISH POLICY IN THE ANTARCTIC.

NOTE.—This memorandum was prepared merely to serve as a brief historical résumé of the papers relating to this subject and the geographical statements which occur in the correspondence quoted below should not be accepted as authoritative. For detailed geographical information see the monograph on "Territorial claims in the Antarctic Regions" (Dominions No. 99) and Admiralty Memorandum on the validity of French territorial claims in the Antarctic. §

THE policy of extending and asserting British control in the Antarctic was decided upon in 1920, see Secret despatches of 6th February, 1920, || to Commonwealth of Australia and New Zealand, in paragraph 7 of which it was stated:—

* From Melbourne Argus, 4th August, 1925: not reprinted. † 26084/25: not printed; it enclosed a copy of No. 28. ‡ No. 28. § No. 37. || No. 39 in Dominions No. 75.

"His Majesty's Government have, therefore, come to the conclusions that it is desirable that the whole of the Antarctic should ultimately be included within the British Empire, and that, while the time has not yet arrived that a claim to all the continental territories should be put forward publicly, a definite and consistent policy should be followed of extending and asserting British control with the object of ultimately making it complete."

As to which of the partners in the Empire should be entrusted with the control of the new territory it was proposed that the matter should be discussed between the Commonwealth and New Zealand Governments.

The action between that date and March 1921 is recorded in the Memorandum Dominions No. 78, from which it will be seen that it was agreed that the Australian and New Zealand Governments should have spheres divided by the meridian 160° E.

In June, 1922, an application for Whaling licences for the Ross Sea was received, and this was seized upon as an opportunity for a definite move in respect of the New Zealand sphere.

After consultation with the New Zealand Government (the Commonwealth Government being kept informed) it was decided to grant a Whaling licence and to issue an Order in Council providing for the Government of the area. The licence was issued on the 21st December, 1922, and the Order in Council on the 30th July, 1923. The area was named the Ross Dependency, and is described in the Order in Council in the following terms:—

"That part of His Majesty's Dominions in the Antarctic Seas, which comprises all the islands and territories between the 160th degree of East Longitude and the 150th degree of West Longitude which are situated south of the 60th degree of South Latitude. . . ."

It was laid down in the Order in Council that the Governor-General of New Zealand for the time being should be the Governor of the Ross Dependency, and instructions were conveyed by a despatch of the 9th August, 1923,* to the effect that the Governor of the Ross Dependency should be guided by the advice of the New Zealand Executive Council in the execution of the powers and authorities vested in him by the Order.

The Commonwealth Government are desirous that action should now be taken in connexion with what has been regarded as the Australian sphere, and it appears from the telegram† received from the Governor-General that they have been moved to stir in the matter by the recent French action in regard to "Adélie or Wilkes" Land.

The position with regard to the French claims in this region is not very clear, and it may be desirable to give a brief résumé of the papers dealing with the matter. In December, 1911, His Majesty's Ambassador in Paris was instructed to inquire of the French Government whether that Government claimed "Wilkes Land," which was referred to in the Foreign Office note as:—

"the name given generally to that part of the continent lying between Enderby Land in about Longitude 50° E. and the western limits of South Victoria Land situated approximately in Longitude 160° E."

The French reply (16th April, 1912) stated that the lands were taken possession of in the name of France in 1840, and that the Government of the Republic had no intention of renouncing its rights over them, but the note did not define the area claimed by France.

The question of the limits of the territory was further examined in 1913, in connexion with the naming of certain land discovered by Dr. Mawson, and on the 29th March, 1913, His Majesty's Ambassador addressed the French Government in the following terms:—

"I have the honour to acquaint you, under instructions from His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, that it is intended to give the name of 'King George V. Land' to a tract of land in the Antarctic region recently discovered by Dr. Mawson, and that a formal submission is being made to the King, requesting His Majesty's authority to take the necessary steps to give effect forthwith to this intention. The tract of territory in question lies to the north of Victoria Land, and extends from about 65° to 75° South latitude and about 150° to 160° East longitude. His Majesty's Government are aware from the note from Your Excellency's * 38574/23: not printed; its effect was as stated in the text. † No. 18 in Dominions No. 93.

Department of April 16th last, which I duly brought to their knowledge, of the claims of the French Government in respect of the territories in the Antarctic region known under the names of Wilkes Land and Adélie Land. I am to add that His Majesty's Government understand that the extent of the land named by Commodore Dumont d'Urville, as seen, to have been about 150 miles, lying between 66° and 67° South latitude and 136° and 147° longitude, so that the district now to be named will not touch on such French claims."

No reply was received from the French Government to this note.

Correspondence took place in 1915 in connexion with an application for a Whaling licence for Commonwealth Bay, a bay opening upon the D'Urville Sea, which was discovered and so named by Sir Douglas Mawson during the Expedition of 1911-1914. In a letter from the Foreign Office to the Colonial Office of the 30th April, 1915, the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs expressed the following view:—

"The limits of the French claims stated in this despatch,* on the authority of a Hobart paper in 1840, may perhaps actually exceed the limits of the French claims, and Sir E. Grey is uncertain whether His Majesty's Government can be considered bound by the terms of this despatch to accept any French claims which may be made within these limits. In any case the limits laid down appear to be geographically unsound, as may be seen from the maps in the Journal of the Royal Geographical Society for July to December, 1914 (Volume XLIV), inasmuch as from about longitude 143.45" to longitude 147E. the tract claimed is ocean, while between longitude 142 and 143E. there is a stretch of coast on Commonwealth Bay lying south of latitude 67, and, therefore, outside the French limits, including the site of Sir D. Mawson's Main Base. Moreover, it seems doubtful whether, on the basis of this map, it was really the intention of His Majesty's Government to annex, under the name of King George V. Land, only the tract east of longitude 150E., while the northern part of the British claim as communicated to the French Government also lies in the ocean."

So far as is known the French Government took no overt action to establish their claims until March, 1924. On the 26th March the French Ministry of Marine issued a decree including the following:—

"La terre Adélie ou Wilkes a été placée dans la zone de surveillance des bâtiments faisant partie des forces navales de l'Océan Pacifique."

And on the following day the French Colonial Office issued a decree of which the following is the first article:—

"Dans l'Archipel des Crozet et sur la terre Adélie ou Wilkes les droits miniers, le droit de chasse et le droit de pêche dans les eaux territoriales sont réservés aux Français."

TELEGRAM.

[Answered by Nos. 35 and 36.]

(Commonwealth of Australia.)
(New Zealand.)

My despatch 21st March.† Territorial interests in the Antarctic. Proposed to reply to Note from Norwegian Legation of 24th February‡ in following terms:—

Begin: His Majesty's Government have given most careful consideration to your Note of 24th February last on the subject of the Ross Dependency, and I have the honour to reply as follows, to the points specifically raised therein by the Norwegian Government:—

* The despatch to His Majesty's Ambassador at Paris on which the note to the French Government of the 29th March, 1913, was founded. † No. 26. ‡ Enclosure in No. 26.

With regard to point (1) in your Note, His Majesty's Government desire to observe that there is no coast or island known to exist within the Dependency which is not, indisputably, a British discovery, and that, except possibly in the region immediately northward of King Edward the Seventh Land, there seems to be no likelihood of any fresh discoveries of islands within the limits of the Dependency.

With regard to (2), no southern boundary of the Ross Dependency was specified in the Order in Council because the western and eastern boundaries mentioned in the Order, viz., the 160th degree of East Longitude and the 150th degree of West Longitude, meet at a point at the South Pole.

His Majesty's Government take note that it is not the intention of the Norwegian Government at the present time to claim sovereignty to the territories referred to under (2) of your Note, but while they most gladly bear their testimony to the value from the geographical and scientific points of view of the work performed by Captain Ronald Amundsen, they cannot admit that the facts referred to constitute a valid basis for a claim of the nature of that indicated in the last paragraph of your Note. The existence of the plateau on which the South Pole is situated had already been determined by the late Sir Ernest Shackleton, who, in January, 1909, reached a point on it less than 100 miles from the Pole itself, and on that occasion took formal possession of the plateau for Great Britain. Ends.

Please telegraph as soon as possible whether your Ministers concur.—AMERY.

COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 19th October, 1925.)

[Answered by No. 40.]

(No. 233.)

SIR, Governor-General's Office, Melbourne, 16th September, 1925.

WITH reference to your despatch dated 21st March, 1925, No. 97,* and to previous correspondence relative to the Antarctic, I have the honour to inform you that a deputation of members of the Australian National Research Council recently waited on my Prime Minister for the purpose of urging the British claims to that part of the Antarctic known as the Australian quadrant lying between meridian 90° east and 160° east. For this purpose the National Research Council prepared and printed a memorandum, a copy of which is enclosed herewith, setting forth its views on the whole subject.

It seems to my Ministers to be evident that any present claims to this part of the Antarctic must primarily be based on exploration work done by the nationals of the country claiming control. In this respect it will be observed that the memorandum referred to above lays stress on the fact that d'Urville's discovery of 1840 was restricted to a very small coastline of about 110 miles, of which nothing but a rough survey was made, and that no landing was made on the mainland. From that day till this no French exploration work has been carried out in the Australian sector of the Antarctic, and it is therefore apparent, even in the absence of any prior discovery by British subjects to which allusion is made in the communication from the Admiralty to the Commonwealth Navy Board, Melbourne, on 10th October of last year, that the French claim to-day is no stronger than it first was in 1840. So far as the Commonwealth Government is aware, the only attempts made since that date by France to keep alive her title to Adélie Land was the declaration made by Monsieur Poincaré in his note of 16th April, 1912, to His Majesty's Ambassador in Paris, and the two Decrees of 27th March and 21st November of last year.

The Commonwealth Government holds firmly that any efforts made by France to extend her control over regions to which she cannot adduce a good title by effective discovery, accompanied by exploration work, should be most strongly resisted, and it believes that this view is shared equally by His Majesty's Government.

* No. 26.

A further point that is raised in the memorandum is that the control and administration of Arctic and Antarctic lands should be in the hands of those countries whose territories are situated nearest to them. The Commonwealth Government had already given some consideration to this idea, and, whilst my Ministers believe that it would be desirable to make this a recognized principle in dealing with Antarctic territories and territorial waters, and that it should be urged as strongly as possible, they recognize that difficulties will doubtless be encountered in securing the assent of France to its acceptance in the Antarctic. The Commonwealth Government is not aware in detail of the international position resulting from discovery and exploration of the quadrant adjoining the so-called Australian quadrant, but should the French Government be prepared to consider the application of the above-mentioned principle, it is apparent that France would receive control of a certain portion of this region to the north of which are situated Kerguelen Island, Crozet Island and Madagascar. My Ministers think it may be possible to obtain the surrender of the French claim to Adélie Land on this basis, and they would be favourable to this course.

The Commonwealth Government has given some consideration to the formal steps which it thinks might be taken to safeguard British rights in the Australian quadrant. One course of action which has occurred to it in this respect is that, as soon as the present indeterminate extent of the French claim is known with some degree of exactness, and it is found impossible to dispose of it in any manner, British control could be asserted in the customary manner by the issue of an Order in Council over the rest of the sector, leaving any further negotiations with the French Government to the future. It is recognized, however, that such a procedure is not altogether free from objection, and that it could only be adopted as a last resort. The question of securing the recognition of the Powers to British control of the Australian quadrant, with the exercise of such control by Australia, by conferring on their nationals equal economic and other rights to those enjoyed by British subjects, has also been considered by the Commonwealth Government, which, however, is not favourable to such a policy.

My Ministers desire me to add that in making these representations and suggestions they are, of course, actuated by the one desire of preventing the establishment by any other country of a considerable enclave in the Australian quadrant, and they believe that His Majesty's Government share equally in their anxiety, and will spare no efforts to achieve this purpose.

I have, &c.,
FORSTER,
Governor-General.

Enclosure in No. 34.

THE AUSTRALIAN NATIONAL RESEARCH COUNCIL.

Memorandum in re the "Australian Sector" of the Antarctic and the recent French claim to administer Adélie Land.

1. THE news recently published in the daily Press that France is claiming as a French possession Adélie Land, which is a portion of what may be called the Australian sector of the Antarctic Continent, has surprised and alarmed those who have the interests of Australia at heart and have followed the scientific and economic development of the Antarctic regions. The Australian National Research Council is convinced that the position thus created is one which calls for immediate action by the Commonwealth Government; for, failing such action, there is danger that Australia will lose not only Adélie Land, but all that much larger southern region, of which it is a part and which, on geographical and historical grounds, it is thought, should belong to Australia. The Council, therefore, respectfully urges for the consideration of the Commonwealth Government:—

- (i) That the French claim to administer Adélie Land should be challenged and the Australian claim to administer it formally established;
- (ii) That international sanction be sought for the administration by Australia of the whole of that part of the Antarctic Continent which lies between the meridians of 90 degrees E. and 160 degrees E.

In support of this recommendation, the Australian National Research Council has the honour to submit the following facts and matters for consideration:—

2. The public announcement of France's new claim was made by a Presidential Decree of 24th November, 1924. It specified the Indian Ocean Islands, the Crozets, Amsterdam, St. Paul and Kerguelen, which are outside of the Australian zone, and also Adélie Land, which lies to the south of Australia, on the Antarctic Continent, and proclaimed them as dependencies of Madagascar. This sudden display of interest in the Antarctic calls for special attention; for, though Adélie Land was first sighted and named by a French navigator, Dumont d'Urville, in 1840, it has received, as far as one can learn, no attention whatever from France since then, nor has France contributed to the later exploration of any neighbouring part of the Antarctic Continent in any way whatsoever.

The ostensible reason for the decree is the proposal to frame and administer laws regulating the exploitation of seals, whales and other life in the neighbouring seas. There is, indeed, urgent need for such action; but the more immediate question for consideration is whether France or Australia is the proper authority to take it.

French interest in Adélie Land has, no doubt reawakened owing to the great financial success which has resulted from the whaling and sealing operations in the portions of the Antarctic waters already under British control. A perusal of the "Report of the Interdepartmental Committee on Research and Development in the Dependencies of the Falkland Islands," London, April, 1920, leaves no doubt of the remunerative character of the whaling industry carried out from these Dependencies, which is greater than that of the rest of the world combined. Thirteen companies (two British, eleven Norwegian) caught 6,955 whales in the 1921-22 season, the landed value of the oil being £2,244,390. Indeed, so important have the fisheries become, that the British Government, at a cost of £300,000, has now equipped the ship "Discovery" to be employed under the Falkland Islands' administration in exploring the adjacent seas and coastlines, with a view to maintaining and extending the industry. Moreover, in the Ross Sea area, now a Dependency of New Zealand, a very successful whaling industry is already established and regulated by the New Zealand Government, which receive a substantial royalty on every barrel of oil won. That there is likely enough prospect of similar rewards to the west of Cape Adare is obvious; but, again, the immediate question is whether this is really the concern of France or of Australia.

3. As far as we are aware, international law does not lay down any general rule for deciding the ownership of uninhabited or savage lands. Only actual continuous occupation or exploitation seems to give a generally recognized claim. The raising of a national flag by first discoverers or later visitors does not, it appears, of itself ensure such recognition. Thus Captain Cook discovered New Caledonia and the New Hebrides and hoisted the British flag there long before they became French possessions; and other cases might be cited.

4. But, in 1886, the Canadian Government applied a new principle in the Arctic regions, which does not appear to have been disputed there, and which seems equally applicable also to the Antarctic, where, indeed, it is already partly in operation. It was announced officially in that year that all unoccupied lands already discovered or to be discovered by future exploration, situated northwards of Canada as far as the North Pole and lying within the meridians of longitude bounding Canada itself to east and west, were to be Canadian territory. There has been universal recognition of Canada's claim. The principle obviously commends itself, for in such cases the most closely adjacent civilized Government is likely to be best placed and best informed and also most interested in establishing a good administration. The same principle has been followed elsewhere in the Arctic, as witness the recent assignment of Spitzbergen to Norway and the recognition of Russia's claim to Wrangel Island. And, in the Antarctic, the establishments of the Falkland Island Dependency under British rule and of the Ross Dependency, placed under New Zealand (July 30, 1923), are also entirely in accord with the Canadian principle. These two are, as yet, the only portions of the Antarctic which have been definitely disposed of.

5. The term "Australian Quadrant" has long been applied by geographers to that quarter of the Antarctic region which lies between 90 degrees E. and the 180 degrees meridian. It might more properly have been called the "Australasian Quadrant," for both Australia and New Zealand lie immediately to the north of it. But the recent creation of the Ross Dependency (which extends from 160 degrees E. to 150 degrees W.) under the New Zealand Government has now disposed properly of a part of the "Australian Quadrant," and there remains what we may now call the "Australian Sector" (90 degrees E. to 160 degrees E.), which lies entirely to the south of Australia itself.

6. Adélie Land lies well within this area, with King George V. Land to the east and Wilkes Land to the west. Its extent is not exactly defined, but its coastline measures not more than 150 miles, that of the whole Australian Sector being over 2,000 miles. It is thus only a small, though an important, part of the territory, which, we maintain, should be controlled by Australia. Its control by another Power not only would create an immediate breach of continuity there, but would form a dangerous precedent that might possibly lead later to the loss of the whole.

7. The French claim has no geographical justification whatever, as a glance at the remoteness of Madagascar, her nearest colony, shows, and, historically, it rests on a very inadequate foundation. Geographically, France has better claim to the Crozets, St. Paul, Amsterdam and Kerguelen, which are also specified in the edict, for they lie far to the west and might, by stretching the Canadian principle, be regarded, together with a suitable part of the Antarctic coast, as appertaining to Madagascar and, therefore, to France. But here, of course, South Africa might interpose also an even stronger claim.

It appears that the French claim to Adélie Land can be based only on the fact that its coast was first sighted in 1840 by the Frenchman, Dumont d'Urville, who gave it its name and raised the French flag on a small, adjacent, rocky island, taking possession in the name of his country, as was the fashion of explorers in those days. He did not land on the mainland, nor make any detailed survey of the coast; he merely sighted about 110 miles of it, made a sketch survey, and then headed northwards. From that day to this the French have not visited Adélie Land, nor has any step been taken by France to follow up d'Urville's act until the edict of last November. The French expeditions of 1903 and 1908, under Charcot, operated in the American Quadrant of the Antarctic.

8. The Australian claim, on the other hand, is supported strongly by both geographical and historical considerations.

Geographically, Adélie Land lies due south of Adelaide, and is only 1,467 nautical miles distant from Hobart, nearer, in fact, to Hobart than Hobart is to Perth. It is, indeed, but a short voyage there from Southern Australian ports, and there is no other land between. Macquarie Island, to the north of the eastern border of the sector, is already Australian and would be a valuable half-way house for administrative operations.

Historically, the chief fact is that the Australian Antarctic Expedition (1911-14), under Sir Douglas Mawson, which had for its object the further exploration of the Australian Sector, made its main base in Adélie Land. It added a thousand miles of coastline to the map, and collected physical and biological scientific information over a wide field. The Adélie Land of d'Urville was sledged over and delineated for the first time, and, in the maps compiled by the expedition, new territory, unseen by d'Urville, was charted and still called Adélie Land in his honour. Adélie Land, as it now appears on the map, is, therefore, extended considerably beyond the short coastline that d'Urville saw for a few hours in 1840. Sir Douglas Mawson raised the British and Australian flags and, in the name of his country, took possession of the mainland itself, which d'Urville was never successful in doing. The elaboration and publication of the scientific results of this expedition are still in progress, and the printed volumes continue to issue from the New South Wales Government Printing Office. The whole work of the expedition, which involved some loss of life and much personal sacrifice, and of the publication of results, has cost Australia some £70,000.

No other country has contributed since 1840 to our knowledge of Adélie Land, or, indeed, of any other part of the Australian Sector of the Antarctic. A part of its coast further to the west, however, was sighted by the American navigator, Wilkes, whose voyage was contemporaneous with d'Urville's. Incidentally, it may be pointed out that, if the French claim to the one part be allowed, America could, if it wished, put forward a claim to the other, thus still further cutting into the territory that should be Australia's by right of its geographical position and its exploration work.

It is noteworthy also that, even apart from Mawson's Australian expedition, Australia has taken active part in many of the chief British Antarctic explorations, and has thus done much more to extend the knowledge of the regions than has France. Thus a Melbourne resident, Mr. H. J. Bull, in 1895, visited Cape Adare and the Ross Sea, and to him and his party is due the honour of first setting human foot on any part of the Antarctic mainland. Again, in 1898, Mr. C. E. Borchgrevink sailed from Australia, and wintered at Cape Adare, and his party was the first ever to spend a winter on the Antarctic Continent. Australian men and money contributed largely to the work of both of Scott's and both of Shackleton's expeditions; and it was Australian members of the first Shackleton expedition who first ascended Mount Erebus and first visited and located the South Magnetic Pole.

9. While, for the above reasons, the strength of Australia's claim must be admitted, it is possible that some may doubt the existence of sufficient practical reasons for pressing it. There are such reasons, however, and they are weighty. In the first place, it may be pointed out that the early Dutch explorers condemned Australia as a barren wilderness. It should be remembered also that a similar mistaken doubt prevented the British Government from purchasing Alaska when it was offered by Russia and that the United States, with greater faith in the future, stepped in and afterwards reaped a rich reward from the exploitation of that frozen northern land. No one knows yet what mineral potentialities may lie in Adélie Land and other parts of the Australian Sector of the Antarctic, though it is known that coal exists there. On the other hand, there is very definite prospect of wealth in the neighbouring seas, as the facts already mentioned (in paragraph 2) about the phenomenal success of whaling in other Antarctic waters clearly show. The Falkland Islands administration and New Zealand already profit largely by the industry. France obviously aspires to do so. Why should not Australia?

Another profitable economic development may arise from the establishment of fur farming; for the Antarctic coast, with its natural refrigeration and unlimited supply of food at next to no cost, offers an apparently ideal locality for this very valuable modern industry.

But there are other reasons which should weigh, based partly on faith in the future of science and its economic applications and partly on a very proper national sentiment. As to the former, the progress of meteorological science, of wireless communication and of aviation, foreshadows results that may render the possession of these southern lands specially important. And, as to the latter, it seems not unreasonable to hope that Australia, which already extends its government over such a wide range of latitude and climate, will go still further to the south and thus definitely claim control from the Equator to the Pole.

On behalf of the Australian National Research Council,

D. ORME MASSON,
President.

MEMORANDUM.

ON THE VALIDITY OF THE FRENCH TERRITORIAL CLAIMS IN THE ANTARCTIC.

That land of continental character and large extent exists in the Antarctic is an indisputable fact; but it is still somewhat uncertain whether the various portions of coastline which have been discovered are parts of one huge unbroken land-mass, or of two or more island-continents, comparable in size, say, with Australia. Assuming, however, as a provisional hypothesis, that there is a single continent with, perhaps, detached islands of considerable extent, the following table shows the dates and places at which the principal discoveries of its coastline have been made:—

1. 1820. Bransfield (British): Trinity Land.
2. 1821. Palmer (American): Palmer Land (extension of 1).
3. 1821. Bellingshausen (Russian): Alexander I. Land (extension of 2).
4. 1831. Biscoe (British): Enderby Land.
5. 1833. Kemp (British): Kemp Land (extension of 4).
- *6. 1840. D'Urville (French): Adélie Land.
7. 1840. Wilkes (American): Knox' High Land and Budd's High Land (Doubtful) (extension of 6).
- *8. 1841. Ross (British): Victoria Land (extension of 6).
9. 1904. Bruce (British): Coats Land.
10. 1912. Filchner (German): Luitpold Land (extension of 9).
11. 1912-1913. Mawson (British): King George V. Land and Queen Mary Land (extensions of 6).
12. 1916. Shackleton (British): Caird Coast (extension of 9).

The asterisk (*) indicates that formal possession was taken of the land in question.

It will be apparent, from the above list, that the outline of the Antarctic Continent has been only gradually mapped-out (it is still largely incomplete). Moreover, except in the cases of the Falkland Islands and Ross Sea Dependencies, a claim to ownership could only be based on discovery, with or without a formal taking-possession, since no other part of the continent has been "effectively occupied."

With regard to claims 1 to 5 above, also, another element of uncertainty is introduced, since 2 and 3 are only extensions of 1, and 5 of 4, while in the case of both 1 and 4 it is not absolutely certain (although, in the light of present knowledge, very probable) that these portions of land are connected with the main body of the Antarctic Continent.

It may, therefore, be plausibly argued by France that the French claim, No. 6, is the first indisputable claim to land which, beyond any doubt, constitutes part of the Antarctic Continent.

There is, of course, no doubt that D'Urville, even after he had sighted Adélie Land, had no suspicion of the enormous extent of the Antarctic Continent. He spent but a few days inside the Antarctic Circle, and succeeded merely in charting a stretch of coastline about 120 miles in length, extending from latitude $66\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}\text{S.}$, longitude 137°E. to latitude 67°S. , longitude 142°E.

Here, it may be as well to remark upon possible American claims in this region.

Contemporaneously with D'Urville, the American Exploring Expedition under Lieutenant C. Wilkes, U.S.N., was also at work in the Adélie Land region. Vessels of the two squadrons, in fact, actually sighted each other, but did not communicate. As stated in detail in the monograph "Territorial Claims in the Antarctic Regions," prepared by the Hydrographic Department of the Admiralty in 1919 (Dominions No. 99), Wilkes claimed the discovery of a tract of land extending, approximately, from longitude 158°E. to longitude 95°E. along the parallel of 66°S. , including D'Urville's Adélie land and extending for upwards of 1,500 miles. It has been urged on many occasions, by American geographers, that as his easternmost discoveries (he ran from east to west) antedated those of D'Urville, the discovery of the Antarctic Continent should be attributed to him.

Subsequent exploration, however, has shown that Wilkes' own "land," except in one or two doubtful cases, is non-existent. The only portion of his discoveries whose existence is indisputable is Adélie Land, which he only sighted some days after D'Urville (even allowing for the fact that D'Urville used a date one day earlier than Wilkes). His claim in consequence fails, and could, if ever officially raised, be successfully rebutted.

The French claim, however, stands on a very different footing. Considered per se (i.e., without reference to the Antarctic Continent as a whole), it is quite indisputable. D'Urville undoubtedly sighted land where no land was previously known, or suspected, to exist—he charted it with reasonable accuracy (the chart being published within a very short time of the discovery) and he took formal possession of his discovery in the name of France.

In spite, therefore, of the total absence of effective occupation (a contention which might equally be raised against almost any territorial claim in any part of the Antarctic) the French claim to Adélie Land itself is indisputable. But, from the 1911 correspondence quoted in the historical memorandum prepared in the Dominions Office in August, 1925, it seems not unlikely that France now desires to assert sovereignty over all or any land lying between Enderby Land and Victoria Land, an extent of some 2,500 miles (partly unexplored and uncharted), on the strength of D'Urville's having discovered and taken possession of a comparatively small portion of coastline in that region (a region which, it may be noted, constitutes the only extensive portion of the known coastline of the Antarctic Continent which has not already been appropriated by this country).

If such a claim were once admitted (waiving the point of its preposterous nature in asserting the ownership of land yet to be discovered), it would be fraught with the most serious consequences to the Empire. If D'Urville's taking possession of Adélie Land be held to constitute an effective French claim to King George V Land, Queen Mary Land, Enderby Land, and the intervening region, it must also be held to constitute an even more effective claim to Victoria Land and, presumably, King Edward VII Land (i.e. to the whole of the Ross Sea Dependency). There may be some doubt as to whether the lands westward of Adélie Land are actually part of the same continent—but there can be no doubt whatever that Adélie Land and Victoria Land constitute one land-mass.

Such a claim would, in fact, in view of the peculiar circumstances of the case, raise in an aggravated form a question to which the best parallel is the discovery of Australia. Supposing, for example, that the Dutch vessel "Duyfken" (which explored the coast of the Gulf of Carpentaria in 1606, and was, so far as is known, the first vessel to sight the coast of Australia) were held to have established a valid claim, by right of prior discovery, to the whole of Australia; would such a claim have been tolerated by other Powers, either then or thereafter? The majority of the coastline of Australia is undoubtedly Dutch by discovery—the "Duyfken" and Tasman (1644) on the North Coast, Hartogs (1616) on the West Coast, and the "Gulden Zeepard" (1627) and Tasman (1642) on the South Coast, discovered between them at least three-fourths of the Australian coastline, but it does not appear that their discoveries were ever held to constitute a valid claim to the whole of the island-continent. This was reserved for the effective occupation of a portion of the territory by Great Britain.

Without more definite information as to the limits of the region which France considers herself entitled to claim, and to which she attaches the name of "Adélie or Wilkes Land," it is difficult, if not impossible, to decide what course of action should be pursued by this country. The question is, to some extent, one of nomenclature. Until the baseless character of most of Wilkes' discoveries of land was definitely established by the Mawson expedition of 1911-1914, the term "Wilkes land" was held to describe the whole extent of his (mostly mythical) "Antarctic Continent" referred to above, including Adélie land. It is now used to denote a stretch of coastline lying to the westward of Adélie Land, and of approximately the same size. This was discovered by Mawson, and could not have been seen by Wilkes.

In the light, therefore, of present-day knowledge and nomenclature, it is incorrect to speak of "Adélie or Wilkes land": the terms are not synonymous. Furthermore, it would be not only incorrect but impolitic to refer to the area claimed by France as "Wilkes land," and not "Adélie land," since by so doing France would be afforded an opportunity of claiming, indirectly, any actual land lying within the limits of the unreal "Antarctic Continent" reported by Wilkes, or even any lying within the far too generous limits laid down in 1911 by His Majesty's Ambassador at Paris (see No. 32). Care should therefore be taken that, in any correspondence, the expression "Wilkes land" is not used to designate anything except the territory recently discovered by Mawson (see above), and that the French use of the expression "Adélie or Wilkes land" is not tacitly accepted.

In any event, it would be very hard to frame any criterion of validity for the various claims enumerated above which should restrict the French claim, while not affecting those of this country. If, for example, it were urged that, in view of the enormous extent of the Antarctic Continent, and the difficulty of establishing the homogeneous nature of isolated strips presumed to form part of its perimeter, territorial claims should, in general, be restricted to the actual extent of coastline sighted by each particular discoverer, such a contention, while undoubtedly restricting the French claim to a short and commercially unimportant strip of coastline, and greatly strengthening our position in the Ross Sea Dependency (where the whole extent of the coastline is undoubtedly British by discovery) would considerably weaken our claim to the Falkland Islands Dependency (Graham Land), where the majority of the coastline has been discovered by the explorers of other nations.

The following conclusions appear to arise from the foregoing considerations:—

1. The French claim to Adélie Land, per se (by which is meant the coastline actually sighted and charted by D'Urville in 1840) is indisputable; and, so long as this is maintained by that country, it is impracticable, without risk of a diplomatic rupture, to assert British sovereignty over the sector 90°E.-160°E. as urged by the Australian Government. For the same reason, it might be impolitic to assert British sovereignty over King George V Land or Wilkes Land, since these are immediately contiguous with Adélie Land and undoubtedly form part of the same land-mass.

2. The French claim to "Adélie or Wilkes Land" (by which term is understood, following the definition given in the diplomatic correspondence of 1911, all land lying between Enderby Land and Victoria Land) is on quite a different footing. It is disputable for several reasons of fact: and, from considerations of policy, quite inadmissible by this country. If seriously preferred (which is at present doubtful), the following counter-moves might be made by this country:—

(a) To proclaim British sovereignty over Enderby Land and Kemp Land. This action could not be contested, since both are British by discovery, and have never been re-visited since they were discovered.

(b) To proclaim British sovereignty over Queen Mary Land. This action might be contested, but it could be plausibly asserted that this land is undoubtedly British by discovery, and that it has not, at present, been shown to be connected with Adélie Land (although such is very probably the case).

By claiming Kemp Land and Queen Mary Land, a lien would also be established on any land which may hereafter be discovered between them (as is not improbable).

France might conceivably retaliate by claiming King George V. Land, which would at once raise the whole question of the extent of her claims, and practically necessitate diplomatic negotiation on the subject of the western boundary of the Ross Sea Dependency.

If the French claims are restricted to Adélie Land and its vicinity, it should be possible to de-limit these by negotiation, and to proceed to the annexation of the remainder of the region in question by Order in Council, or otherwise. It might even be found possible, and would probably prove to be the best solution of the difficulty, to induce France to surrender her claim to Adélie Land in return for some such equivalent as recognition of her sovereignty over Heard and MacDonald Islands* which are of the same sub-Antarctic nature as Kerguelen, and comparatively close to it. France has no commercial interests in the Antarctic Continent: but, on the other hand, she has such interests in Kerguelen, and in the Marion and Crozet Islands, and might be disposed to regard with favour an extension of her sovereignty in that region. This suggestion, however, is purely tentative in character, since it relates to matters in which other Departments are actively interested, and the Admiralty to a far less extent.

In any event, it is considered that, so long as France claims Adélie Land, any action on the part of this country towards extending its present sovereignty over the Antarctic Continent had best be preceded by diplomatic pourparlers (and possibly negotiations) with France, and that it is impracticable to treat the sector of the Antarctic Continent lying between Enderby Land and Victoria Land in the same manner as has been adopted for the Falkland Islands and Ross Sea Dependencies.

* Heard and MacDonald Islands are respectively American and British by discovery, but it does not appear that a formal claim to them has been preferred by either Power. A few sealers are understood to visit Heard Island.

FOREIGN OFFICE to DOMINIONS OFFICE.

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 4th November, 1925.

HIS MAJESTY'S Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs has had under consideration your letter of 29th August last* on the subject of the British claim to certain areas in the Antarctic, and directs me to offer the following observations on the several points raised therein:—

Questions (1) and (2).—So far as can be ascertained His Majesty's Government, apart from Adélie Land, appear to have recognized no claim by any foreign government to any of the areas mentioned. In view, however, of the fact that numerous discoveries were made in the regions in question by foreign explorers, it would be unsafe to assume that no foreign government is in a position to substantiate a prior claim to any part. Wilkes Land, for instance, was named after an American Admiral, although, so far as is known, the United States have made no formal claim to it. Another somewhat doubtful point arises in connexion with Kaiser Wilhelm II Land which lies, or lay, within the area covered by the Admiralty definition of Queen Mary Land. Kaiser Wilhelm II Land was discovered and so named by a German scientific expedition which operated simultaneously and in co-operation with Captain Scott's Expedition in 1901. There is no evidence that the German Government ever took steps to claim possession, but, if they did in fact establish a title, it passed automatically under the Treaty of Versailles to the Allied and Associated Powers, who theoretically can only dispose of it in common agreement.

The above instances are merely cited in order to show that the course proposed may not inconceivably give rise to difficulties, but the Secretary of State desires to raise no objection to its adoption provided it be understood that the British claim is not only subject to adjustment with the French Government in regard to the limits of Adélie Land, but may have to be otherwise modified in the event of any other foreign government successfully contesting some part of it.

Question (3).—The point is not one on which the Secretary of State feels qualified to advise; he sees, however, no objection to the claim extending throughout the whole sector (less Adélie Land) to the South Pole, if it be considered desirable to follow the precedent set in the case of the Ross Dependency.

Question (4).—There can be no particular value to the French Government in any recognition by His Majesty's Government of such an extension of their claim; nor, in view of the nature of the regions in the immediate vicinity of the Pole, does there seem to be any practical advantage in so extending any claim, except for the difficulty otherwise of fixing a southern limit. If, however, the British claim, as a whole, is to extend to the Pole, it might be somewhat invidious to attempt to define a southern limit, short of the Pole, of the French claim to Adélie Land. It would, therefore, seem advisable to formulate the British claim as two separate sectors bounded east and west by longitudinal degrees, without mention of a southern limit, and thus leave the southern extent of Adélie Land an open question.

Question (5).—The reasons which have led to the definition of the limits of Adélie Land given in the Admiralty letter are not clear. When, in 1911, the French Government were asked whether they claimed Wilkes Land (there seems to have been some confusion in terms between Adélie Land and Wilkes Land), they replied that possession was taken of that territory in the name of France in 1840, and that they had no intention of abandoning it. For evidence of possession they referred His Majesty's Government, inter alia, to the Sydney Herald of 13th March, 1840, which contained an account defining the extent of the discovery as lying approximately between 136° and 147° East. Subsequently, in 1913, when His Majesty's Government were about to take possession of King George V Land, and wished to show that there was no encroachment on Adélie Land, they informed the French Government that they understood the limits of the latter to lie within the above-named degrees of longitude. It is true that two years later in a letter from this Department to the Colonial Office doubt was expressed whether His Majesty's Government could be considered bound to accept any French claims which might be made within these limits, but the fact remains that although the French Government have never themselves explicitly defined their claim, His Majesty's Government have virtually defined it for them to their tacit satisfaction. Having regard to that circumstance and to the magnitude of the present British claim, it seems undesirable, unless there are strong reasons for adopting the limits proposed by the Admiralty, to curtail the French claim beyond the limits which His Majesty's Government themselves set to it in the past, or at least by so great an extent as is involved in the present Admiralty definition. Such action would almost inevitably lead to a prompt protest to which, in view of what has occurred in the past, His Majesty's Government would probably be compelled to yield; it would also be likely to provoke the French Government to question generally the validity of other parts of the present British claim.

Question (6).—The regions in question, which are at present res nullius, can only be acquired by occupation. Occupation consists of two acts which may be performed simultaneously or separately: (a) a formal claim of annexation or some public act which implies a definite claim to sovereignty or an exclusive right to acquire sovereignty over the area; (b) the establishment of an administration over the territory. Discovery, on which the British claim to the areas in question mainly rests, is recognized as giving a prior right to annexation. This right, however, lapses if annexation does not take place within a reasonable period, or if it can be argued for any reason that the right has been waived. Similarly annexation creates a prior right to set up an administration. The occupation of the territory is only completed when, within a reasonable period of the annexation, administration is set up.

2. The Secretary of State agrees that in the present case it would be well to proceed by two stages separated by an interval in which to allow the French Government, should they think fit, to define the limits of their claim to Adélie Land, and in which to settle the arrangements for the ultimate administration of the regions included in the British claim. The form to be given to the first step, i.e., the public assertion of the claim, is unfortunately not an easy matter to determine. It must be sufficiently precise to constitute a valid claim; at the same time it should be as little provocative as possible, and such as to simplify subsequent modification of the claim in the event of any foreign government substantiating a prior title to some part of the area involved.

3. The simplest method of annexation is by Order in Council declaring the regions in question to be annexed or to be under the sovereignty of His Majesty; it is, however, open to possible objection under both the last-mentioned heads. The issue of letters patent, as in the case of the Falkland Islands Dependency, or of an Order in Council under the British Settlements Act, 1887, as in the case of the Ross Dependency, are more suitable to the second stage, i.e., the setting up of an administration. Other methods employed in the past are as follows:—

(1) In the case of King George V Land, a note was addressed to the French Government formally acquainting them with the name which His Majesty's Government had decided to give to the territory, thereby claiming by implication that it was an area under British sovereignty or one over which Great Britain had the exclusive right of acquiring sovereignty. The use of this method in the present case might tend to provoke claims by other governments, and would thus have the disadvantage which Mr. Chamberlain saw in the original suggestion to invite the French Government to define the limits of their claim to Adélie Land.

(2) In the case of the Crozet Islands, certain other islands and Adélie Land, the French Government first issued a Decree placing the areas under the supervision of their naval detachments in the Pacific and Indian Oceans respectively. They followed this up a year or so later by a Decree placing the areas under the administration of the Governor of Madagascar, and subsequently by a further decree declaring them to be a national "park" reserved for the preservation of seals, whales, etc. The Secretary of State is not sure whether some declaration similar to the first of those stages might be adaptable to the case under consideration.

(3) In 1886 the Government of Canada appear to have declared that large areas around the North Pole were Canadian territory. The exact form of the announcement cannot be traced in this Department, but it is possible that a similar procedure might be appropriate in the present instance.

4. Unless one or other of the last two methods be thought to be suitable, it would seem preferable to defer action until the final arrangements have been settled for the administration of the areas, and the two stages can be performed simultaneously. Even a year's delay, if such were necessary, would not appreciably weaken the British claim which rests on discoveries made, for the most part, many years ago; nor does there seem to be a serious risk of some other Power formulating a claim in the interval. In the event, however, of the Secretary of State for the Dominions attaching importance to the avoidance of that risk, such as it is, the best course might be to discuss the matter further at an interdepartmental conference.

5. A copy of this letter has been sent to the Admiralty.

[MY LORD,] [SIR,]

Downing Street, 11th May, 1925.

[Not to Irish Free State: WITH reference to Viscount Milner's despatch Dominions No. 470 of the 23rd of November, 1920,‡] I have the honour to request [Your Excellency] [you] to inform your Ministers that the Arbitration Convention between the United Kingdom and the Netherlands last renewed in 1920 will expire on the 12th of July next unless formally renewed. [To Irish Free State only: I enclose copies of Parliamentary Papers§ containing the text of the Convention and documents relating to its renewal.]

2. His Majesty's Government propose, in accordance with the established policy which, they understand, is in harmony with the views of your Ministers, to take steps for the renewal of the Convention in due course.

3. I should be glad to know whether your Ministers concur and whether they would agree to the substitution of the Permanent Court of International Justice for the Permanent Court of Arbitration in the Convention should such substitution be agreeable to the Netherlands Government. Your Ministers will recollect that a similar change was proposed in my telegram of the 27th of November|| relating to the renewal of the Arbitration Agreements with Portugal, Norway and Sweden, [To Irish Free State only: of which a copy was enclosed in my despatch No. 664 of the 27th November.¶]

[To Australia, New Zealand and Union of South Africa only: 4. I should be glad to receive a telegraphic reply to this despatch.]

11TH JULY. Your telegram of 4th July.† New Zealand Government would be glad to be informed whether His Majesty's Government is satisfied that exception of vital interests in the first Article of Treaty of February, 1905, covers questions arising out of exercise by His Majesty of his rights at sea during war. Such questions have arisen between neutrals and Great Britain and cannot safely be submitted to The Hague Court, which would certainly decide according to Continental jurisprudence on the point.

New Zealand Government recognizes that arbitration can always be avoided by refusal to conclude special agreement under Article II of Treaty, but it would be unusual to use Article II to evade obligation under Article I.

Even if His Majesty's Government is satisfied that reference to Arbitration of its belligerent rights at sea is excluded by exception of vital interests in Article I the New Zealand Government think that Netherlands Government should be distinctly informed that vital interests do cover that class of question which His Majesty's Government will not submit to The Hague Court.—FERGUSON.

YOUR telegram 11th July,† Arbitration Convention with the Netherlands. Note was sent by then Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs to Netherlands Government in May, 1923 (in termination of a correspondence which had extended over several years) stating that, in view of His Majesty's Government, it would cut at the roots of the system of prize law and the prize courts if the owners of captured vessels were entitled, merely on the ground that they did not agree with adverse judgments of the prize courts, to call for the reopening of cases before arbitrators. In view of this, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs thinks that New Zealand Government can be assured that there is no danger of His Majesty's Government agreeing to maritime rights during war being submitted to arbitration under Convention which it is now proposed to renew. Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs thinks, however, that, as Article 1 states definitely that matters affecting the vital interests of either of the parties are excluded from the obligation of the Convention, communication in advance to the Netherlands Government that questions of a particular class are deemed to be matters affecting the vital interests of the United Kingdom or Dominions might weaken the grounds for excluding any other class of cases should occasion arise. No special stipulations of this kind have been made in recent renewals of Arbitration Conventions with Norway, Sweden or other countries. In the circumstances, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs trusts that your Ministers will be willing not to press suggestion at end of your telegram. Should be glad of early reply. Netherlands Government are anxious for early renewal of the Convention which lapsed 12th July. Other Dominions have concurred in renewal.—AMERY.

Londres, le 12 juillet 1925.

EN réponse à la Note que Votre Excellence a bien voulu m'adresser ce jourd'hui, j'ai l'honneur de porter à Sa connaissance que le Gouvernement Néerlandais est prêt à renouveler une fois de plus, pour une période de cinq ans à partir du 12 juillet 1925, la convention d'arbitrage signée à Londres le 15 février 1905, renouvelée successivement par les conventions signées à Londres le 16 décembre 1909, le 25 mars 1915 et le 1 juin 1920.

2. Il est entendu, cependant, qu'au lieu d'une référence à la Cour Permanente d'Arbitrage, comme il est prévu aux articles 1 et 2 de la convention susmentionnée du 15 février 1905, la référence sera faite dans tout cas qui se présenterait à la Cour Permanente de Justice Internationale, conformément à la procédure établie par le Statut de la Cour et par Son Règlement adopté en vertu dudit Statut.

3. Il est convenu que la Note de Votre Excellence et la présente réponse seront considérées comme établissant et constatant l'accord entre les Gouvernements respectifs dans cette matière.

17TH AUGUST. In course of recent negotiations for revision of former treaties with Siam, Siamese Government expressed desire for conclusion of arbitration convention for settlement of differences which might in future arise. Draft Convention between His Majesty and His Majesty the King of Siam has accordingly been prepared on lines of those formerly concluded with other countries, but as in recent cases of renewal of arbitration agreements with Norway, Sweden, and Netherlands (see my telegram 27th November, 1924,† my despatch 11th May, Dominions 195,‡ and connected correspondence) stipulating for reference of differences to Permanent Court of International Justice instead of Permanent Court of Arbitration. Following is text of operative clauses:—

Begins: ARTICLE ONE. Differences of a legal nature which may arise between the two Contracting Parties and which it may not have been possible to settle by diplomacy, in the absence of contrary agreement shall, at the request of either Party, be referred to the Permanent Court of International Justice established by the Protocol of 16th December, 1920, in accordance with the procedure laid down in the statutes of that Court and in the Rules of Court adopted thereunder, provided nevertheless that such differences do not affect the vital interests, the independence or the honour of the two Contracting Parties, and do not concern the interests of third parties. The Contracting Parties agree to accept the decision of the Court as binding.

ARTICLE TWO. The present Convention, which shall be ratified, is concluded for a period of five years dating from the exchange of ratifications, which shall take place at London as soon as possible. In case neither of the two Contracting Parties shall have given notice to the other twelve months before the expiration of the said period of five years of its intention to terminate the present convention, it shall remain in force until the expiration of one year from the date on which either of the two Contracting Parties shall have denounced it.

Please telegraph whether your Ministers have any observations on proposals. Siamese Minister has asked that matter may be expedited as much as possible.—AMERY.

17TH AUGUST. In course of recent negotiations for revision of former treaties with Siam, Siamese Government expressed desire for conclusion of arbitration convention for settlement of differences which might in future arise. Draft Convention has accordingly been prepared on lines of those formerly concluded with other countries but as in recent cases of arbitration agreements with Norway and Sweden (see my telegram 27th November, 1924*) stipulating for reference of differences to Permanent Court of International Justice instead of Permanent Court of Arbitration.

Should your Ministers have any observations on proposals please telegraph as soon as possible.—AMERY.

[Answered by No. 75.]

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 23rd June, 1925.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Chamberlain to inform you that according to reports from Washington communicated to me, the Canadian Government have addressed a note to the United States Government regarding the United States Macmillan Expedition to the North Pole. The object of this expedition is apparently to find a hitherto undiscovered continent, which is supposed to exist near the North Pole. According to the reports in question the Canadian Government have stated in their note that, if any such continent lying between Canada and the North Pole should be discovered, it should be considered as Canadian and not United States territory.

2. Mr. Chamberlain would be glad to learn whether there is any foundation for these reports, and, if so, would be glad to receive full particulars regarding any correspondence on the subject between the Canadian and United States Governments.

3. In this connexion I am to transmit to you herewith a copy of a despatch from His Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Washington regarding comments in the United States press upon the statement of the Canadian Minister of the Interior in the House of Commons, that the Canadian Government claim sovereignty over any land discovered in the northern portion of Canada right up to the North Pole.

I am, &c.,

ROBERT VANSITTART.

Enclosure in No. 74.

(No. 855.)

SIR,

British Embassy, Washington, D.C., 10th June, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to report that the statement made by the Canadian Minister of the Interior during a debate in the House of Commons on the 1st instant to the effect that Canada claims the sovereignty over any land discovered by explorers in the northern portion of Canada right up to the North Pole has called forth a certain amount of comment in the press here in connexion with the American Macmillan Expedition to the Arctic Ocean.

A precedent for the Canadian claim is sought by the Washington Evening Star in the discovery of Axel Heiburg Land, an island of 13,200 square miles, west of Ellesmere Land (which latter is Canadian territory). This discovery was made by a Norwegian, Otto Sverdrup, in 1902, but was apparently never claimed by the Norwegian Government, although Sverdrup set up the Norwegian flag there, and Canada seems to have been allowed to consider this territory her own without protest from any quarter.

The Washington Evening Star has dealt with the question at some length and even reported that the Canadian Deputy Minister of the Interior came to Washington expressly to discuss the matter of the sovereignty of any land which the Macmillan Expedition may find. This is not true though it is quite likely that Mr. Cory may have discussed these northern territories with the United States authorities in connexion with the grant of facilities by the Dominion Government in Canadian territory for the Macmillan Expedition when he was here last month. A representative of the Star, who called at the Embassy a few days ago, was informed accordingly.

The whole matter has been treated by those papers which have noticed it in the friendliest tone. The Washington Post thinks the Dominion Government cannot claim the bulk of such territory as it lies north of Alaska and not of Canada, and that it may be safely assumed that title to the Arctic continent will be vested in the United States on the ordinary basis of discovery and occupation.

In this connexion the New York Times of yesterday announced that the State Department are considering the question of the territorial status of any lands which may be discovered by the Macmillan Expedition which involves two points—(1) whether Axel Heiburg Land is Canadian territory, thus necessitating a permit being obtained from the Government of Canada for the naval aviators with the expedition to land there, and (2) whether any discoveries on the part of the expedition should be claimed as American territory or not. This paper added that high officials in Washington had said that the Government of Canada had not yet raised, or discussed with the United States Government, the matter of claiming all land between Canada and the Pole.

On the other hand, an Associated Press report emanating from Ottawa, which appeared in yesterday's Washington Post, states that Mr. George P. Mackenzie, formerly gold commissioner of the Yukon, is to take command of a party of mounted police and Government experts and will start on 1st July "to establish Canadian official administration over distant island possessions in the Arctic region claimed as part of the Dominion." This looks as though the Dominion Government intended by immediate action to eliminate any question as to the national status at least of those northern territories so far discovered.

I have received no official communication from the Governor-General of Canada on this question, but I am forwarding to His Excellency a copy of this despatch in case he may desire to offer any observations on the subject.

SIR,

Downing Street, 9th July, 1925.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Amery to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 23rd June,* regarding a note stated to have been addressed by the Government of Canada to the Government of the United States on the subject of the United States Macmillan Expedition to the North Pole, and to request you to inform Mr. Secretary Chamberlain that no communication has been received from the Canadian Government in the matter, but, as will be seen from recent debates† in the Canadian House of Commons, reports of which are enclosed, the question of the extent of Canada's territorial claims in the Arctic regions has been under discussion in Canada.

2. It will also be observed from page 4,238 of the enclosed extracts that Mr. Stewart, the Minister of the Interior, stated that a despatch was addressed by the Canadian Government to Washington some considerable time ago, but the Secretary of State is not aware of its terms. As soon as any further information is received it will be transmitted to the Foreign Office. It is presumed, however, that His Majesty's Ambassador at Washington will be forwarding to the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs a copy of the note which, according to an article in The Times of the 18th June, he appears to have recently transmitted to the United States Government in the matter.

SIR, British Embassy, Manchester, Mass., 2nd July, 1925.
IN continuation of my note No. 627 of the 15th ultimo† and in response to the specific inquiries contained in your note of the 19th ultimo,‡ I have the honour to inform you that I have received the following particulars from the Governor-General of Canada regarding posts of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police established in Baffin and Ellesmere islands and other sections of the Canadian northern territories.

A Mounted Police post in so far as buildings are concerned is composed of a small barracks to house members of the Force, and separate buildings for storing supplies. In so far as personnel is concerned, each post is in charge of a non-commissioned officer with two or three constables for duty and patrols, and the necessary number of natives to act as dog drivers, guides and interpreters.

The Posts established in the Eastern Arctic Sub-District include the following:—

Baffin Island—

- (1) Pasgairtung, Cumberland Sound.
- (2) Ponds Inlet, on the north end of the island.

Devon Island—

- (1) Dundas Harbour.

Ellesmere Island—

- (1) Craig Harbour (south of the island).
- (2) Rice's Strait (near Cape Sabine).

All the above-mentioned posts are permanently occupied by members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, with the exception of Rice's Strait, near Cape Sabine, where stores only have been placed, pending the arrival of buildings for a permanent post and personnel, which are being sent up this year.

The above Sub-District is in charge of a Commissioned officer of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police who resides at any one of the posts, as circumstances demand. All the posts are visited once a year by the Commissioned Officer mentioned and by the officials of the Canadian Department of the Interior.

In regard to the duties of members of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police stationed in the Eastern Arctic, it may be added that all the Mounted Police Detachments in the Eastern Arctic are Post Offices and Customs Ports, and the Non-Commissioned Officers in charge have been appointed Postmasters and Collectors of Customs.

Furthermore, the duties of members of the Force stationed in the Eastern Arctic include the supervision of the welfare of the Eskimo for the Department of Indian Affairs (educating them as far as possible in the White Man's Laws and issuing destitute relief where necessary), enforcement of all the Ordinances and Regulations of the North-west Territories, including Game Laws and the protection of Musk Oxen, and the issue of Game, Animal and Bird Licences to the various Trading Companies, the supervision of liquor permits, the enforcement of the Migratory Birds Convention Act for the Department of the Interior; the enforcement of the Criminal Code and Assistance to the Post Office and Customs Department, as set forth in the last paragraph above, as well as to the Department of Mines and Agriculture in the collection of Eskimo material and ethnological and biological specimens.

* Enclosure 2 in No. 77.

Members of the Force are also called upon to assist in the taking of the Census and assisting the Director of Meteorological Service in the taking of readings at the different Posts from time to time, and to supply topographical information to the Federal Service.

In addition, Police patrols to surrounding settlements and Eskimo villages and also extended patrols to remote points are also made by each detachment for the purpose of obtaining the information required.

In bringing the above information to your notice, I have the honour to renew the assurance conveyed to you in my above-mentioned note of the Canadian Government's readiness to afford the Macmillan Expedition any assistance within the power of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and the other Dominion officers in Canadian northern territories.

I have, &c.,

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 20th July, 1925.

WITH reference to the letter from this department of 23rd June,* I am directed by Mr. Secretary Chamberlain to transmit to you herewith copies of two despatches from His Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Washington regarding the United States Macmillan Expedition to the Arctic regions and the claims of the Canadian Government to territory lying between Canada and the North Pole.

2. Mr. Chamberlain considers that should there be in the future any conflict of view between the United States and Canada as to their respective rights in land between the existing admitted territorial claims and the North Pole, the matter will turn on the facts of discovery and occupation, etc., more than on diplomatic correspondence.

3. It would be useful, therefore, in Mr. Chamberlain's opinion, if the Dominion Government were, with a view to such an eventuality, to collect all available evidence and material tending to substantiate the Canadian claim, and see that it is placed on record in some form that will render it available at any time in the future.

4. I am to suggest that a communication in the above sense should be made to the Canadian Government.

I am, &c.,

ROBERT VANSITTART.

Enclosure 1 in No. 77.

(No. 874.)

(Confidential.)

SIR,

British Embassy, Washington, 17th June, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to report, with reference to my despatch No. 855 of the 10th instant,† respecting the Macmillan scientific and exploring expedition to the Arctic regions, that on 11th June, I received from His Excellency the Governor-General of Canada two despatches furnishing me confidentially with an explanation of the Dominion Government's claims to jurisdiction over all territories in the north bounded on the east by a line passing midway between Greenland and Baffin, Devon and Ellesmere Islands and thence northward to the Pole, and on the west by the 141st meridian from the mainland of North America indefinitely northward. Lord Byng also requested me to inform the United States Government that although the Dominion authorities had received no official intimation from the

* No. 74. † Enclosure in No. 74.

Government of the United States of the intended route of this Expedition or of the desire of members thereof to explore and fly over Baffin, Ellesmere and other Canadian territories, they would be glad to instruct the Royal Canadian Mounted Police posts on Ellesmere Island to afford the Expedition all the assistance in their powers. Copies of Ottawa despatches Nos. 103 and 104 of the 4th instant are enclosed for your information.

2. As I gained the impression, after perusing this correspondence, that the Canadian Government entertained some suspicion that the Macmillan Expedition, which, after crossing Ellesmere Island is to establish its advanced headquarters at a north-western point of Axel Heiburg Island, might result in an attempt on the part of the United States to lay claim to that territory, I decided, before approaching the Department of State, in accordance with Lord Byng's request, contained in His Excellency's despatch No. 103, to consult the Dominion authorities further in the matter, and at the same time I ventured to put forward certain suggestions as to the form which any note I might address to the United States Government might take. I accordingly telegraphed confidentially to Government House, Ottawa, and a copy of my telegram is enclosed herein, together with a copy of the reply thereto, which you will observe, although marked "Secret," was merely coded in the Government Telegraph Code. Immediately upon receipt of this telegram, I addressed a communication to the United States Government, a copy of which I beg leave to transmit to you herewith.

3. I trust that the terms of this communication, and the action which I have taken on behalf of the Dominion Government, will meet with your approval.

SIR, Government House, Ottawa, 4th June, 1925.

My advisers have noted Press reports that a scientific expedition is being prepared in the United States for exploration in the Arctic regions, to be led by Dr. Donald B. Macmillan, under the auspices of the National Geographic Society and with the co-operation of the United States Navy.

I would request Your Excellency to inquire of the Secretary of State whether this report is correct. If so, I would desire to call the attention of the Government of the United States to the fact that the Government of Canada has established Royal Canadian Mounted Police Posts in Baffin Island, Ellesmere Island, and other sections of its northern territories, that in the course of the Police patrols through the Arctic Islands depots of provisions have been established at various centres, and that, in addition, Hudson Bay Company posts are in existence at island and mainland points.

The Government of Canada would be pleased under these circumstances to assure the expedition of whatever assistance could be given from these posts and depots, and by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, to furnish the necessary permits for the expedition, and in any other way possible to facilitate the plans of Dr. Macmillan and his associates.

I have, &c.,

BYNG OF VIMY.

His Excellency
The Right Honourable
Sir Esme Howard, G.C.M.G., K.C.B., C.V.O.

Sub-enclosure 2.

(No. 104.)

SIR, Government House, Ottawa, 4th of June, 1925.

With further reference to my Secret despatch, No. 103, of even date, on the subject of the Macmillan Arctic Expedition, it has been considered advisable to set forth some of the grounds which have caused the Canadian Government apprehension as to the purposes of the expedition, and also the grounds of its claims to certain Arctic territory which may be questioned.

The expedition is under the leadership of Dr. Macmillan, a Newfoundlander by birth but now a citizen of the United States, who is widely experienced in Arctic exploration. In his earlier expeditions he was disposed to work closely with the Canadian Government, and when giving evidence before the Canadian Royal Commission on the Musk Ox and Reindeer Industries, in 1920, he advised that all explorers going into Canadian Arctic territory be required to secure licences. Of late, perhaps because of the exigencies of popular lecture tours in the United States and campaigns there for financing his new expedition, he has tended to emphasize the advantages to the United States of the discoveries he may make in the Arctic, and also to ignore the Canadian authorities. The Director of the North West Territories and Yukon Branch of the Department of the Interior wrote him in June, 1923, prior to his last trip north, asking for information as to his plans, and calling his attention to the hunting and trading licence requirements. The letter, though received was not acknowledged. On Macmillan's return, the Director wrote again in October, 1924, calling attention to press reports of killing of musk ox on Ellesmere Island. Macmillan replied, stating that the objects of the expedition were purely scientific, and adding that "nothing in Canadian territory was trapped or killed or traded for by me or by a single member of my personnel, else you would have received notice immediately upon my return and check forwarded for hunting and trading licence," a reply which was considered, in the light of Royal Canadian Mounted Police reports as to killing of musk ox, at least evasive.

On 14th January, 1925, the Director wrote Macmillan calling attention to press reports of the new expedition, enclosing copies of Game Act and other regulations, and suggesting that application be made for a migratory game permit. No answer has been received to this letter.

The United States Department of the Navy, to judge by the "Shenandoah" and other incidents, is not adverse to securing whatever prestige may attach to adding territory and possibly air bases in the North. It is providing planes and also lending pilots and mechanics. No intimation whatever as to the expedition has been received from the United States Government.

Given this persistent ignoring of Canadian authority, special significance attaches to the reported route of the expedition. While it is proposed to make airplane exploration through Baffin Lane, as to which no question of sovereignty could possibly be raised, this is apparently to be left to the return trip and is not an essential feature. On the northward journey, the expedition, after coaling at a Canadian port, and possibly touching at a Labrador port, is to coast along Greenland to Etah; permission to make use of Etah as a base and make certain scientific inquiries there has been sought and secured from the Danish Government. From Etah the planes are to fly across Ellesmere Island to the northern end of Axel Heiberg Island, there to establish a base for exploring the large unknown area to the north-eastward. As it happens that the two portions of Canadian territory thus to be visited, or flown over, Ellesmere Island and Axel Heiberg, are precisely the two areas in the north as to which some question as to our sovereignty might be raised (by the United States and Norway respectively), it is apprehended that this choice of route is not wholly accidental or based wholly on technical grounds, and that it may foreshadow claims not merely to any new territory discovered to the eastward, but to part or all of Ellesmere Island itself.

The grounds upon which Canada rests her claim to these, as well as to the other Arctic islands north of her mainland territory, may be summarized briefly.

In 1880, Great Britain, by Imperial Order in Council of 31st July, 1880, transferred the Arctic Archipelago to Canada. The Order provided that "all British territories and possessions in North America and the islands adjacent to such territories and possessions, which are not already included in the Dominion of Canada, should (with the exception of the colony of Newfoundland and its Dependencies) be annexed to and form part of the said Dominion."

The Dominion of Canada claims as its "hinterland" the area bounded on the east by a line passing midway between Greenland and Baffin, Devon and Ellesmere Islands and, thence northward to the Pole. On the west, Canada claims, as her western boundary, the 141st meridian from the mainland of North America indefinitely northward "without limitation."*

The various grounds on which title may be based will be taken up in turn:—

1. Discovery.

So far as discovery goes, the title of Great Britain, and thus of Canada, to the whole Arctic Archipelago is beyond question, except possibly in the case of certain Ellesmere and Axel Heiberg areas. With the exception of Heiberg, Ringnes, Meighen, Borden, Brock and some smaller islands, all the known insular areas in the Canadian Arctic Archipelago were discovered and formally taken possession of by British commissioned navigators from a century to three-quarters of a century ago, and such acts of possession were formally announced to the world in British Government blue-books. Of these islands, Meighen, Borden and Brock were discovered and formally taken possession of by a Canadian expedition in 1914-17. Consideration will, therefore, be confined to the areas which may be questioned.

In 1616, Bylot and Baffin, English navigators, discovered Ellesmere Island and named Smith Sound to the east of it and Jones Sound to the south.

In 1818, an official expedition, formally commissioned by Great Britain and commanded by Captain John Ross, R.N., explored the south-eastern portion of Ellesmere Island.

In 1852, Commander Inglefield, R.N., commanding one of the Franklin Relief vessels despatched by the British Admiralty, surveyed the south shore to longitude 84° W. and the eastern shore to Princess Marie Bay in latitude 79° 30'.

In 1853-1855 and 1860-1861, two citizens of the United States, Kane and Hayes, explored the shore of Ellesmere Island from Princess Marie Bay northward to latitude 81° 30'. In 1871, Hall, also a citizen of the United States, explored a small portion of the north-eastern coast of Ellesmere Island between latitudes 81° 45' N. and 82° 30' N.

In 1875-1876, Captain Nares, R.N., commanding an expedition despatched by the British Admiralty, surveyed accurately and in detail the coasts explored by Kane, Hayes and Hall, which, in large part, had been so inaccurately mapped that it was difficult to recognize many of the salient points indicated on their plans. Nares also explored the northern and western coasts from Hall's "farthest" to Cape Alfred Ernest in latitude 82° N.

In 1881-1884, Lieutenant A. W. Greely, U.S.N., commanded an International Circumpolar station "for the purpose of scientific observation," particularly in developing meteorology and extending the knowledge of terrestrial magnetism. Greely crossed Ellesmere Island and explored the shores of Greely Fiord, an inlet in the west coast.

In 1900-1902, Sverdrup, commanding an expedition which was financed, in large part, by citizens of Norway, explored nearly all the remainder of the south-western and western coasts of Ellesmere Island, and also discovered Axel Heiberg, Amund Ringnes, Ellef Ringnes and King Christian Islands.

In 1913-1918, Vilhjalmur Stefansson, commanding an expedition, formally commissioned by the Dominion of Canada, made further explorations in the Canadian Arctic Archipelago. He discovered Meighen, Borden, Brock, and some smaller islands, and made further surveys of Amund Ringnes, Ellef Ringnes and King Christian Islands. He found that the last named, instead of being the northern portion of Findlay Island, as Sverdrup supposed, was a separate island.

* There is at least one precedent for the claim to the 141st meridian, namely, the Russian-United States Treaty of 30th March, 1867, whereby the present territory of Alaska was ceded to the United States. It provides that:—

"The western limit, within which the territories and dominion conveyed (to the United States) are contained, passes through a point in Behring's Straits on the parallel of sixty degrees thirty minutes north latitude . . . and proceeds due north, without limitation, into the Frozen (Arctic) Ocean."

This, in terms, is a claim by the United States that the western boundary of Alaska is a due north line passing through the middle of Behring Strait and thence due north to the North Pole.

In 1867, this contention received the recognition and support of the Russian Government and, so far as the Government of Canada is aware, it has never been protested by any other Power, nor has the United States ever indicated that she does not propose to maintain it in its entirety.

Inferentially, the United States would make a similar contention respecting its eastern boundary—the 141st meridian. Such claim, if formulated, would, of course, receive the support of the Government of Canada.

To illustrate the result of the foregoing activities a map,* a copy of which is attached, has been prepared, which shows in red, blue and yellow, the areas explored by British, United States and Norwegian nationals respectively.

The exact extent of the coasts discovered or explored by nationals of these countries is indicated on the "Explorations in Northern Canada" map* which also accompanies this despatch.

It is thus clear that this island was discovered over three centuries ago by an English expedition; that a century ago, a part of the shore-line was surveyed by an expedition formally commissioned by Great Britain, and that three-quarters of a century ago another officer of the British Navy explored and surveyed 300 miles of its shore-line.

By progressive steps the remainder of the shore-line of Ellesmere Island was surveyed between 1853 and 1902 by British, United States and Norwegian explorers, but it is to be noted that, with the exception of the Greely expedition, which accomplished but little in the way of exploration, neither the United States expeditions nor the Norwegian were commissioned by their respective Governments.

At this point, it seems pertinent to state that there can only be one discovery of an island. Subsequent individuals or expeditions can only explore or survey, though they may claim to have discovered specific topographical features such as capes, bays, mountains, rivers, etc.†

The fact of discovery, therefore, was completed when Bylot and Baffin discovered it 309 years ago.

Had the United States subsequently occupied portions of the coast of Ellesmere Island, which had been discovered by citizens of that country, such occupation would have formed the basis of a strong claim but upon the facts, as set forth above, it is evident that she has no claim except such attenuated claim as could be founded upon exploration by her nationals upon part of the coast of an island discovered by an English expedition two and one-half centuries earlier, and surveyed to the extent of 300 miles by officers of the Royal Navy, prior to the advent of any citizen of the United States.

The portions of the coast of Ellesmere Island which were first explored by citizens of the United States have been coloured as United States territory by some map-makers in that country, and the coast-line first sighted by the Sverdrup expedition has been coloured as Norwegian though, so far as known, neither the Government of the United States nor the Government of Norway has made a "public assertion of ownership" of the areas explored by their nationals, and, in the case of the United States, the lapse of a half-century should bar such claim at the present time.

Similarly, in the case of Norway, the lapse of over twenty years should also bar any claim by that nation.

Again, Kane, Hayes, Hall and Sverdrup were uncommissioned navigators. The money appropriated for the Greely expedition was for "observation and exploration in the Arctic seas," but neither he nor Kane, Hayes or Hall was commissioned to take possessions of lands in the name of the United States. Nor was Sverdrup similarly commissioned on behalf of Norway.

This clearly negatives any claim by the United States or Norway which is based upon discovery by their respective nationals.

Hall says that: "if an uncommissioned navigator takes possession of lands in the name of his sovereign, and then sails away without forming a settlement, the fact of possession has ceased, and a confirmation of his act only amounts to a bare assertion of intention to possess, which, being neither declared upon the spot nor supported by local acts, is of no legal value."

2. Contiguity.

The importance of the principle of contiguity, and its applicability to the present situation, may appropriately be indicated by quotations from United States authorities:—

* Not reproduced.

† While Great Britain has never conceded such sweeping claims, it is noteworthy that, in 1827, during the Oregon Territory negotiations, the United States plenipotentiaries claimed all the country between the 42nd and 49th parallels of latitude, basing their claim upon the mere entrance into the mouth of the Columbia by a private citizen of the United States. Further, these extraordinary pretensions were put forward, although it was a matter of common knowledge that Cook and Vancouver took possession of, or touched at, various points of this portion of the mainland.

In 1824, Mr. Rush, United States Minister at London, wrote: "It will not be denied that the extent of contiguous territory to which an actual settlement gives a prior right must depend in a considerable degree on the magnitude and population of that settlement, and on the facility with which the vacant adjoining land may within a short time be occupied, settled and cultivated by such population, as compared with the probability of its being thus occupied and settled from another quarter" (quoted by Westlake, I., pp. 116-117).

In 1844, Mr. Calhoun, United States Secretary of State, wrote Mr. Pakenham, British Minister at Washington: "That contiguity furnishes a just foundation for a claim of territory, in connexion with those of discovery and occupation, would seem unquestionable. It is admitted by all, that neither of them is limited by the precise spot discovered or occupied. It is evident that, in order to make either available, it must extend at least some distance beyond that actually discovered or occupied; but how far, as an abstract question, is a matter of uncertainty. . . . How far the claim of contiguity may extend . . . can be settled only by reference to the circumstances attending each."

In 1826, Mr. Callatin, negotiator on behalf of the United States, said:

"The actual possession and populous settlements of the valley of the Mississippi, including Louisiana, and now under one sovereignty, constitutes a strong claim to the westward extension of that province over the contiguous vacant territory, and to the occupation and sovereignty of the country as far as the Pacific Ocean."

"It will not be denied that the extent of contiguous territory, to which an actual settlement gives a prior right must depend, in a considerable degree, on the magnitude and population of that settlement, and on the facility with which the vacant adjoining land may, within a short time, be occupied, settled, and cultivated by such population, as compared with the probability of its being thus occupied and settled from another quarter."

As to the relative probability of settlement or control by the United States or Norway—as compared with Canada—there can be no question. Further, when the difficulties of control in the Arctic, as compared with temperate and torrid regions, are considered and when due weight has been given to such considerations, Canada's title may be claimed to be, if not unquestionable, at least much superior to that of any other nation.

The islands discovered by Sverdrup, namely, Axel Heiberg, Amund Ringnes and Ellef Ringnes, are six, eight and twenty-five miles distant, respectively, from islands which have been acknowledged as British for three-quarters of a century. In addition, they are, as already stated, simply portions of the geographical entity, known as the Canadian Arctic Archipelago.

3. Occupation and Control.

The decision of the arbitrators respecting the boundary between British Guiana and Venezuela recognized a principle which materially strengthens the claims of Canada. In this case, British Guiana was awarded the larger portion of the area in dispute because the British and their predecessors in title, the Dutch, had exercised a control over the native inhabitants of that area. The same principle was also recognized in determining the boundary between British Guiana and Brazil which was in dispute for many years.

The awards in each case recognized the principle that such control constitutes effective occupation.

Similarly, Great Britain and Canada have exercised control over the natives of the mainland of Canada and of the Arctic islands between Greenland and the 141st parallel. It is true that Ellesmere, Heiberg and the Ringnes Islands are not inhabited by natives or white men, but it is highly probable that they were so occupied by the Eskimo even in historic times and, since then, have not been occupied by any one else.

In 1670, King Charles II granted a charter to the Hudson Bay Company. By virtue thereof, the Company for two centuries exercised a proprietary government over the area covered by its charter and established posts throughout the Arctic drainage basin of the mainland. Since the sale of its rights and privileges to the British Crown, and the transfer thereof to Canada over a half-century ago, the Hudson Bay Company and other fur-trading companies have extended their operations to the Arctic islands and have established posts therein thus exercising a control over practically the whole of the native population.

The Canadian Government has established police posts on Ellesmere, Devon and Baffin Islands in the eastern portion of the archipelago and at other points in the western portion of the area, these posts being so placed as to dominate the whole of the archipelago, thus furnishing all the control required to maintain its title.

4. Prescription.

The taking possession of Melville, Cornwallis and other islands of the Canadian Arctic archipelago was formally notified to the world, and for three-quarters of a century and more has been unopposed.

Reference may be made to a despatch of Lord Salisbury of 18th March, 1896:—

"There is no enactment or usage or accepted doctrine which lays down the length of time required for international prescription, and no full definition of the degree of control which will confer territorial property on a nation, has been attempted. It certainly does not depend solely on occupation or the exercise of any clearly defined acts. All the great nations in both hemispheres claim, and are prepared to defend, their rights to vast tracts of territory which they have in no sense occupied, and often have not fully explored. The modern doctrine of 'Hinterland,' with its inevitable contradictions, indicates the unformed and unstable condition of international law as applied to territorial claims resting on constructive occupation or control."

In 1904, the Government of Canada published a map showing "Explorations in Northern Canada." On that map* (copy enclosed) the boundary of the Canadian Arctic archipelago, on the east, is delineated by a line passing through the middle of Robeson Channel—waters separating the Canadian islands from Greenland—and thence northward to the Pole, and, on the west, by the 141st meridian from the mainland northward to the Pole.

This official map was published twenty-one years ago and obviously, a tacit acquiescence, during over a fifth of a century, on the part of Norway and all other nations, bars their claim to protest the Canadian claim.

In conclusion, it should be pointed out that it is obvious that the specific rules of international law that are considered by the best authorities to be applicable to the torrid and temperate zones are, in such cases as the Canadian Arctic archipelago, not applicable with the same strictness. The effect of measures of control, of contiguity and of settlement must be given very much greater weight than would normally be attached to similar measures in more temperate and habitable regions.

Against any claims by the United States or Norway to territory in the Arctic archipelago, it may be urged that, collectively, these islands form a geographic entity and that discoveries by the nationals of other nations of hitherto unknown units in this entity do not impair the title of Canada. Canada would not necessarily regard the undertaking of such explorations with disfavour any more than she would so regard explorations made on the mainland of Canada in areas that are still unexplored, provided that they be undertaken in such a way as to form an acknowledgment of her sovereignty. But Canada does not contend that the nationals of other nations should conform to the regulations and laws of Canada, particularly as such conforming does not impose any hardship upon such nationals.

The following summary of the various regulations in force in Canada applicable to explorers and others visiting northern Canadian territory has been compiled by the Department of the Interior:

1. Customs Laws and Regulations.—Foreign Expeditions visiting Canadian Territory are subject to the usual provisions of the Customs Laws and Regulations.

(a) Before landing supplies at a place other than Canadian Customs port of entry, all foreign goods should be reported and entered at Customs port short of destination, i.e., Sydney, Cape Breton.

2. Air Regulations.—Foreign expeditions bringing Aircraft into Canada are subject to the regulations of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

(a) Application must be made for permission to enter Canada.

(b) Detailed information concerning the nature of the expedition.

(c) Plans and other information dealing with the machine, showing strength, etc., for the purpose of providing certificate of air worthiness.

(d) Name and qualifications of the pilot. Registration and markings painted on the machine, etc.

3. Immigration.—Section 33 of the Immigration Act requires that every passenger or other person seeking entry to Canada shall first appear before, and make application to, an Immigration officer at a port of entry, and shall answer truly all questions put to him by any immigration officer. Foreign scientists and explorers may not be immigrants, but the Act does not exempt non-immigrants from the necessity of examination on entry, and it is within the power of the Immigration Department to compel foreign explorers to apply for entry (Extract from letter—Assistant Deputy Minister, Immigration, 29th May, 1925—file 4427).

4. Importation of Intoxicants under the North-West Territories Act.—

- (a) Special permission in writing from the Commissioner must first be obtained before intoxicants can be manufactured, compounded, or imported into the North-West Territories.
- (b) Such intoxicants are subject to the Customs and Excise Laws of Canada.
- (c) The penalties of such manufacture or importation are set out in part 3, chapter 62, R.S.C.—1906. (North-West Territories Act.)

5. Game Regulations.—Under the North-West Territories Game Act and Regulations.

- (a) No person except a bona fide resident of the North-West Territories shall hunt or trap game without securing a licence.
- (a) No person shall engage in the business of trading or trafficking in game in the North-West Territories without first securing a licence.
- (c) Game licence holders are subject to the provisions of the North-West Game Act and regulations thereunder.

6. Permits under the Migratory Birds Convention Act.—

Migratory game, migratory insectivorous or migratory non-game birds or parts thereof or their eggs or nests may be taken, bought, sold, shipped, transported or possessed for scientific purposes, but only on the issue of a permit by the Minister of the Interior, or by any person duly authorized by him. Such permits may, upon application, be granted to recognized museums, or scientific societies, and to any person furnishing written testimonials from two well-known ornithologists. A return of specimens taken under such a permit shall be made to the Minister of the Interior upon the expiration of the permit.

7. Licences or permits required by foreign scientists and explorers before entering the North-West Territories.—

An amendment by adding the following paragraph after paragraph (p) of Section 8, of the North-West Territories Act, has passed the Commons and is now (4th June, 1925) before the Senate:—

- (q) The issuing of licences or permits to scientists or explorers who wish to enter the said Territories and the prescribing of the conditions under which such licences or permits may be granted in each case, and the penalties for infractions of such conditions.

This paragraph is intended to make it necessary for foreign scientists and explorers to obtain a permit or licence from the Commissioner in Council before entering the North-West Territories.

TELEGRAM FROM MR. CHILTON, WASHINGTON, TO LORD BYNG OF VIMY, GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF CANADA.

(Despatched 12th June, 1925.)

Your despatches Nos. 103 and 104.

As Dominion Government seem to fear that Macmillan Expedition may result in attempt on the part of the United States to lay claim to Axel Heiberg Island, and possibly to Ellesmere Island, I feel that it would be well to lose no time in intimating to United States Government that both these islands are regarded as being Canadian territory. Your despatch No. 103 does not state whether any police or trading posts have been established in former island. If so, I could inform State Department that such posts have been established in "Baffin Island, Ellesmere Island, Axel Heiberg Island and other sections of Canadian northern territories."

If not, I can, in my note to Mr. Kellogg, refer to Macmillan's reported intention to fly across "certain Canadian northern territories, including Ellesmere and Axel Heiberg Islands, and to establish an advanced base in the latter."

As expedition is reported to be due to start on 17th June, I would appreciate a very early reply by telegraph.

TELEGRAM FROM GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF CANADA TO MR. CHILTON, WASHINGTON.

SECRET. 13th June.

Your telegram of 12th June, No. 51.

As indicated in my telegram of 12th June, Canadian Government agree that more explicit statement should now be conveyed to United States Government.

No Canadian Police or Trading posts have ever been established on Axel Heiberg.

While Canadian Government considers this island as being her territory, it is probably area most open to question though open to question only from Norwegian and not from United States Government.

It is considered desirable, if question is raised, to state that Canadian Government claim this island, but it might be well in the first instance to limit air (?) permits to some such phrase as mentioned in my telegram of 12th June, namely, "flying over Ellesmere, Baffin and the other islands within Canadian Boundaries." It might be added that legislation formally requiring that any scientific or exploring expedition shall secure permit before entering any part of Canadian Northern territory, has been passed this month by both Houses of Canadian Parliament.

Canadian Government's steamer "Arctic" will sail this month (?) Cape Breton usual patrol and Royal Canadian Mounted troops touch various points including posts on Ellesmere Island.

Sub-enclosure 5.

(No. 627.)

SIR,

British Embassy, Washington, 15th June, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to inform you that the Government of Canada have reason to believe, from statements which have lately appeared in the Press, that a scientific expedition, commonly referred to as the Macmillan Expedition, organized under the auspices of the National Geographical Society with the co-operation of the United States Navy, will shortly be leaving for the far North for the purpose of exploring and flying over Baffin, Ellesmere, Axel Heiberg, and certain other islands within the northern territories of the Dominion.

As you are doubtless aware, posts of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police have been established in Baffin and Ellesmere Islands and other sections of the Canadian northern territories, in addition to which Police patrols through the Arctic islands have created depots of provisions at various centres. There are also a number of Hudson Bay Company posts in existence at island and mainland points.

In these circumstances, and although the Dominion Government have received no intimation from the Government of the United States regarding the route of the Macmillan Expedition, or of the intention of the members thereof to carry out explorations through and over Canadian territory, they have requested me to inform you of their readiness to furnish the expedition with the necessary permits for an exploring and scientific expedition entering Canadian northern territories, and possibly desiring to fly over Baffin, Ellesmere and the adjoining islands within the boundaries of the Dominion. Legislation formally requiring scientific or exploring expeditions to secure such permits before entering any part of the Canadian northern territories was enacted by both Houses of Parliament this month.

I would also take this opportunity of assuring you of the Canadian Government's readiness to afford the Macmillan Expedition any assistance within the power of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and the other Canadian officers in the north.

In this connexion, I would add that the Dominion Government, s.s. "Arctic," will sail at an early date on her customary northern patrol, and will carry Royal Canadian Mounted Police details and reliefs. This vessel will touch at various points and will visit the police and trading ports on Ellesmere Island.

I have, &c.,
H. G. CHILTON.

The Honourable
Frank B. Kellogg,
Secretary of State of the United States,
Washington, D.C.

Enclosure 2 in No. 77.

(No. 914.)

Sir, British Embassy, Manchester, Mass., 25th June, 1925.
In continuation of my Confidential despatch No. 874 of the 17th instant on the subject of the Macmillan Scientific and Exploring Expedition to the Arctic regions, I have the honour to transmit to you herewith copy of a note from the United States Government replying to my communication of 15th June, a copy of which was enclosed in my despatch under reference. While it will be seen from the contents of the State Department note that I may expect to receive a more detailed reply to my representations in due course, I would draw particular attention to the wording of the opening sentence of the fourth paragraph of Mr. Kellogg's note, which runs as follows:—

"I desire to thank you for the offer of co-operation by any Canadian agency which may temporarily be in the same territory with the Macmillan Expedition . . ."

In this connexion you will recollect that in my note of 15th June, I specifically informed the United States Government that posts of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police had been established in Ellesmere Island, and in certain other Canadian northern territories. It occurs to me, therefore, that the use of the word "temporarily" in Mr. Kellogg's interim reply may indicate that the United States Government are not disposed, at present at any rate, to recognize the claim of the Government of Canada to sovereignty over the island in question. If this be so, it may be assumed that the Republican Government are even less likely to accept the Canadian claim to Axel Heiberg Island.

The recent departure of the Macmillan Expedition and the hints which have been dropped by the Department of State that its proposed activities have not been too well received in the Dominion of Canada have given rise to some interesting Press comment. Thus, on the 22nd instant, the New York Times published an editorial article on the subject, of which the following is an extract:—

"While the activities of Macmillan are to be multifarious, the discovery of land north of Alaska which could be claimed as American territory would stand out as his greatest achievement. . . . Perhaps the new land could never be used, not even for an aeronautical station between the North American continent and Japan, but geographers would be no less elated than the plain American. The North Pole is ours (if we want it) by virtue of Peary's planting the national colours. Why shouldn't the land that has been indicated by peculiar ice formations seen in the polar sea, by significant tidal variations, and by the sight of birds' nests and eggs in the drift that comes from somewhere in the uncharted space, be found and claimed by Americans?"

On the other hand, the Washington Evening Star, of the same date, contained an article by Mr. David Lawrence, whom I know to be closely in touch with the Department of State, to the effect that the United States Government deprecated at the present time any discussion over any possible discoveries of land which might be made by the Macmillan Expedition. "As it is now," wrote Mr. Lawrence, "the claims of the past are very vague and permit of plenty of controversy. But the Washington Government sees no profit in arguing about it. The Canadian Government has not made formal protest to the United States, contenting itself with informal conversations on the subject with the Navy Department, which is sending the flyers to the north. . . . When Macmillan asked the status of the case, he was told there was no status. Since then, however, he has announced that he will claim the land for the State of Maine, and a naval officer at a banquet, supposed to be speaking for Secretary Wilbur, is quoted as having asserted the Navy would back up such a claim. These statements are not taken seriously by the Washington Government, which lets it be known that discussion of the subject in advance serves no useful purpose."

A copy of this despatch is being communicated to His Excellency the Governor-General of Canada.

I have, &c.,
H. G. CHILTON.

Sir, Department of State, Washington, 19th June, 1925.
I BEG to acknowledge the receipt of your note No. 627, dated 15th June, 1925, concerning the proposed Macmillan Exploring Expedition. It is the understanding of this Department that the expedition in question will sail from Wiscasset, Maine, on 20th June, directly to Etah, Greenland, and that no flights over Baffin Island are contemplated. The planes attached to the expedition are expected to fly from Etah across Ellesmere Island to Axel Heiberg Land, and to establish a base there from which exploration flights to the northward and westward may be made.

A copy of your note has been forwarded to the other interested Departments of this Government and, upon receipt of further information, I shall address a communication to you dealing with the other questions raised in your note.

In order that full information may be available for use in studying these questions, I shall be grateful if you will inform me what constitutes a post of the Royal Mounted Police, mentioned in the second paragraph of your note, and the establishment thereof; where such posts have been established; how frequently they are visited; and whether they are permanently occupied, and, if so, by whom.

I desire to thank you for the offer of co-operation by any Canadian agency which may temporarily be in the same territory with the Macmillan Expedition, and I am sure that the persons responsible for the expedition will also appreciate the kind offer of the Canadian Government. The scientific character of the expedition and the experience of those participating in it give assurance that useful data and information of value to the world will unquestionably result from their efforts.

Accept, etc.,
FRANK B. KELLOGG.

WITH reference to my despatch No. 313 of the 24th ultimo, and to previous correspondence regarding the Macmillan Expedition to the Arctic regions, I have the honour to inform you that the Norwegian Chargé d'Affaires called at His Majesty's Embassy in Washington on 31st July and inquired of the Resident Secretary whether any reliance could be placed upon reports which had reached him through the Norwegian Consul in Montreal and the Associated press that the Dominion Government had addressed an official communication to the United States Government setting out their views as regards the sovereignty of territory which might be traversed or discovered by the Expedition in question in the far north.

Mr. Steen was informed that the question of sovereignty over these regions had not formed the subject of discussions between the Governments of Canada and of the United States, whereupon he replied that if it were raised the Norwegian Government would be interested as the Islands of Axel Heiburg and Ellesmere had originally been discovered by Norwegian explorers.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE to THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

[Answered by No. 86.]

(Secret.)

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 31st August, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to inform Your Excellency that the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs has received from His Majesty's Embassy at Washington copies of correspondence with you regarding the United States Macmillan Expedition to the Arctic Regions and the claims of the Dominion Government to the territories lying north of the Canadian mainland as far as the North Pole.

2. The Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, who has read the correspondence with much interest, has suggested that as, in the event of any conflict of view arising in future between the United States and Canada with regard to the regions in question, it would be a matter of importance to establish the facts of discovery, occupation, etc., and it would be useful if all the available evidence and material of this nature could be collected and placed on record in some form that would render it readily available at any time.

3. I have asked the Hydrographic Department of the Admiralty to prepare a memorandum,* for communication to your Ministers, containing any information bearing on the subject that may be in the possession of that Department, supplementary to the information contained in your Secret despatch of the 4th of June† to Sir Esmé Howard and the memorandum‡ compiled in 1904 by Dr. W. F. King in connexion with the question of the status of Hudson Bay (see Lord Minto's despatch of 23rd June, 1904§). If your Government have already taken steps for the compilation of a memorandum on similar lines, I should be glad to be furnished with a copy for communication to the Hydrographic Department, with a view to avoiding duplication of labour.

I have, &c.,
L. S. AMERY.

* See Enclosure 1 in No. 84. † Sub-enclosure 2 in Enclosure 1 in No. 77. ‡ See Foreign Office Confidential Print No. 8449. § 23704/04: not printed; it enclosed a copy of the memorandum in question.

DOMINIONS OFFICE to FOREIGN OFFICE.

SIR, Downing Street, 31st August, 1925.
I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Amery to acknowledge the receipt of your letters of the 20th of July,* the 7th of August,† and the 20th of August,‡ forwarding copies of despatches from his Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Washington regarding the United States Macmillan Expedition to the Arctic Regions, and the claims of the Canadian Government to the territories lying north of the Canadian Mainland as far as the North Pole, and to transmit to you, for the information of Mr. Secretary Chamberlain, the enclosed copies of a despatch§ which has been addressed to the Governor-General of Canada, and of a letter|| to the Admiralty.

2. It is proposed to communicate to the Canadian Government full information as to the position in regard to the Antarctic regions. They have already asked for this, and it is obviously desirable that they should have it before them when considering the position in regard to the Arctic regions.

3. It will be observed that in the despatch to the Governor-General Mr. Amery has not incorporated the observation made in paragraph 2 of your letter of the 20th July* to the effect that any dispute between Canada and the United States with regard to the ownership of the lands now in question will turn on the facts of discovery and occupation, etc., more than on diplomatic correspondence. It does not seem to him to be desirable to interfere with the discretion of the Canadian Government as to the selection of the material which it should bring forward in support of its case.

4. As a matter of fact it would appear that there is much material of a diplomatic character which the Canadian Government could use effectively to defend its claim against any pretensions of the United States. The whole history of the boundary between Canada and the United States is, in fact, inconsistent with any idea of a new boundary with the United States being set up to the North. Apart from this general consideration the following facts appear to be relevant:—

(1) The United States negotiators of the Treaty of 1818 insisted on obtaining a liberty to fish on the coast of Labrador indefinitely northwards, thereby implying that the British jurisdiction on the eastern part of the North American Continent had a similar extent.

(2) Reference is made in the Governor-General's despatch of the 4th June† to the United States-Russian Treaty of 1867. The views indicated were adopted by His Majesty's Government in the Behring Sea Arbitration. In the British Case (Parliamentary Paper United States No. 1 of 1893) it was submitted (pages 98-99) with regard to the western line of delimitation laid down in the 1867 Treaty:—"It is therefore very clear that the geographical limit thus projected towards the North could have been intended only to define the ownership of such islands, if any, as might subsequently be discovered in this imperfectly explored ocean; and when therefore the Treaty proceeded to define the course of 'the same western limit' (cette limite occidentale) from the initial point in Behring Strait to the southward and westward across Behring Sea, it is obvious that it continued to possess the same character and value." In his speech before the Tribunal on the 1st June, 1893, Sir Richard Webster (Proceedings, page 1283) said in the same connection:—

"Would you let me run the pointer along that line, Mr. President? It goes over 20 degrees of latitude right up to the North Pole. They have got all the islands on the right hand side of that line. If there are islands on the east of that line, whatever they are, the United States have got them."

The provisions in the Anglo-Russian Treaty of 1825 as to the 141st Meridian were incorporated in the Treaty of 1867, and must obviously be interpreted in the same manner. It may also be mentioned that in his note of 17th December, 1890 (C. 6253), Mr. Blaine, speaking of the provisions in the 1825 Treaty regarding the 141st Meridian, said (page 45) that the British negotiators might have described their attitude as follows:—

* No. 77. † No. 78. ‡ No. 79. § No. 80. || No. 82. ¶ Sub-enclosure 2 in Enclosure 1 in No. 77.

"As to the body of the Continent above the point of intersection at the 141st degree of longitude, we know nothing, nor do you. It is a vast unexplored wilderness. We have no settlements there and you have none. We have therefore no conflicting interests with your Government. The simplest division of that territory is to accept the prolongation of the 141st degree of longitude to the Arctic Ocean as the boundary. East of it the territory shall be British. West of it the territory shall be Russian."

This passage of the note related only to the land boundary, but it would have been clearly incompatible with the whole scheme of the settlement with Russia, if Russia had been free to annex islands eastward of the 141st Meridian.

5. According to a Washington telegram published in the Sunday Times of 23rd August, Captain Macmillan's Expedition has been ordered southward.

I am, &c.,
C. T. DAVIS.

SIR, Downing Street, 31st August, 1925.
I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Amery to transmit to you, to be laid before the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, the accompanying copy of correspondence,* as noted in the margin, regarding the United States Macmillan Expedition to the Arctic Regions and the claims of the Canadian Government to the territories lying north of the Canadian mainland as far as the North Pole.

2. It will be seen from Foreign Office letter of 20th July,† that the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs has expressed the opinion that, in the event of any conflict of view arising in future between the United States and Canada with regard to the regions in question, it would be a matter of importance to establish the facts of discovery and occupation, and that this point has been put to the Dominion Government.

3. Mr. Amery would be grateful if a memorandum could be furnished by the Hydrographic Department containing any information bearing on the subject that may be on record in that Department, supplementary to the information contained in the Governor-General's despatch of 4th June to His Majesty's Ambassador at Washington (enclosure in Foreign Office letter of 20th July‡), and the memorandum compiled in 1904 by Dr. W. F. King, Chief Astronomer of the Dominion of Canada, in connexion with the question of the status of Hudson Bay. A copy of Dr. King's memorandum§ is enclosed herewith for convenience of reference.

SIR, British Embassy, Manchester, Mass., 21st August, 1925.
 WITH reference to my despatch No. 1265 of the 4th instant,* I have the honour to report a statement in to-day's press to the effect that no further attempts will be made by the Macmillan Expedition to explore by air the vast stretches of sea and land lying to the westward of their base at Etah, Greenland. It appears that aeroplanes have proved of little use, in addition to which the weather conditions have been entirely unfavourable. It is expected that the Macmillan Expedition will leave for the United States early in September, carrying out on their way home flights and explorations over Baffin Land and Labrador.

A copy of this despatch is being communicated to the Governor-General of Canada.

ADMIRALTY to DOMINIONS OFFICE.

SIR, Admiralty, S.W.1, 2nd October, 1925.
 WITH reference to your letter of the 31st August, 1925,† regarding the claims of the Canadian Government to territories in Arctic regions, I am commanded by My Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty to transmit herewith, for the information of the Secretary of State, some notes on Dr. King's memorandum of 1904‡ and the Governor-General's despatch of 4th June, 1925,§ which have been compiled in the Hydrographic Department.

These notes contain a certain amount of supplementary information and bring the memorandum as far up-to-date as is possible with the information available in this Department, which possesses practically no unpublished material relative to Arctic exploration.

I am to add that in some respects the opinions expressed in both the memorandum and the despatch appear open to criticism, but it has not in general been thought necessary to discuss these, except as relating to the geographical facts involved.

I am, &c.,
 CHARLES WALKER.

Enclosure 1 in No. 84.

NOTES ON DR. KING'S MEMORANDUM "THE BRITISH TITLE TO THE ISLANDS AND WATERS NORTH OF THE CANADIAN MAINLAND."†

(See Lord Minto's Confidential despatch of 23rd June, 1904.||)

THE following notes correct various points of detail in the above memorandum. It should be noted, however, that it has largely been compiled from works, such as Barrow's "Voyages into the Arctic Regions," which are themselves compilations—and not from the original publications.

In general, the corrections have been confined to points of geographical and historical fact.

(Introduction.)

Page 2, line 28.—The suggestion that the United States of America may wish to claim Greenland need not now be considered, as Denmark has obtained practically general recognition of her sovereignty over the whole of Greenland.

Line 50.—The distinction drawn between acts of taking possession performed by private explorers and by the officers of Government expeditions is theoretically correct, but not of much practical importance. Territorial claims based upon discovery only have generally proved of little force, whatever the status of the discoverer.

Page 3, line 29.—The arguments to be drawn from the evidence afforded by maps are of little value, unless the authority for any particular national colouring is quoted on the map or can be otherwise traced—failing this, there is no evidence that the attribution is not either biased or a matter of guesswork.

Page 3, line 38.—The claim that all the inland seas, etc., enclosed among the islands of the Archipelago should be regarded as territorial waters will now need reconsideration in the light of the discussions at the Imperial Conference, 1923, and the subsequent correspondence.

Pages 5 and 6.—General remarks re whaling stations. So far as the information in this Department extends, many of these stations are still occupied to some extent, but it is understood that whaling on the eastern side of the Archipelago has considerably diminished.

Page 6, line 7 from bottom.—The survey of the coastline of Victoria Land and Prince Albert Land has now been practically completed, by Hansen, of Amundsen's Expedition, in 1905, and Storkerson, of Stefansson's Expedition, in 1917.

Page 7.—In view of the large number of occasions on which "Ross" is credited with having formally taken possession of various areas, it should be noted that no distinction is made between Captain John Ross, R.N., and Commander J. C. Ross, R.N., his nephew, who accompanied him, and did most of the exploring work of the expedition. Neither was officially employed by the British Government, the expedition being a private venture.

(Enclosure 4, page 10 onwards.) General remarks.—It has not been thought necessary to point out in detail slight misprints, such as Hartsene for Hartstene, Mechem for Mecham, etc., as these are generally correctly printed elsewhere in the memorandum. One or two of the early voyages (e.g., James' of 1631) are put down as "Public" although actually financed by private subscribers, but in those times it was not easy to draw any distinction between public (i.e., official) and private ventures.

Page 15, column 1, "Back, English, Public" (1833-35).—This was in reality a private expedition, although the Government subscribed to it. It was designed for the relief of the Rosses, who had then been missing nearly four years.

Page 16, column 1.—"Pullen, English, Public." This should be "Kellett & Moore, English, Public." Pullen was a lieutenant of the expedition.

Page 21 (Hayes' voyage).—The statement that Hayes reached lat. 81°35' N. is exceedingly doubtful. His chart was afterwards found to be very inaccurate. His probable furthest north was approximately 80°11' N.

Page 27, column 1 (Sverdrup's Expedition).—This was not an official expedition, as stated. The Norwegian Government lent Nansen's ship, the "Fram," and paid for her refit. The expenses of the expedition were subscribed for by Messrs. Axel Heiberg and Ringnes Bros.

NOTES, SUPPLEMENTARY TO DR. KING'S MEMORANDUM, re LATER EXPLORATIONS IN THE CANADIAN ARCTIC ARCHIPELAGO.

THE following is a short list of expeditions which are known to have worked in the Canadian Archipelago since 1904, when Dr. King's memorandum was compiled. It should be noted, however, that in the majority of cases very little information as to the work of these expeditions is available in this Department, and that the more important expeditions (those of Bernier and Stefansson) were working for the Canadian Government, who presumably have better information concerning their work than any other body can possess.

Amundsen.

In 1903-1905, R. Amundsen (Norwegian) made the N.W. Passage, in the "Gjoa," traversing Lancaster Sound, Pell Sound, Franklin Strait, and wintering on the E. side of K. William Id., thence through Dolphin and Union Straits. Hansen, of this expedition, discovered a short stretch of new coastline N. of Victoria land, which he named K. Haakon VII land. It is not specifically stated in Hansen's published account of this trip whether formal possession was taken of this discovery or not, but there is no likelihood of any Norwegian claim to it being put forward.

Low ("Neptune").

In 1903-04 the (Canadian) D.G.S. "Neptune" made the first of a series of voyages promoted by the Canadian Government for the purpose of patrolling the waters of the Archipelago, administering justice, etc. The itinerary of the voyage was chiefly confined to the waters of Baffin's Bay and Smith Sound entrance.

Harrison.

In 1905-07 A. H. Harrison (English) endeavoured to explore the Beaufort Sea area (the large unexplored region westward of the Archipelago), and made a voyage from the mouth of the Mackenzie River to Banks Island, but discovered no new land.

Bernier (1).

In 1906-07 D.G.S. "Arctic" under Capt. J. E. Bernier made the first of several similar voyages to that of the "Neptune," hoisting the flag at the S. end of Ellesmere Island and at numerous points in Barrow Strait.

Leffingwell-Mikkelsen.

In 1907 Leffingwell and Mikkelsen made a sledge journey over the ice into the Beaufort Sea, but only reached 72° N. in 149 W. No land was seen.

(Storkerson, in 1918, reached 74° N. in the same longitude, also without sighting land.)

Rasmussen.

In 1907 Knud Rasmussen, a Dane, crossed from Greenland to Ellesmere Island. No details are available in this Department of this expedition, which was one of a series made by the same explorer, directed chiefly towards the exploration of N. and W. Greenland.

Bernier (2).

In 1908-09 Capt. Bernier, in the D.G.S. "Arctic" made a second voyage, reaching further W. than that of 1906-07, and hoisting the flag on Banks Island, Melville Island, and P. Albert Land, as well as in Barrow Strait and at the S. end of Ellesmere Island.

Bernier (3).

In 1910 Capt. Bernier made a third patrol and exploring voyage in the "Arctic," making extensive discoveries in Prince Regent, Admiralty and Pond Inlets.

It is understood that this officer has since been employed in further patrol work in the Archipelago, but no information is available as to the exact regions visited.

Stefansson.

In 1913-18 V. Stefansson, acting under the Canadian Government, made extensive explorations in the Archipelago, discovering Brock, Borden, Meighan and other Islands, and correcting a good deal of Sverdrup's charting of his discoveries, especially in the region of the Ringnes Islands and K. Christian Island.

Macmillan.

In 1913-17 D. P. Macmillan, with the American "Crocker Land" Expedition, made considerable explorations in Ellesmere Island and its vicinity. In 1914, starting from Etah, in N.W. Greenland, he crossed Ellesmere Island to C. Thos. Hubbard in Axel Heiberg Island, and thence to the reported position of Peary's "Crocker Land" in the Beaufort Sea (approximately 83° N. 103° W.) which was not found.

In 1916 Ekblaw of this expedition crossed Ellesmere Island, while Macmillan visited A. Ringnes and Christian Islands. In 1917 a detailed survey was made of part of the E. coast of Ellesmere Island.

Rasmussen (2).

In 1922-24 Rasmussen conducted his "5th Thule Expedition" (the fifth to start from his base at Thule, N.W. Greenland). Its route is understood to have embraced a considerable portion of the E. end of the Archipelago, but details of this have not yet been received in this Department, with the exception of a preliminary chart of the region between Admiralty Inlet and the W. coast of Baffin Land.

NOTES ON THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S DESPATCH TO WASHINGTON, No. 104 OF 4TH JUNE, 1925.*

(Introductory Portion, p. 3.)—It is thought probable that Macmillan's selection of Axel Heiberg Island as a base for his aeroplanes is due simply to his knowledge of the vicinity, gained during the Croker Land Expedition of 1913-17, which he commanded. This employed practically the same plan—a base at Etah, Greenland, and an advanced base at Cape Thomas Hubbard, Axel Heiberg Island, crossing Ellesmere Island en route. Both for the purposes of the Croker Land expedition and his present one, Axel Heiberg Island is well situated as a convenient jumping-off place into the unexplored region of the Beaufort Sea. It is suggested that these considerations fully account for the Macmillan Expedition crossing Axel Heiberg and Ellesmere Islands, without it being necessary to conclude that these were specially selected because Canada's title to them was considered weaker than that to the remainder of the Archipelago.

It may be pointed out that it is at least doubtful whether any land larger than a small island exists in the Beaufort Sea—that land of continental character exists there is very improbable. In any case, it would be just as likely to lie to the W. of meridian 141° W.—and, hence, to be prima facie American—as to the E., while the ice conditions of that region render the existence of land in it a point of no commercial importance.

(Discovery, p. 5.)—So far as the title conferred by discovery goes, it is probably true that the great majority of the islands forming the Archipelago should be British, and hence Canadian. But it may be pointed out that while, for example, Baffin undoubtedly sighted part of the S.E. coast of Ellesmere Island in 1616, it does not convey a quite correct impression to state that he discovered Ellesmere Island in that year. Its configuration and extent—even the fact that it was an island—were not fully known until over two and a-half centuries later. As regards the actual extent of its coastline explored by other navigators, both America and Norway have claims comparable to that of this country.

In any case, claims based upon discovery only are of little force compared with those based upon occupation or control. It is thought that the establishment by Canada of posts upon Ellesmere Island and others of the Archipelago constitutes a much more effective claim to their ownership, and (here contiguity may reasonably be pleaded) to that of the remainder, than any number of arguments based upon prior discovery only.

SIR,

Ottawa, 9th October, 1925.

WITH reference to your Secret despatch of the 31st August,* on the subject of the United States Macmillan Expedition to the Arctic regions and the claims of the Canadian Government to Arctic territories, I have the honour to convey the thanks of the Canadian Government to you for arranging to have a memorandum prepared by the Hydrographic Department of the Admiralty containing any information on the subject in the possession of that Department.

Steps have been taken for the compilation of a more comprehensive memorandum and it is expected that it will be completed shortly after the return to Canada this month of the officials in charge, when copies will be duly forwarded.

It is thought that it may be of interest to you to note a sympathetic discussion on this subject in the October issue of a United States periodical Foreign Affairs written by Mr. David Hunter Miller of New York after an interview with Mr. James White of the Canadian Department of Justice. Accordingly, two copies of this review† are sent herewith.

(No. 1847.)

SIR,

British Embassy, Washington, D.C., 4th December, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to transmit herewith a copy of a despatch which I have received from His Majesty's Consul in Detroit, in which he reports the details of a meeting of prominent citizens of Detroit interested in aviation, which may prove of some interest to the appropriate Department of His Majesty's Government.

2. Captain Christie, the Air Attaché to this Embassy, to whom this despatch was shown, is inclined to attach little importance to the proposed plan for flying across the North Pole to Spitzbergen, since, in the first place, the extreme range of flight of a modern aeroplane is 2,200 miles, and the estimated distance of the proposed flight being 1,950 miles scarcely leaves a workable margin for error, bad weather, etc. In the second place, Captain Christie points out that it would presumably be necessary to land in order to place a flag on the land which it is hoped to find between Point Barrow and the North Pole, and that previous experience has shown that it is almost impossible to effect a safe landing in those regions. Finally, even the avowed object of the trip, which is the planting of an American flag on land believed to exist as stated above between Point Barrow and the North Pole, would not appear to be worthy of very serious consideration, since, as I understand it, the planting of a flag on territory without subsequent occupation cannot be held to establish any claims to ownership.

3. Nevertheless, I have thought it desirable to forward to you a copy of this report, in order that it may be on record, should the plan proposed therein in fact be carried out.

SIR,

British Consulate, Detroit, Mich., 25th November, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to report details of a meeting of prominent citizens of Detroit interested in aviation which was held in a private room, and of which nothing has transpired in the newspapers. These details have been obtained from a thoroughly reliable source and have been given me confidentially. They are as follows:—

2. Present were Henry Ford, W. B. Mayo, chief engineer of the Ford Motor Company, L. Buhl, representing one of the wealthiest Detroit families, W. B. Scripps, a leading newspaper proprietor, Harold Emmons, Howard Coffin, Anthony Fokker (the Dutch aeronaut), E. Muller, Managing Editor of the Detroit News, Major Pickering, General Manager of the North American Newspaper Alliance, Captain Wilkins (who is, or was, an Australian, and claimed to have accompanied Shackleton on one of his Antarctic voyages), and a few others.

3. Major Pickering and Captain Wilkins presented a plan for flying, early in March, in an aeroplane, from Point Barrow, Alaska, the northernmost point of the North American mainland, across the North Pole to Spitzbergen, a total distance of 1,950 miles, the object of the trip being to place an American flag on any land which (as scientists believe) exists between Point Barrow and the North Pole, the theory being that this land will be of immense strategic importance when trans-polar flights become common and the Arctic Circle becomes a common route for inter-continental transportation.

4. It was stated at the meeting that Amundsen is planning a similar attempt in a semi-rigid Italian airship and that there is reason to believe that the French are contemplating this venture for the spring; and that therefore the American flight should be made as early as weather conditions would permit which it was hoped would be early in March.

5. Major Pickering announced that the North American Newspaper Alliance would contribute $25,000.00, and Captain Wilkins stated that he would personally give $15,000.00 towards the expenses, and it was agreed that the others present would supply $50,000.00 so as to make up the $90,000.00 which, it was estimated, would be needed.

6. During the discussion as to the kind of aeroplane to be used, Mr. Fokker stated that he had an aeroplane in Europe which he could bring over to the United States in two months, and which he felt confident could make the flight. Mr. Evans suggested that the Sikorsky plane now under construction in New York might be able to negotiate the trip. (This detail was left over for further consideration.)

7. At the meeting a question was asked about Canada's possible attitude, but the topic was not pursued.

I have, &c.,

JOHN CAMERON.

SECRET. Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister:—

Begins: British Ambassador at Washington recently reported that possibility of further Disarmament Conference had been considerably discussed in United States, and that, in event of President issuing invitations to Conference limited to Naval Disarmament, there was little doubt that he would be supported by practically unanimous opinion of country. Sir Esmé Howard expressed opinion that, provided circumstances in Europe and Japan not unfavourable, it seemed almost certain that some such proposal would emanate from United States Government before end of present year. Retiring United States Ambassador in course of farewell conversation with Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs prior to his departure to take up post of Secretary of State at Washington, referred to question of Disarmament, and Mr. Kellogg and Mr. Chamberlain agreed in thinking that there was little or no prospect of Continental Powers agreeing to Conference at Washington on question of land armaments, but Mr. Chamberlain thought better prospects might attend Conference similar to that of 1921-22 summoned to deal further with limitation of naval armaments. Matter has been considered by Cabinet, and our strong view is that, especially as prospect of disarmament Conference under auspices of League of Nations in which United States would participate now seems remote, suggestion for further Conference at Washington on Naval Disarmament should be welcomed as step towards checking International competition in armaments and lessening risk of future wars. Accordingly, it is proposed to send to British Ambassador despatch of which following is summary:—

Begins: In course of farewell conversation between United States Ambassador and Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs prospects of further disarmament and possibility of holding another Conference at Washington to continue and develop work of 1922 Conference were touched upon. Unnecessary to mention how gladly British Government and other Governments of the Empire availed themselves of the opportunity of participating in that Conference or their hearty and immediate response to general scheme proposed by United States Secretary of State. No Governments more readily accepted nor have any more loyally fulfilled obligations then subscribed by most important naval powers. Decisions of Conference have done much to restrict growth of fresh International competition in naval armaments, and to relieve burden of taxation which would otherwise have fallen to be borne by tax-payers of respective countries. British Ambassador is asked to repeat formally to United States Secretary of State assurance given in conversation to United States Ambassador that His Majesty's Government would cordially welcome summoning of a new Conference to be held at Washington, and would most readily join with the other great naval powers in further limiting naval armaments and expenditure. It will be for convening Power to consider in what directions progress may be most readily achieved. Obvious that there are geographical and other reasons for which ratio already agreed on for capital ships could not be applied to case of cruisers. But His Majesty's Government have no doubt that with co-operation of the other Naval Powers further substantial progress could be made. In particular, and without excluding other matters, it would seem to His Majesty's Government that discussion on all or any of following points might well lead to an agreement which would sensibly relieve burdens on national finances and lessen danger of war:—

- (1.) Dimensions and armament of cruisers.
- (2.) Armament of aircraft carriers.
- (3.) Total number dimensions and armament of submarines.
- (4.) Dimensions and armament of destroyers. Ends.

Before despatch is sent we should be glad to know whether you concur in our general attitude and have any observations on terms of proposed communication. If the Conference takes place we should attach much importance to arranging for British Empire Delegation, including separate representation of Dominions, on lines adopted at Paris Peace Conference and at Washington in 1921.

develop the work of the 1922 Conference, and (subject to modification(s) suggested later) concur in the terms of proposed despatch to His Majesty's Ambassador at Washington.

A discussion on particular points mentioned by you would at this stage almost certainly result in an appreciable reduction of armaments and considerably relieve the burden on the national finances of the countries concerned. In this connexion we believe the atmosphere in which such a conference would open is better than that in which the 1922 Conference opened. The excellent results achieved at the latter Conference and the manner in which the agreement arrived at has been carried out give assurance of success in developing the work already done.

The Commonwealth Government, however, whilst cordially welcoming proposal(s) and intimating its desire to be represented thereat along the lines suggested by you, i.e., by a British Empire delegation, including separate representation of the Dominions, would like to know the date of the suggested conference and its probable duration in order that the question of representation can be further considered.

Government further suggest that before final acceptance is given, as you apparently concur in principle that the United States as convening nation will decide in what direction progress is most likely to be achieved, Agenda should be first submitted to all the Powers interested. The lines suggested by you are generally acceptable and even welcome to us and provided the Empire is amply safeguarded by reservations with regard to the Agenda we concur. Ends.

We note with pleasure the statement as to the importance of arranging for separate representation of Dominions in British Empire Delegation. 4TH APRIL. Secret. Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister:—

Begins: My message of 23rd February.* All Dominion Governments and Government of India have expressed concurrence in our attitude in connexion with suggested further Disarmament Conference at Washington and have indicated general agreement with terms of proposed despatch to British Ambassador. After further consideration, however, we have come to conclusion that in view of later developments it is not desirable to send despatch at this moment. It seems doubtful whether United States Government would welcome such an initiative from us and whether it might not actually injure rather than promote prospects of such a conference being summoned by them. Moreover, direct initiative by us would be distasteful to France, and it seems inexpedient to give occasion needlessly for any difference of opinion with her while we are engaged in discussion of the difficult and far more urgent questions raised by military disarmament, Cologne and security generally.

We propose therefore to take no action at present, though if approached by United States Government we should at once state our willingness to join in such a conference if assent of principal Naval Powers can be obtained. Baldwin. Ends.

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W. 1, 11th June, 1925.

WITH reference to the letter from this Department of 28th March,‡ and previous correspondence regarding any eventual further conference on naval disarmament at Washington, I am directed by Mr. Secretary Chamberlain to transmit to you herewith a copy of a despatch from His Majesty's Ambassador at Washington in which Sir Esmé Howard puts forward suggestions regarding the question of the issue of invitations to such a conference to the governments of the self-governing Dominions.

2. Mr. Chamberlain would be glad to learn whether the proposed procedure would be acceptable to each of the self-governing Dominions.

I am, &c.,
R. L. CRAIGIE.

Enclosure in No. 100.

(No. 734.)

SIR,

British Embassy, Washington, D.C., 14th May, 1925.

I NOTICE, with reference to your despatch No. 623 of the 21st of April last, that in the telegram,§ of which a copy was enclosed, sent from the Secretary of State for the Colonies to the Governors-General of Canada and the Union of South Africa on the 4th of April at 1 p.m., it is stated that His Majesty's Government are consulting me to ascertain how invitations issued for any Disarmament Conference by the United States Government can best be addressed to the Dominions as well as to Great Britain. Although there is now no immediate prospect of any such invitations being issued, I feel that it would be advisable to have the procedure with regard to invitations to be issued to the Dominions settled well beforehand so that no delay may arise owing to possible differences of opinion between His Majesty's Government and the Dominion Governments over this question. I therefore venture to suggest, although it is possible that objections to such a course may occur to the different Governments interested, that the simplest plan to arrange for the satisfactory issue of such invitations would be for the United States Government to address them to His Majesty's Representative at Washington, whoever he may be, as representing for the time being at any rate the Dominion interests in this country.

I need hardly point out that I am almost daily sending communications to the State Department under instructions from the Canadian Government and receiving notes from the Secretary of State for communication to the Government at Ottawa. It would seem, therefore, that no new precedent would be created if the United States Government were to send me invitations of this kind addressed to the Dominion Governments which I could forward directly to them, forwarding at the same time copies to His Majesty's Government.

I should be grateful to learn in due course whether this procedure commends itself to His Majesty's Government and whether it proves acceptable to the Dominion Governments concerned in order that I may be in a position as soon as the opportunity arises to inform the United States Government accordingly.

I have, &c..

ESMÉ HOWARD.

MR. E. J. HARDING to MR. R. L. CRAIGIE (FOREIGN OFFICE).

DEAR CRAIGIE,

Downing Street, 10th August, 1925.

YOUR letter of 11th June* contains a despatch from Sir E. Howard dealing with the question of invitations to the Dominion Governments should the United States Government decide to summon another Disarmament Conference.

This despatch raises questions of considerable complexity from our point of view.

We gather from Sir E. Howard's despatch that it would be his intention to have at any rate an informal discussion with the United States Department of State before the invitations were actually sent; but it occurs to us that points might possibly be raised by the United States as to communicating all the invitations through the Ambassador; e.g., they might raise the question of sending the invitation for the Irish Free State to Mr. Smiddy, and the Canadian invitation to the Canadian Minister if, by that time, one had been appointed.

Even if all the invitations were to be sent to the Ambassador, it might be well to settle in advance the details as to how he should then proceed. No doubt it would be convenient that the invitations to the more distant Dominions should be forwarded (or telegraphed) direct by the Ambassador; but there are various alternatives as regards the Irish Free State and Canada (assuming the Canadian Minister had been appointed) which it seems necessary to consider, i.e., whether the Ambassador should communicate the invitations to the respective Dominion Ministers in Washington for transmission to their governments, or transmit them himself to the Irish Free State and Canadian Governments, or (in the case of the Irish Free State) transmit the invitation through London.

If it were settled that there should be a single invitation addressed to the Ambassador but mentioning the Dominions and India separately, similar points would seem to arise.

The underlying question, of course, is how best to secure that action as regards the replies is co-ordinated.

Should the procedure adopted admit of the Dominions replying direct to the United States Government it would be very awkward if any such direct reply should be a refusal of the invitation, since it would seem essential that any agreements resulting from the proposed Conference should be signed on behalf of all parts of the British Empire.

Before arriving at any definite conclusion Mr. Amery would if at all possible wish that Davis should have an opportunity of discussing the whole position personally with Sir E. Howard. The latter is, I understand, now in Switzerland. If he is returning to England before going back to Washington, could a discussion be arranged? It would be advisable, no doubt, if this suggestion can be carried out, that you or Vansittart should be present.

Yours sincerely,

E. J. HARDING.

NOTE ON DISCUSSION HELD AT THE DOMINIONS OFFICE REGARDING THE MANNER IN WHICH INVITATIONS TO ANY DISARMAMENT CONFERENCE MIGHT BEST BE ADDRESSED TO THE DOMINIONS AS WELL AS TO THIS COUNTRY.

SIR ESMÉ HOWARD and Mr. Craigie called on Thursday morning, the 8th October, to discuss the question of the manner in which invitations to any Disarmament Conference might best be addressed by the United States Government to the Dominions as well as to this country.

Mr. Harding raised first the question of procedure in the event of the invitations being issued by the State Department in Washington, and in this connexion drew Sir E. Howard's attention to the second paragraph of the Ambassador's Note to the United States Government of 24th June, 1924,* in connexion with the appointment of an Irish Free State Minister. "Matters which are of Imperial concern or which affect other Dominions in the Commonwealth in common with the Irish Free State will continue to be handled as heretofore by this Embassy," and to the similar paragraph in Professor Smiddy's letter of instructions "The Free State shall not purport to deal with matters affecting the whole Commonwealth." It appeared to follow from these paragraphs that, if invitations to the Conference were issued in Washington, the invitations to Dominion Governments should be addressed to His Majesty's Ambassador. Sir E. Howard was of opinion, however, that, whatever might be the strict constitutional position as laid down in the above paragraphs, the United States Government would probably think it incumbent upon them, if they delivered the invitations in Washington and it was decided to send separate invitations to the Dominions, to send the invitation to the Irish Free State Government through Professor Smiddy—and the same would be true of course with regard to the Canadian Minister if and when appointed.

On further consideration, however, Sir E. Howard was inclined to think that this difficulty need not arise as the normal course was for a Government issuing invitations to an International Conference to issue such invitations through its own representatives in the capitals of the countries which it desired to invite. It was generally agreed that from every point of view it was desirable that the invitations should be delivered in London, in which case the normal procedure would be for the replies to be returned through the same channel, i.e., through the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs and the United States Ambassador in London, and the difficulty of co-ordinating action as to the replies of the various Dominions would be reduced to a minimum.

It was accordingly agreed that it was desirable that in the event of the United States Government deciding to summon another Disarmament Conference the Ambassador should take a suitable opportunity to let the United States Government know informally that the normal method of procedure with regard to the issue of invitations in such cases, viz., that the invitation should be communicated through the United States Ambassador in London (as was done in the case of the Washington Disarmament Conference) would also suit best His Majesty's Government, and further that it would be convenient if, following the example of the Genoa Conference, separate invitations were sent for the Dominions. If it was impossible to persuade the United States Government to send separate invitations, then it would be necessary to fall back on a general invitation mentioning the Dominions nominatim, but it was important to establish the principle of separate invitations if at all possible.

Since the discussion Mr. Craigie tells me that he thinks that the Foreign Office would consider it desirable that the proposed informal communication to the United States Government should be made at once and in general terms, rather than at the moment when the summoning of a general Disarmament Conference by the United States Government appears to be imminent, for the following reasons:—

1. That should the United States Government eventually decide to summon a Disarmament Conference they might move very rapidly as they did in the case of the last Conference, and it would be better to settle the details of procedure well in advance rather than at the last moment when the opportunity might be missed.

* Sub-enclosure in No. 32857/24 in Dominions No. 90.

2. It might be inconvenient, at a moment when the question of summoning a Conference was believed to be under the active consideration of the United States Government, to make a communication which might be construed by the United States Government as a hint that His Majesty's Government desired the summoning of such a Conference by the United States Government.

3. It is possible that the United States Government may desire to summon an international Conference on some other question, though we do not at the moment know that this is actually contemplated.

From the Dominions Office point of view there would appear no objection to the Ambassador approaching the United States Government now, but rather the contrary.

H. F. BATTERBEE.

TELEGRAM FROM FOREIGN OFFICE to SIR E. HOWARD. (WASHINGTON.)

(Sent 9.40 p.m., 25th November, 1925.)

(Received Dominions Office, 7th December, 1925.)

(No. 259.)

Your telegram No. 278 possibility of a Disarmament Conference in Washington and question of separate invitation for the Dominions.

2. In the event of the United States Government deciding to summon another Disarmament Conference, it is desirable that Your Excellency should take a suitable opportunity to let the United States Government know informally that the normal method of procedure with regard to the issue of invitations in such cases, viz., that the invitation should be communicated through the United States Ambassador in London (as was done in the case of the last Washington Conference) would also best suit His Majesty's Government. It would also be convenient if, following the precedent of the Genoa Conference in the case of the Dominions, separate invitations were sent through that channel for Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, New Zealand, the Union of South Africa, the Irish Free State and India. If, however, it should prove impossible to persuade the United States Government to send separate invitations, it would then be necessary to try to secure that a general invitation should be sent for the British Empire, in which Great Britain, the Dominions and India should be mentioned nominatim. As you know, from previous correspondence with the Dominions already communicated to you we should hope to arrange for a British Empire delegation including separate representation of the Dominions and India at any new disarmament conference on lines adopted at Washington in 1921, and it is important to establish the principle of separate invitations if possible.

3. The above is for your guidance in case the United States Government suddenly decide to summon a conference, but is not necessarily for immediate use. It seems difficult to judge what exactly are the intentions of the United States Government as regards summoning a conference. I regard Washington as impossible for land armaments including air, but as probably the best and in any case the necessary place for discussion of further naval restrictions. We should certainly accept an American invitation thus limited if other naval powers would participate, but we do not wish to have the appearance of suggesting one.

4. It would therefore appear preferable that you should not broach the subject of invitations unless you see reason to suppose that the United States Government have decided to summon a conference on this or any other subject.

SIXTH ASSEMBLY OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

ARBITRATION, SECURITY AND REDUCTION OF ARMAMENTS.

Resolution adopted by the Assembly on the Reports of the First and Third Committees, 25th September, 1925 (afternoon).

THE ASSEMBLY.

TAKING note of the declarations submitted to the Council and the Assembly of the League of Nations in respect of the Protocol for the Pacific Settlement of International Disputes and of the fact that the said Protocol has not up to the present received the ratifications necessary for putting it into operation immediately;

Convinced that the most urgent need of the present time is the re-establishment of mutual confidence between nations;

Declaring afresh that a war of aggression should be regarded as an international crime;

Regards favourably the effort made by certain nations to attain those objects by concluding arbitration conventions and treaties of mutual security conceived in the spirit of the Covenant of the League of Nations and in harmony with the principles of the Protocol (Arbitration, Security, Disarmament);

Records the fact that such agreements need not be restricted to a limited area but may be applied to the whole world;

Recommends that, after these conventions and treaties have been deposited with the League of Nations, the Council should examine them in order to report to the Seventh Assembly on the progress in general security brought about by such agreements;

Undertakes again to work for the establishment of peace by the sure method of arbitration, security and disarmament;

And, in conformity with the spirit of Article 8 of the Covenant, requests the Council to make a preparatory study with a view to a Conference for the Reduction and Limitation of Armaments in order that, as soon as satisfactory conditions have been assured from the point of view of general security as provided for in Resolution XIV of the Third Assembly, the said Conference may be convened and a general reduction and limitation of armaments may be realized.

18TH NOVEMBER. Confidential. Following from Prime Minister for [your Prime Minister] [President of Executive Council]:—

Begins: We have been considering questions raised by Resolution adopted by Sixth Assembly of League of Nations on subject of Arbitration, Security and Disarmament* last paragraph of which requests Council of League to make preparatory study with a view to a Conference for Reduction and Limitation of Armaments in order that, as soon as satisfactory conditions have been assured from point of view of general security, Conference may be convened and general reduction and limitation of armaments may be realized.

At its September session Council of League decided to refer this Resolution and relevant documents to Committee of Council composed of one representative of each State member of the Council which is to make necessary studies for determining questions which need to be submitted to preparatory study with a view to a possible future conference and to submit report to Council for examination at its December session. We understand Council of League intends that, after meeting of Council in December, preparatory study referred to above should be entrusted to body hitherto known as Co-ordination Committee reconstituted for the purpose.

It seems probable that situation which will result from signature of Treaty of Locarno will be held to justify further advance, and we consider it most important that preliminary work now to be undertaken as contemplated in Resolution of Assembly should be on safe lines and such as will ensure real progress. For this purpose our representative on Committee of Council should be in a position to give clear idea of what we think practicable and incidentally, perhaps even inferentially, what we think impracticable.

Accordingly we have decided to appoint Interdepartmental Committee here, presided over by Lord Cecil who, we propose, should be our representative on Committee of Council of League, to advise on attitude to be adopted by him at meeting of Council Committee on 3rd December.

Interdepartmental Committee will include representatives of Service Departments, and in view of importance of questions which will come before it we think that Dominion Governments may wish opportunity to be associated with its work. I should be glad to know whether you would desire arrangements made to this end, and, if so, whom you would nominate as your representative. It might be found convenient for Dominion representatives to be also present at Geneva for meeting of Council Committee.

Secret. The Assembly Resolution of course contemplates ultimate summoning of a general Disarmament Conference under the auspices of the League of Nations. Our present view is that such a Conference would be most appropriate as regards military and air disarmament, but that, having regard to Washington precedent and probable refusal of United States to take official part in League Conference, any further conference to consider naval disarmament would have the best prospect of success if summoned by the United States Government and held at Washington.

Appointment by British Government of Interdepartmental Committee to advise its representative on the Council Committee should prove helpful. If later development shows that there is a probability of a practical proposal being submitted to the members of the League, Canadian Government would probably appoint similar Interdepartmental Committee and would appreciate copies of any reports or recommendations then available. At the present time it is not apparent that any very effective consideration of the question involved could be given by participation of any Canadian representatives who would be available in the proceedings of the Interdepartmental Committee appointed to assist Lord Cecil particularly in view of the fact that the Council Committee is to meet in less than a fortnight. 2ND DECEMBER. Confidential. With reference to Prime Minister's message of 18th November,* regarding disarmament proposals of League of Nations, Interdepartmental Committee has drawn up following list of questions as to which preparatory study might be conducted with advantage:—

*No. 105.

Begins:

Questions relating to Land and Air Armaments.

(a) Is it practicable to limit the ultimate war strength of any country or must any measures of disarmament be confined to the peace strength?

(b) By what standards it is possible to measure the armaments of one country against the armaments of another, e.g., numbers, period of service, equipment, expenditure, etc.?

(c) On what principles would it be possible to draw up a scale of armaments permissible to the various countries, e.g., population, resources, geographical position, etc.?

(d) Admitting that disarmament depends on security, to what extent is regional disarmament possible in return for regional security; or is any scheme of disarmament impossible unless it is general? If regional disarmament is practicable, would it promote or lead up to general disarmament?

Questions relating to Air Armaments only.

(e) Is there any, and if so, what, device by which civil and military aircraft can be distinguished for the purposes of disarmament? If this is not practicable, how can the value of civil aircraft be computed in estimating the air strength of any country?

(f) Is it possible or desirable to apply the conclusions arrived at in (e) above to parts of aircraft and aircraft engines?

General Questions.

(g) Would the universal abandonment of the principle of compulsory service operate as an effectual limitation of armaments without other measures? Ends.

With regard to naval disarmament Interdepartmental Committee considers that discussion even of a programme of naval disarmament except at a conference in which the United States was willing to participate would be quite useless, and that if necessary the British representative on Committee of Council of League of Nations should point this out, and should add that in the opinion of His Majesty's Government in view of the past history of the question such a conference would best be held at Washington. Please inform your Prime Minister. Copies of Report (which has not yet come before the Cabinet) will be sent by mail.—AMERY.

9TH DECEMBER. Secret. My telegram of 2nd December.* Disarmament. Cabinet approved recommendations of Interdepartmental Committee at meeting on 3rd December as basis for attitude of British representative. On same day the Committee of the Council of League of Nations commenced its discussions. Lord Cecil explained the views of His Majesty's Government on lines of Interdepartmental Committee's report, except that reference to conscription was omitted for the present. These proposals generally proved acceptable to the other delegations. The French, however, wish to go much further and insist that the various inequalities and potential resources of all States must be taken into account and that practicable plans should be drawn up for the application of Article 16 of the Covenant. With the exception of these points a draft programme combining British and French proposals was adopted on 7th December by the Committee.

Of the questions enumerated in my telegram of 2nd December (a), (b), (d), (e), (f) were included. To (c) after words "geographical position" were added words "length and nature of maritime communications, density and character of railways, vulnerability of the frontiers and of the important vital centres near the frontiers, the necessary delays varying with different States in transforming peace armaments into war armaments."

Following points were added:—

(1) What is to be understood by the expression "armaments"?

- (a) Definition of the various factors military, economic, geographical, etc., upon which the power of a country in time of war depends.
- (b) Definition and special characteristics of the various factors which constitute the armaments of a country in time of peace; the different categories of armaments (Military, Naval and Air); the methods of recruiting training organizations capable of immediate military employment, etc.

(2) What is to be understood by the expression "reduction and limitation of armaments"? The various forms which reduction or limitation may take in the case of land, sea and air forces; the relative advantages or disadvantages of each of the different forms or methods, for example, the reduction of the larger peace time units or of their establishment and equipment or of any immediately mobilizable forces; the reduction of the length of active service; the reduction of the quantity of military equipment; the reduction of the expenditure on national defence, etc.

(3) Can there be said to be "offensive" and "defensive" armaments? Is there any method of ascertaining whether a certain force is organized for purely defensive purposes (no matter what use may be made of it in time of war) or whether on the contrary it is constituted in a spirit of aggression?

(4) How is it possible to judge the military value of commercial fleets in estimating the naval armaments of a country?

Committee considered that preparatory committee to be set up by Council of League of Nations to undertake study of questions should consist of:—

1. Representatives of States members of the Council, revision to take place should composition of Council alter.
2. Representatives of States non-members whom the Council may think fit to invite; this is designed to include United States of America, Russia and Germany if not yet on the Council.

3. Representatives of States which in regard to problem of disarmament are in special position by virtue of their geographical position and are not otherwise represented. Under this head Poland, Yugoslavia, Roumania, Finland and Holland to be invited.

* No. 109.

Any state not represented will also have the right to submit memoranda on particular questions and to defend its views before the Committee which may also invite collaboration of any state over any particular question.

Proposals for procedure of preparatory committee were adopted as follows:

Committee is responsible for whole work but may seek advice from League organs who may also offer it. Permanent Advisory Committee to be consulted on naval, military and air questions. On economic questions a joint committee drawn from economic, transit and financial committees and International Labour Office. This joint committee and also preparatory committee may call in expert advice if desired.

The question of the participation of the United States of America may present some difficulty. The view of His Majesty's Government is that without United States of America discussion of naval disarmament would be useless. The French recognize the force of this but hold that the three questions of naval, land and air disarmament cannot be separated. Italians and Japanese strongly support this view. If this view is maintained, Conference cannot take place unless the United States of America are prepared to take part in discussions on all three questions.

10TH DECEMBER. Secret. My telegram 9th December.* The proposals of the League of Nations Council Committee on disarmament regarding the title, composition and procedure of the preparatory committee were approved by the Council on 9th December. It was also decided that formal invitations should be sent to Russia, the United States and Germany (if not already on the Council). In the event of Russia refusing, the sending of an invitation to Turkey will be considered.

At the suggestion of the British representative it was decided to include one other of ex-enemy States, viz., Bulgaria, owing to the undesirability of Germany appearing as sole advocate of ex-enemy States.

The British representative informed the Council that, while it was obvious that land and air disarmament should be discussed in Geneva, his impression was that the United States would wish to call a conference in Washington to discuss naval disarmament. He made it clear that His Majesty's Government could not discuss naval disarmament without the United States. The French representative thereupon declared that his Government could not participate in a conference unless land, air and naval disarmament were considered as a whole. The discussions are being continued to-day.

SIR,

Downing Street, 18th December, 1925.

WITH reference to my despatch [Dominions No. 381] [No. 336] of the 31st of August,* I have the honour to transmit to you, for the information of your Ministers, copies of Resolutions adopted by the Sixth Assembly of the League of Nations on the 25th of September regarding (a) Arbitration, Security and Reduction of Armaments,† and (b) the Pacific Settlement of International Disputes.‡

ARMS TRAFFIC CONVENTION, 1925.

(League of Nations paper A.13, 1925, IX.)

Note.—In the early part of 1925 an Inter-Departmental Committee was appointed to advise as to the attitude to be adopted by the British representatives at the Arms Traffic Conference which was to be held at Geneva in May, 1925, and was to take as the basis of its discussions a draft Convention prepared by the Temporary Mixed Commission of the League of Nations. The Committee reported on the 23rd April, 1925. It recommended various modifications in the draft Convention, including the following:—

(1) The inclusion of an Article dealing with the movement of arms intended for the armed forces of the Contracting Parties (No. 24) in the following terms:—

"The provisions of this Convention are not to be interpreted as relating to
(a) arms, ammunition or implements of war forwarded from the territory of a high contracting party for the use of its armed forces, wherever situated; or to

(b) arms or ammunition in the possession either of individual members of such forces or of other persons in the service of the high contracting party and required by them by reason of their calling."

(2) The inclusion of an Article dealing with the position of Colonies in relation to the Convention (No. 25) in the following terms:—

"Any State signing or acceding to the present Convention may declare at the moment either of its signature, ratification or accession that its acceptance of Chapter II of the present Convention and of the provisions of Article 8, relating to export and transit to the Special Zones does not include any or all of its colonies, overseas possessions, protectorates or overseas territories under its sovereignty or authority or for which it is responsible by reason of the acceptance of a Mandate on behalf of the League of Nations in respect thereof (not being a colony, overseas possession, protectorate or territory situated within a Special Zone) and may subsequently adhere in conformity with the provision of Article (31) on behalf of any such colony, overseas possession, protectorate or territory, excluded by such declaration.

Denunciation may also be made separately in respect of any such colony, overseas possession, protectorate or territory, and the provisions of Article (34) shall apply to any such denunciation."

On the question of inter-Imperial applicability of the Convention, the Committee's report contained the following passage:—

"The Committee discussed also, the insertion in the re-draft of a new general Article to make it quite certain that trade in armament between different parts of the Empire would not be affected by the Convention and that no returns concerning such trade would be required by the Central International Office. It was felt, however, that to insert a specific clause to this effect in the Convention might possibly throw doubt on this aspect of other international instruments. The Committee, therefore, considered that the freedom of inter-Empire trade in armament had better be left to take care of itself, and no addition to the re-draft has consequently been made."

* 38166/25: not printed. † No. 104. ‡ Not reprinted.

The Committee's Report was considered by a Cabinet Committee on the 30th April. It was agreed by the Cabinet Committee that "internal trade or movements of arms, ammunition and implements of war within the Empire were not to be regarded as governed by the regulations in the Convention."

In this connexion, the following Memorandum was prepared by Mr. H. W. Malkin (Foreign Office).

No. 114.

MEMORANDUM BY MR. H. W. MALKIN, FOREIGN OFFICE.

THE so-called "British Empire Clause" runs as follows:—

"It is understood that this Statute must not be interpreted as regulating in any way rights and obligations inter se of territories forming part or placed under the protection of the same sovereign State, whether or not these territories are individually Members of the League of Nations."

The article was originally inserted in the Statute on Freedom of Transit and on the Régime of Navigable Waterways signed at Barcelona in 1921. It has since been inserted in the Conventions dealing with Customs Formalities, Ports, Railways, etc., signed at Geneva in 1923. It was decided not to insert it in the Convention on Workmen's Compensation negotiated at the International Labour Conference in 1924, and so far as I know has not been inserted in any of the Conventions negotiated under the auspices of the International Labour Office. It was not inserted in the Convention on the Traffic in Women and Children nor in that on Obscene Publications, and it was deliberately left out of the second Opium Convention signed in February last. The reasons for the action taken in the last case and the events in connexion therewith are described in T 1881/1881/381.

I am not personally familiar with the discussions which led up to the preparation of the article at Barcelona, but I imagine that there were two practical possibilities present to the minds of those concerned. The first was that it might be suggested, in view of the position of the Dominions as individual Members of the League of Nations, that if a dispute in connexion with a convention arose between, say, the Mother Country and a Dominion, such a dispute was bound to be referred to the Permanent Court of International Justice under the provision to that effect in the Statute. The second was that, in the absence of such a provision, it might be maintained that provisions for equality of treatment prevented the different parts of the Empire from giving to each other more favourable treatment in any of the matters dealt with by the instrument in question than they gave to foreign countries.

The first of these points must, I think, now be abandoned. For if the only thing which prevents an inter-Imperial dispute under a League convention from being brought before the Permanent Court is the insertion in the convention of the clause in question, it is obvious that the clause must be inserted in every League convention, since any convention may give rise to a question of interpretation which, under Article 13 of the Covenant, is "generally suitable for submission to arbitration"; and therefore the principle was abandoned when the clause was not inserted in the Convention on the Traffic in Women and Children and that on Obscene Publications. Ever since our acceptance of those two Conventions it has been impossible for us to maintain that it is the clause in question which keeps inter-Imperial disputes away from the Permanent Court. Nor do I think we need be afraid of this result, for it seems to me to be right. The impossibility of the Permanent Court's dealing with inter-Imperial disputes results not from the presence or absence of a particular provision in a League convention, but from the constitutional position of the British Empire; and that position, which is an internal and municipal affair, cannot be altered by the provisions of a League convention. In other words, as between the component parts of the Empire, it is the constitution of the Empire which must govern the position under a League convention, and not the latter which governs the former. It may be added that the point in question is not one, so far as I can see, in which foreign nations have any interest at all.

The second point, however, is as important as ever it was; it is a matter as to which foreign states are much concerned, and in some cases the insertion of the clause may be absolutely essential. This was for instance the case in the Customs Convention, especially as that conference had opened with a violent attack from South America on the idea of Imperial preference, which was held to be contrary to the Covenant. From this point of view, the necessity of the clause depends in each case on the provisions of the convention in question, and it is necessary to consider whether, in the absence of the clause, the convention might, in inter-Imperial relations, either prevent us from doing something which we desire to do or oblige us to do something which we do not desire to do. The latter possibility arises where a convention prescribes administrative provisions to be applied to international trade; e.g., the import certificate system (Second Opium Convention), or the licensing system (Arms Traffic Convention about to be negotiated). In such cases, however, it may well be that our intention is to apply such provisions to inter-Imperial trade; if so, it is undesirable, and likely to cause great difficulties at the Conference, to try to insert a clause which would entitle us to do just the opposite of what we intend.

Certain countries, of which the most prominent is Japan, have recently been showing increasing signs of restiveness at Geneva over the peculiar position of the British Empire. So far as I have been able to make out, their attitude, so far as the British Empire clause is involved, is in practice concerned mostly or entirely with the matters mentioned in the preceding paragraph; but it is far from being the case that the clause is accepted as one which can be inserted without question. When therefore it is considered necessary to get the clause into a convention, it is essential that the British Empire should speak with one voice and be able to explain the reasons why the insertion of the clause is necessary and justifiable in the particular case. If this cannot be done, there will be a considerable risk that the insertion of the clause will be defeated on a vote, thus causing a situation of the most acute difficulty; this, for instance, would certainly have happened if an attempt had been made to get the clause into the Second Opium Convention. From this point of view, the situation has recently been made extremely difficult by the appearance of the Irish Free State as a Dominion and a Member of the League of Nations, especially in view of the controversy about the registration of the Irish "Treaty." It is always possible, and in some cases may even be likely, that agreement could not be reached at a meeting of the British Empire Delegation on a proposal to insert the clause, and that if it were proposed in conference the Irish member would speak and vote against it. Such a situation cannot be contemplated; the very worst place to discuss inter-Imperial difficulties, especially those in which the Free State is concerned, is in public at Geneva.

In fact, the matter has now really become one as to which an inter-Imperial agreement and policy are essential. It is, of course, only part of the general question of the position of the Dominions as Members of the League, but at the moment it is the matter which is most likely to bring that question up. As things are at present, there is always a risk that a British Delegation at Geneva, which has come out to deal with some entirely technical matter and may contain no one who has any acquaintance with the subject in question, may find itself compelled to deal with it in open conference at short notice and without any instructions. Even if there is some one there who is acquainted with the matter, it is not really fair for him to have to deal on his own responsibility with a point of such importance. The matter ought to be discussed at the next Imperial Conference; the difficulties of getting agreement on a policy, especially so far as the Free State is concerned, should not be underrated, but there is at any rate more chance of reaching agreement in this way than in any other. At present we have no certainty that the general principle which underlies the clause in question is accepted by all the Dominions.

But even if an inter-Imperial policy on these lines could be agreed, there is always a risk of something going wrong at Geneva so long as the question of the insertion of the clause is left to be decided in each case on the spot and by whoever may happen to be there. If it were possible to dispose of the matter once and for all it would be better on every ground, and I have been wondering lately whether it would not be possible to do so by getting the Dominions to agree to a joint statement as to the position being made once and for all on behalf of the whole Empire in such a manner that it would be applicable to all future League conventions. The terms of such a declaration would require most careful consideration, but its general object would be to make it plain that nothing in any League convention can affect the constitutional position of the British Empire or the consequences which flow therefrom.

Once this were definitely laid down, any statement which might subsequently be necessary as to whether the administrative provisions of a particular convention would in practice be applied as between the various parts of the British Empire could be made without difficulty as and when the case arose.

H. W. MALKIN.

24th April, 1925.

Note.—When the draft Convention was discussed by the Conference, the question of its inter-Imperial applicability was raised as a result of an amendment to Article 24 proposed by the Netherlands delegation. The following correspondence shows the course taken by the discussion and the manner in which the question was finally dealt with.

TELEGRAM.

[Answered by No. 116.]

(Paraphrase.)

THE British draft Article 24 came before the Conference yesterday morning and drew from the Dutch an amendment which followed the lines of Article 15 of the Barcelona Convention, to the effect that shipments between "territories forming part of or placed under the protection of the same sovereign state" should not be included in the scope of the Convention.

It was decided that this was a question for separate consideration inasmuch as it was in no way related to the matter which the British Article has in view.

The American delegate was, however, moved by the Dutch proposal to inquire into its precise meaning. If it were carried, would, for instance, shipments from the United States to, say, Australia come under a system of licences, whilst those from Great Britain would be exempt? If this were so, his delegation would be strongly opposed to it, as being in conflict with the principle of the open door.

Our policy, as I understand it, is a tacit assumption that the Convention does not cover trade between the various parts of the Empire, and that we do not desire to obtain the insertion of a special article which would secure that the provisions of the Convention should not apply to transactions within the Empire.

I do not know to what length Mr. Burton is prepared to go in the matter, and whether America would necessarily refuse to participate in the Convention in the event of his failing to secure satisfaction.

If his case is based on international agreements, we might meet him by inserting an article in the sense of the Barcelona Convention, such article to commence with the words "without prejudice to any existing international agreement."

I should be glad if you would suggest any arguments which would serve to support our claim for Imperial Preference against American opposition, and I should also be grateful if you would inform me whether, if matters come to a head, it would be preferable for us to withdraw from our position as regards the licensing of inter-Imperial transactions, or to acquiesce in the refusal on the part of the United States to participate in the Convention.

In the event of your considering it necessary to make a concession on the lines indicated above I should do my best to safeguard the general position in regard to Imperial Preference. It must be recognized that complete satisfaction on this point might prove impossible to attain. Considering the matter purely from the point of view of traffic in arms our principle concern is, of course, to ensure that orders to manufacturers in Great Britain from Colonial and Dominion governments are kept free from the scope of the Convention.

Our draft Article No. 24, which appears likely to receive general approval, should in my opinion prove sufficient to secure this object.

MR. AUSTEN CHAMBERLAIN to HIS MAJESTY'S CONSUL (GENEVA)
FOR TRANSMISSION TO LORD ONSLOW.

(Dated 21st May, 1925.)

TELEGRAM.

WITH reference to your telegrams of 17th May* and 18th May† we cannot withdraw from our position that inter-Imperial shipments, whether made by private firms or governments, must not be included within the scope of the Convention or be subject to compulsory licensing. Departments interested view this question with the greatest concern on account of publication of statistics which would be necessary if the Convention were applicable to inter-Empire consignments even if such publication is merely confined to export returns.

Our draft Article 24 would meet our case, as in our opinion the King or possibly the British Empire is implied in the term High Contracting Party; at the same time we shall not be satisfied unless there is no doubt that Article 24 bears this interpretation. You should use your own judgment to decide whether it would be sufficient for you to make a definite pronouncement, which should be entered in the official account of the proceeding, or whether we should stand out for amending the Article.

You should use the argument that the armed forces of the Crown include those of both the Colonial and Dominion Governments, and we cannot allow any suggestion of distinction between them in this question merely because the different governments of the Empire recruit and pay them. We cannot give way at all on this point, for to do so would have serious effects on the unity of the Empire.

You will, I hope, be supported by the Dominion delegates in this question; I quite realize that the Irish delegates may not be easy to deal with, but, if they attempt to deny the King's position as head of the Empire and all its armed forces, they are undoubtedly breaking the Irish Treaty; so far as this particular question is concerned they appear to have the same interests as ourselves.

We are, however, willing to agree to apply the licensing system to shipments within the Empire to private individuals. Indeed we do this already, and there may be much to be said from our point of view in favour of the extension of the system to the colonies of foreign powers.

There will be no necessity for us, therefore, to support the Dutch amendment, if Article 24 is passed in a form which is agreeable to us. The only result of the amendment would be (1) to exclude consignments of category 2 arms to private individuals from the licensing clauses (if our draft Article 6 is accepted), (2) to sanction the traffic of category 1 arms to private destinations and (3) to exclude colonies in the special zone from the Convention. We do not know why the Dutch should try to obtain these results, which do not appear to us desirable.

It must be made clear that, if we agree even to this extent to allow trade within the Empire to come within the operation of the Convention, it must not be imagined that we have any intention of receding from our general principle that League Conventions are not applicable to inter-Imperial relations. We shall be doing what we did in the second Opium Convention, that is to say, we accept an obligation imposed by an international convention to enforce certain measures of administration with regard to inter-Imperial shipments.

In view of the position, which the United States delegate has apparently adopted, we attach importance to your taking no action, which shall in any way prejudice our case for Imperial Preference, etc. The American delegate's reference to the "open door" is meaningless, since it is his own government who is the deciding authority in the case of an American firm applying for a licence to export arms to British territory. And furthermore, I have yet to learn that we are under any obligation to the Americans in so far as the policy of the open door is concerned, and they certainly have no right to expect similar treatment in British dominions or colonies to that which is applied to other parts of the Empire.

* No. 115. † Not printed; it suggested that a representative of the Colonial Office might be sent to Geneva in connexion with the discussion of this question.

MEMORANDUM BY MR. E. J. HARDING (COLONIAL OFFICE) AND MR. W. E. BECKETT (FOREIGN OFFICE).

(1) As has already been reported, the British draft Article 24 has been passed unanimously by the Legal Committee in the following form:—

"The provisions of this Convention are not to be interpreted as relating to—

(a) Arms, ammunition or implements of war forwarded from territory under the sovereignty, jurisdiction, protectorate or tutelage of a High Contracting Party for the use of its armed forces, wherever situated; or to

(b) arms or ammunition in the possession either of individual members of such forces or of other persons in the service of the High Contracting Party and required by them by reason of their calling."

It had been explained to the Legal Committee that this Article was intended and considered by us to cover purchases in the United Kingdom by Dominions for their own forces, etc. A strong disposition had been shown at the time the Article was discussed to any provision going so far. It is not known whether the United States or Japan intend to raise this question again when the Article comes before the General Committee.

The position at the moment is that this Article has been passed unanimously by the Legal Committee.

(2) The Netherlands amendment in the following terms was moved in the General Committee at the same meeting as that in which our draft Article 24 was moved, and was also referred to the Legal Committee.

"The provisions of the present Convention shall not be interpreted as applying to the despatch of arms, munitions and implements of war and to territories forming part of or placed under the protection of one and the same sovereign state or to their despatch from territory belonging to one of the High Contracting Parties for the use of its armed forces wherever they may be."

It was discussed separately from our draft Article 24, and the last three lines were considered as having been already decided by the acceptance of Article 24.

(3) The first part of the Netherlands amendment raised a very delicate situation.

There is a determined attitude on the part of several powers represented here to draw a distinction on principle between trade between Great Britain and the Dominions and India, members of the League, and trade between a mother country and colonial possessions which have no international status on the ground that the Dominions and India, if they come under the Convention at all are contracting parties.

In particular the United States have given their delegation precise instructions that trade in the former category must be subjected to the provisions of the Convention.

The Dutch delegate, though he had framed his amendment on the lines of the Barcelona Convention, would have been quite satisfied to accept a declaration or an article of a more limited scope covering "trade between territories part of the same state."

The British delegation were in the position—

(1) Of having to maintain absolutely inviolate our contention that on principle there was no distinction between the two classes of trade and that both as a matter of principle were outside the Convention;

(2) of being as a matter of grace perfectly willing to submit all exports from Great Britain except in cases covered by Article 24 to the operation of the Convention, and desirous if possible to get other people to do the same.

(4) Harding and Beckett had two interviews with the Dutch delegate on 24th May, and after consultation with him drew up the statement in Annex A which was shown to him, and delivered by Beckett in the Legal Committee on 25th May when the Dutch delegate brought forward his proposal.

(5) Beckett's statement seemed to create some impression, but a disposition was at once manifested by Japan to link up the question of inter-Imperial trade with the British draft Article No. 25 in relation to the exclusion of Colonies, etc., from the operation of the Convention.

The question was referred to a sub-committee composed of Beckett and representatives of the United States, Belgium and Holland.

(6) This sub-committee held two meetings at both of which the Japanese attended as an observer, and at the second of which the representative of the Irish Free State also.

It was found impossible to get the sub-committee to deal with the Dutch proposal in any satisfactory way, until something had been suggested to deal with the difficulties raised in connexion with our Article No. 25. Various proposals were made by Beckett in the course of the discussion with Harding's approval to meet this point, which are described in paragraph 11 below.

(7) The sub-committee thus became in a better position to deal with the question raised by the Dutch amendment. Beckett made it quite clear that the British delegation would not agree to anything which prejudiced the principle of unity in the matter of inter-Imperial trade or which attempted to draw a distinction between Dominion and Colonial trade, and declared that we regarded this principle as having been accepted in the preamble of the Treaty of Versailles, which is the foundation of the League, and in fact by the form of the Covenant.

(8) In view of the United States instructions, it was obvious that it was impossible to insert any provision in the Convention to which the United States and Great Britain could agree. The United States representative was, however, quite willing to co-operate with us in order to avoid raising questions of principle on which it would be impossible to find any agreement.

The Dutch delegate was willing to withdraw his amendment if he felt he had established his point of principle.

The Belgian was a theorist mainly interested in securing as few loopholes in the Convention as possible.

(9) Finally, the draft report given in Annex B was agreed to by the sub-committee, and was referred to the Legal Committee on 26th May and accepted unanimously by them with a resolution that it should be forwarded as it stood in the Report of the Legal Committee to the General Committee.

(The United States representative said unofficially to Beckett that the acceptance of the Report by the United States delegation was, of course, subject to any instructions which the delegation might later receive from the United States Government.)

(10) It is considered that the Report as it stands maintains satisfactorily our point of view and may be useful as a precedent in future conferences when similar questions arise, whether or not the United States are represented.

(11) The two alternative proposals already referred to, brought up by Beckett this morning in connexion with Article 25, are as follows:—

1. "Subject to Article 24 (bis) the High Contracting Parties undertake not to exclude from the application of the provisions of this Convention exports of arms, munitions and implements of war destined for other territories under their own sovereignty, jurisdiction, protection or tutelage.

2. Subject to the provisions of Article 24 (bis) a state signing or acceding to the present Convention engages to apply the provisions of Chapter II to the exportation of arms, ammunition and implements of war to any territory in respect of which it has made a declaration under the first paragraph of this Article so long as such declaration is in force, and to any territory in respect of which it has given notice of denunciation under the second paragraph of this Article."

(12) The first is for an article imposing on everyone with overseas possessions the obligation to do what we have already said we would do, and is in agreement with the desire expressed in Foreign Office telegram No. 3. It is the alternative which the British delegation prefer and proposes to press to secure. The United States representative on the Legal Committee has already declared in favour of it.

(13) If the first alternative cannot be secured it is thought that the second and more limited proposal would be useful, since it acts as a strong deterrent to states exempting colonies from the operation of the Convention merely for the purpose of avoiding its provisions. The British draft Article 25 as it stands would provide an opportunity for such action though designed entirely for another purpose. This point has already been raised in connexion with the draft Article by the Belgian delegate. The second alternative, of course, does not, so far as Great Britain is concerned, impose any obligation to do anything beyond that which we have already declared our intention of doing. It is appreciated by the delegation that the application of the second alternative, if adopted, would be very limited in the case of the Dominions and India.

(14) Harding has told Beckett that, in the absence of instructions to the contrary from London, he sees no objection to the Delegation proceeding with either alternative, but that he thinks that the first is the best. Both draft clauses set out in paragraph 11 have been of necessity very hastily prepared. The Delegation would appreciate any views on the form of either draft clause which the Foreign Office and Colonial Office may think it desirable to send.

(15) It should be added that Annex A was approved beforehand by Sir Percy Cox (India) and Dr. Riddell (Canada). Its purport was explained to Mr. MacWhite (Irish Free State) beforehand, and he was present when it was delivered and had no objection to it. The report of the sub-committee (Annex B) was agreed to by Mr. MacWhite at the Legal Committee, though it is doubtful whether he appreciated its bearing on the position of the Irish Free State in relation to the registration of the Articles of Agreement of 1921. But his attitude in fact has been as helpful and friendly throughout as that of Dr. Riddell (who possibly has influenced Mr. MacWhite a good deal).

Annex A.

I FULLY appreciate the reasons which led the Honourable Delegate for the Netherlands to propose the amendment, which he has just explained to the Committee. The principle underlying his amendment is one with which I think no member of this Committee will be inclined to disagree.

Speaking on behalf of the British Delegation, it is my opinion that the relations between territories to which this amendment is directed can only be regulated by the provisions of Conventions of this kind to the extent to which the High Contracting Parties mutually agree or themselves decide to apply them. On the matter of principle, therefore, the British Delegation is in complete agreement with the statement of His Excellency Mr. Van Troostwijk and with his amendment.

Mr. Van Troostwijk has explained that, though he had regarded the principle as being so clear as not to need the insertion of any express provision, he was led to propose this amendment because he thought that the proposal of the British Delegation in Article 24, which has so recently been considered and accepted by this Committee, indicated some doubt in the minds of the British Delegation, and possibly of some other delegations at the Conference, as to the applicability of the general principle in respect of the Convention, and he therefore thought it desirable that it should be expressly affirmed.

I wish therefore to explain that the British Delegation in common with others, as was clearly indicated by the President at the General Committee, had no doubt whatever as to the applicability of this general principle, but when they proposed this Article their intention was to make it clear beyond any possibility of doubt that consignments of arms for the armed forces of a High Contracting Party were outside the provisions of the Convention even in cases where these armed forces were stationed outside the territory of the High Contracting Party. For this reason the British Delegate does not think that any principle of construction can be applied to their draft Article 24 in such a way as to throw doubt upon the applicability of this principle. This is not in itself a very substantial objection to the insertion of the amendment of the Honourable Delegate for Holland. The British Delegation, however, do not advocate that this amendment should be inserted in the text of the Convention for the following reasons:—

First, there is in Chapters III, IV and V of the Convention a special régime laid down with regard to certain territories described as "special zones." Most of such territories are under the sovereignty of High Contracting Parties. The provisions of the draft Convention which have been accepted in principle by His Majesty's Government clearly indicated an obligation on the part of the High Contracting Parties to apply the rules of the Convention with regard to all trade with the special zones, including their own trade. As it stands, therefore, the amendment seems to be in conflict with the provisions of these chapters.

Secondly, the British Delegation in the general interest of the control of the traffic in arms, which is obviously a form of trade requiring special regulation, and in order to give every possible assistance towards achieving the object of this Convention, is in fact willing to apply the licensing provisions of the Convention to the export of arms overseas whatever their destination in all cases not covered by the terms of the British draft Article 24. 334

The British Delegation venture to suggest to the Dutch Delegation and to the delegations of other powers in a similar position the desirability of such a course being generally adopted.

Therefore, speaking entirely from the British point of view, the amendment of the Honourable Dutch delegate might be considered as containing an implication that Great Britain was not intending to do something which in fact she is prepared and intends to do, and which (so far as actual licensing is concerned) is done already.

In view of these considerations, I venture to suggest to the Honourable Delegate of Holland that his object might be more conveniently achieved by a declaration at some suitable moment maintaining the principle underlying his amendment.

Annex B.

The sub-committee, with the assistance of His Excellency Monsieur van Troostwijk, considered the amendment proposed by the Dutch Delegation.

The committee, while considering it unnecessary to formulate any exact definition, were unanimously of the opinion that the general principle to which the Dutch amendment is directed underlies international conventions.

They were further unanimously of the opinion that this principle was applicable to the present Convention, Chapters III, IV and V are framed as an exception expressly to be agreed by the High Contracting Parties, and therefore tacitly affirm the principle rather than cast doubt upon it.

In these circumstances the sub-committee came to the unanimous conclusion that it was not necessary to insert in the text of the present Convention any express affirmation of the principle, such as is the object of the Dutch amendment.

The sub-committee take occasion to point out that the existence of the principle in no way prevents the application by the High Contracting Parties of this or similar Conventions to trade which is covered by the principle.

The sub-committee take note in this connexion of the declaration regarding the intended application of the present Convention made by the British member of the Legal Committee.

EXTRACT FROM GENERAL REPORT OF THE ARMS TRAFFIC CONFERENCE (League of Nations paper, C.G.I.A. 61, Part II).

CONFERENCE FOR THE CONTROL OF THE INTERNATIONAL TRADE IN ARMS, MUNITIONS AND IMPLEMENTS OF WAR.

Geneva, 1st June, 1925.

GENERAL REPORT.

Rapporteurs: M. Dupriez and M. Cobian.

Article M (Article 24a).

TEXT prepared by the Drafting Committee:

The High Contracting Parties agree that the provisions of this Convention do not relate:

(a) To arms or ammunition or to implements of war forwarded from territory under the sovereignty, jurisdiction, protectorate or tutelage of a High Contracting Party for the use of the armed forces of such High Contracting Party, wherever situated;

(b) Or to arms or ammunition carried by individual members of such forces or by other persons in the service of a High Contracting Party and required by them by reason of their calling.

Report:

This Article was suggested by the British Delegation; it appears as Article 24 of the British Delegation's draft (Document C.C.I.A./10). The Netherlands Delegation submitted an amendment much to the same effect in the following terms:

"The provisions of the present Convention shall not be interpreted as applying to the despatch of arms, munitions and implements of war from and to territories forming part of or placed under the protection of one and the same sovereign

State, or to their despatch from territory belonging to one of the High Contracting Parties for the use of its armed forces wherever they may be."

The general principle underlying the Netherlands amendment—a principle which forms the basis of all international conventions—also applies to the present convention. It did not therefore seem necessary to insert it in the text.

In this connexion the British Delegation made the following declaration:

"The British Delegation, in the general interest of the control of the traffic in arms, which is obviously a form of trade requiring special regulation, and in order to give every possible assistance towards achieving the object of this Convention, is in fact willing to apply the licensing and publicity provisions of the Convention to the export of arms overseas whatever their destination in all cases not covered by the terms of the British Draft Article 24.

The British Delegation ventures to suggest to the Dutch Delegation and the Delegations of other Powers in similar position the desirability of such a course being generally adopted."

Moreover, in so far as the Netherlands proposal deals with consignments of arms, etc., for the use of the armed forces of the High Contracting Parties, it is embodied in the text adopted by the Legal Committee, the clearness of which makes all comment or explanation superfluous.

No. 119.

EXTRACTS FROM ARMS TRAFFIC CONVENTION SIGNED AT GENEVA, 17TH JUNE, 1925.

Article 6.

As a preliminary to a general system of publicity for armaments irrespective of their origin, the High Contracting Parties undertake to publish, within two months of the close of each quarter, a statistical return of their foreign trade during this quarter in the articles covered by Categories I and II. This return shall be drawn up in accordance with the specimen forms contained in Annex I to the present Convention and shall show under each heading appearing in Categories I and II in Article 1 the value and the weight or number of the articles exported or imported under a licence or export declaration, allocated according to country of origin or destination.

In all cases where the consignment comes from, or is sent to, a territory possessing an autonomous Customs system, such territory shall be shown as the country of origin or destination.

The High Contracting Parties further undertake, so far as each may be concerned, to publish within the same time-limits a return containing the same information in respect of the consignments of articles covered by Categories I and II to other territories placed under their sovereignty, jurisdiction, protection or tutelage, or under the same sovereignty, jurisdiction, protection or tutelage.

The first statistical return to be published by each of the High Contracting Parties shall be for the quarter beginning on the first day of January, April, July or October, subsequent to the date on which the present Convention comes into force with regard to the High Contracting Party concerned.

The High Contracting Parties undertake to publish as an annex to the above-mentioned return the text of the provisions of all statutes, orders or regulations in force within their territory dealing with the export and import of articles covered by Article 1, and to include therein all provisions enacted for the purpose of carrying out the present Convention. Amendments and additions to these provisions shall be likewise published in annexes to subsequent quarterly returns.

Article 28.

Abyssinia, desirous of rendering as effective as possible the supervision of the trade in arms and ammunition and in implements of war, which is the subject of the present Convention, thereby undertakes, in the free exercise of her sovereign rights, to put into force, so far as concerns her own territory, all regulations which may be necessary to fulfil the provisions of Articles 12 to 18 inclusive of the said Convention relating to exports, imports and the transport of arms, ammunition and implements of war.

The High Contracting Parties take note of the above undertaking, and, being in full sympathy with the desire of Abyssinia to render as effective as possible the supervision of the trade in arms and ammunition and in implements of war, hereby undertake to conform to the provisions of the above-mentioned Articles so far as concerns Abyssinian territory, and to respect the regulations put into force in accordance with the said undertaking, by Abyssinia as a sovereign State.

If a State, at present included in the special zones, should at the moment of its accession to the present Convention assume with respect to its own territory the same undertakings as those set forth in the first paragraph of this Article, and also, when such State possesses a sea-coast, those contained in Articles 19 to 26 inclusive in so far as the same are applicable, the High Contracting Parties hereby declare that they will consider such State as excluded from the said zones from the date that its accession becomes effective as specified in Article 41 and that they will accept as regards such State the obligations set forth in the second paragraph of the present Article, and also, when the State excluded possesses a sea-coast, the obligations of Articles 19 to 27 inclusive in so far as they are applicable.

Article 32.

The High Contracting Parties agree that the provisions of the present Convention do not apply:

(a) To arms or ammunition or to implements of war forwarded from territory under the sovereignty, jurisdiction, protection or tutelage of a High Contracting Party for the use of the armed forces of such High Contracting Party, wherever situated, nor

(b) To arms or ammunition carried by individual members of such forces or by other persons in the service of a High Contracting Party and required by them by reason of their calling, nor

(c) To rifles, muskets, carbines and the necessary ammunition therefor, carried by members of rifle clubs for the sole purpose of individual use in international competitions in marksmanship.

Article 36.

Any High Contracting Party may declare that its signature or ratification or accession does not, as regards the application of the provisions of Chapter II and of Articles 13, 14 and 15 of the present Convention, bind either all or any one of the territories subject to its sovereignty, jurisdiction or protection, provided that such territories are not situated in the special zones as defined in Article 12.

Any High Contracting Party which has made such a declaration may, subsequently, and in conformity with the provisions of Article 37, adhere entirely to the present Convention for any territories so excluded. Such High Contracting Party will use its best endeavours to ensure, as soon as possible, the accession of any territories so excluded.

Any High Contracting Party may also, as regards the application of the provisions of Chapter II and of Articles 13, 14 and 15 of the present Convention, and in conformity with the procedure laid down in Article 38, denounce the present Convention separately in respect of any territory referred to above.

Any High Contracting Party which shall have availed itself of the option of exclusion or of denunciation provided for in the preceding paragraphs undertakes to apply the provisions of Chapter II to consignments destined for territories in respect of which the option has been exercised.

MR. W. E. BECKETT (FOREIGN OFFICE) to MR. E. J. HARDING

DEAR HARDING,

Foreign Office, 4th August, 1925.

I AM just back from a month's leave. Hence the delay in answering your letter.* I can understand your difficulty in gathering from the Reports of the * 27914/25: not printed; it asked for a statement of developments at Geneva subsequent to No. 117.

General Committee what happened with regard to the British proposals at Geneva and British Imperial questions generally.

These matters were kept out of the General Committee pretty successfully all the time. The legal and drafting committees got the benefit of all of them.

I am assuming in replying that you have before you:—

(b) The reports of the General Committee.

(c) Our joint report of the 27th May.

(1) Article 32 (Old draft Article 24) passed without further discussion or amendment except the addition of (c), which does not concern the matters in which you are particularly interested.

The proposal contained in paragraph (11) (1) of our joint report was accepted and incorporated in a modified form in the Convention. See Article 6, paragraph 3. Everyone has undertaken to apply publicity (except in the cases covered by Article 32) to "inter-imperial trade in arms" though not the licensing system. "Other territories" is not a well-defined expression. There was a general agreement that it meant "other territories possessing a separate customs system," but I failed to secure the addition of these words in the Drafting Committee. I think that you will notice with satisfaction that consignments to Canada for example are not described in the Convention as exports but merely as consignments, drawing a distinction between inter-Imperial trade and foreign trade (cp., Article 36, paragraph 4).

(2) Article 36 (old draft Article 25).—This Article continued to give rise to the greatest amount of dissatisfaction and opposition after you left particularly from Belgium and Japan.

We adopted the most conciliatory attitude.

(a) In the first place—to please the others—we dropped our own formula and on telegraphic authority from home adopted the formula contained in paragraph 1 of Article 36, drafted by the French. It is wider than anything we had asked for—as the United States realized before the end of the Conference when at the last minute they wanted to get us to substitute the formula we had at first proposed: and we rather turned the tables on them.

The present formula does not contain the limitation to "overseas" territories and leaves what is a "territory" entirely undefined.

(b) The second sentence of paragraph 2 was carried by Japan against me in the Legal Committee. I had declared that we preferred the insertion of the provision in the Final Act. In view of the explanation which we had given of the necessity of this Article, i.e., that we could not coerce the colonies, it was difficult to advance any argument against a provision binding people to use their "best endeavours," except that such a provision is by its character only suited for insertion in the Final Act. However, I suppose it means that we must "press" the colonies to accept the Convention.

(c) The fourth paragraph is in fact our proposal in paragraph 11 (2) of our report.

I had put forward 11 (1) and 11 (2) as alternatives. As 11 (1) had been accepted, I dropped 11 (2). However it was adopted and passed on the proposals of the United States and Belgium. I did not oppose it. It goes a little further than Article 6, paragraph 3, to which I have already referred, as all the provisions of the Convention—not merely the publicity provisions—have to be applied to consignments to excepted territories. However we always intended to do this.

(d) In the original draft the word "tutelage" came in paragraph 1 after the words "jurisdiction, protection." It was inserted in order to include mandated territories amongst those which might be excluded from the operation of the Convention. This was opposed mainly by Japan on the ground that the mandates all contained in one form or another an obligation to apply the principles of the Convention or the Convention itself to mandated territories.

The only shadow of a reason we had for wishing to maintain the power to exclude mandated territories was to enable South Africa to accede to the Convention without South-West Africa—a rather unjustifiable use of this Article, since South-West Africa is governed as an integral part of the Union. In any case it is thought that the word jurisdiction certainly covers B and C mandates and Iraq is in the special zone (though now, I understand, it is intended to utilize Article 28, paragraph 3, to save Iraq the indignity of being put in the special zone. This paragraph originated in a United States proposal to meet the case of Liberia, and we got it amended so as to be able to use it for the benefit of Iraq—not without difficulty). So we met Japan on this point and agreed to the cutting out of the word "tutelage."

(e) I had to give my undertaking to the United States that the British Government did not consider that anything in Article 36 in any way affected the inclusion or non-inclusion of Dominions who were Members of the League in the signature of the British delegate.

They quite accepted my good faith, but, when I showed them the declaration which Lord Onslow made at the time of signing that his signature did not bind India or any Dominion a Member of the League unless they separately signed,* etc., they were honestly puzzled. I showed them the report of Monsieur Hanotaux, President of the Barcelona Conference, on which this procedure is based, which only silenced opposition without carrying intellectual conviction.

(f) There is only one other matter, which I remember—the slight alteration of the preamble of the Convention—i.e., the omission of the word with and the brackets after the British Empire. I shall not go into this matter now as it will probably come before you and be the subject of discussion later.

Yours sincerely,

W. E. BECKETT.

Note.—The draft Convention considered by the Inter-Departmental Committee contained, in addition to provisions for the control of the Arms Traffic generally, provisions for special measures of control in certain areas in Africa and the Middle East designated "special zones." The Committee recommended that the African zone should consist of "the whole of the African Continent with the exception of Egypt, Libya, Algeria, the Spanish ports of North Africa, the Union of South Africa including the mandated territory of South-West Africa, and Southern Rhodesia."

The following correspondence took place as to the proposal that South-West Africa should be excluded from the zone.

FOLLOWING from Lord Onslow:—Special zones. Drafting sub-committee in preparing suggestions for Geographical Committee were anxious to include in mandated territories and raised the question of South-West Africa which it was pointed out was partly in Brussels zone and was contiguous to Portuguese territory included in special zone. I did not raise objections at this stage reserving right to do so if necessary at meeting of full Geographical Committee later.

French have asked for inclusion of Morocco in special zone, Spanish agree.

Suggested area special zones for consideration of Geographical Committee now settled as follows:—

(B) All Africa except Spanish Moroccan ports, Algeria, Tunis, Libya, Egypt, Southern Rhodesia, Union of South Africa, Bechuanaland, Swaziland, Basutoland.

(C) All African mandated territories, Palestine, Syria, Lebanon, Irak.

* The declaration was as follows: "I declare that my signature does not bind India or any British Dominion which is a separate Member of the League of Nations and does not separately sign or adhere to the Convention."

YOUR telegram No. 144.* Following for Lord Onslow:—The inclusion of South-West Africa in the special zone would be most unwelcome to the Government of the Union. When point was discussed in connexion with the Convention of Saint Germain, Union Government maintained† that although English text merely mentioned "the Union of South Africa" as excluded from the prohibited zone, South-West Africa was also excluded. They based that view not only on the French text of the Convention, which refers to "territoires de l'Union Sud Africaine" as excluded, but also on the provisions of Articles 2 and 3 of the Mandate for South-West Africa, whose position is different from that of other mandated territories in Africa inasmuch as the Mandate expressly provides that South-West Africa is to be administered "as an integral portion of the Union of South Africa."

We trust that when position is explained to full Geographical Committee they will see force of these arguments and will not press the point further.

YOUR telegram No. 175, 1st June.† Exclusion of South-West Africa from special zone.

Following for Lord Onslow. Fears of Portuguese delegate as to possible smuggling of arms from South-West Africa into Angola are based on misapprehension. There is already in existence in South-West Africa a most complete code of law with regard to the control of arms traffic. No arms may be imported or exported except by licence from the administration: application for licences may be refused at discretion. Export to neighbouring territories not allowed except on proof that government of importing country allows importation and same arrangement applies as regards transit. Licences required for possession and acquisition of arms and for dealing in arms. Generally speaking the restrictions imposed by the law are as wide and drastic as those contemplated for special zone. There is thus no greater probability that arms will be smuggled from South-West Africa into Angola than that arms will be smuggled from Angola into South-West Africa.

You might add if you think fit that the representations made by the Union Government in 1922 with regard to smuggling of liquor from Angola to South-West Africa constitute evidence that Union Government attach highest importance to suppression of illicit traffic across the border.

Portuguese Government are unwilling to withdraw opposition to exclusion of South-West Africa from special zone.

Portuguese Government point out that when Arms Traffic Convention of 1919 was concluded at St. Germain, Union of South Africa had not received authority to administer South-West Africa which was conferred by mandate of 17th December, 1920. The "territories" referred to in French text of Convention could not therefore be included in South-West Africa. They refer also to paragraph 2 Article 3 of mandate as an indication that South-West Africa was not included in exceptions mentioned in Article 6 of Convention.

They state that besides being unable to accept arguments put forward by Union of South Africa they are guided by primary desire to prevent as far as possible importation into their African territories of arms and ammunition. Their long southern frontier in Angola with its sparse population at a great distance from civilized centres cannot be rigorously supervised and free importation of arms into South-West Africa would have as a result greater facilities for importation of arms into Portuguese territories.

(1) Allocation of B and C Mandates was made at meeting of Supreme Council at Versailles 7th May, 1919, and form of C Mandates settled in July, 1919, by special commission appointed by Supreme Council. Statement on which first argument of Portuguese Government is based is therefore incorrect.

Following for Lord Onslow: We know General Hertzog attaches great importance to principle that Union Government as Mandatory Power are solely responsible for administration of South-West Africa and expects us not to take any action which might be construed as derogating from it. Consequently while we were entitled to insist on exclusion of South-West Africa from special zone in accordance with known wishes of Union Government and are very glad that your efforts to secure this have been so successful we think it essential that you should avoid in plenary session any statement in the nature of a formal assurance as this could only be given by the Union Government. Suggest that if you find public statement necessary you should confine yourself to saying that your understanding as to the control of the arms traffic between South-West Africa and Angola is as set out in first part of my telegram No. 129* adding that it will of course be for Union Government to consider the question of further action in regard to the frontier

SIR, Governor-General's Office, Melbourne, 4th December, 1924.

WITH reference to your predecessor's despatch dated 5th June, 1924, Dominions No. 252,* on the subject of the extension to the Dominions of the Agreement between the British and Austrian Governments of 28th March, 1923, respecting the Customs Clearance of Commercial Travellers' Samples, I have the honour to inform you that I am advised by my Prime Minister that the Commonwealth Government does not desire to enter into any formal agreement with the Austrian Government.

The present practice in Australia is substantially in conformity with that set out in the despatch under reference as having been adopted between the British and Austrian Governments, and is as follows:—

Travellers' samples dutiable under the Tariff are admitted on deposit of duty for six months (Section 162 Customs Act).

The importer makes application to deposit in accordance with Form 47† (in duplicate) of the Customs Regulations, a copy of which is attached.

If the goods are liable to ad valorem duties, documentary evidence of value must be produced.

The goods will be examined by an officer before delivery.

The importer may obtain a triplicate copy of Form 47, which will be impressed with a stamp, as follows:—

Travellers' Samples.

The importer may obtain a refund of this deposit on exportation of the goods at any port in Australia within six months, on identification of the samples, and surrender of this document, and the passing of our Export Entry.

My Prime Minister adds that the practice of the Commonwealth applies, of course, to commercial travellers' samples imported from all countries, and consequently samples imported from Austria will be dealt with in accordance with this practice.

Enclosure 1 in No. 139.

Foreign Office, S.W.1,
11th February, 1925.

SIR,

I HAVE the honour to refer to your note No. Z1. 782, of 12th May last, in which you informed my predecessor that the Austrian Government were anxious that the agreement signed at Vienna on 28th March, 1923, between His Majesty's Government and themselves, respecting the Customs clearance of commercial travellers' samples should be extended to the British Dominions, Colonies, Possessions and India.

2. Certain of the Governments of His Majesty's Dominions, Colonies and Possessions have, in reply to the invitation which has been addressed to them, expressed their willingness to accede to the above agreement, and, subject to the concurrence of the Austrian Government, it is proposed that such accession may be effected by means of a formal exchange of notes recording the accession. It would be understood that the agreement applies reciprocally to the acceding British Dominions, Colonies and Possessions in the same manner and on the same conditions as it applies to Great Britain.

3. I have the honour, therefore, to notify that the Dominion of New Zealand, the Union of South Africa, the Irish Free State, Newfoundland, Southern Rhodesia and Malta and also India accede to the above-mentioned agreement. In the case of the Union of South Africa it is nevertheless understood that the amount of duty payable on the samples must be deposited in cash with the Customs authorities, and cannot be refunded until these samples have actually been exported, which must take place within one year of the date of importation, since under existing law it is not permissible to allow a refund of duty on their being placed in bond.

4. In the event of any other of His Majesty's Dominions, Colonies and Possessions desiring to accede to the agreement in future, His Majesty's Government hereby agree that a similar formal notification of their accession to the Austrian Government, and the acceptance of such accession by the latter, will suffice for the purpose.

5. If the above course meets with the approval of the Austrian Government, I would suggest that the present note and your reply thereto should be regarded as placing on record the understanding arrived at in the matter.

I have, &c.,
(For the Secretary of State),
MILES W. LAMPSON.

(No. 1026.)

Austrian Legation, 18, Belgrave Square, London, S.W.1.

SIR,

23rd April, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge receipt of your Note of the 11th February, 1925, and, in conformity with instructions received from the Austrian Federal Government, to take note that the Dominion of New Zealand, the Union of South Africa, the Irish Free State, Newfoundland, Southern Rhodesia and Malta and also India accede to the agreement signed at Vienna on the 28th March, 1923, between His Majesty's Government and the Austrian Government, respecting the Customs clearance of commercial travellers' samples.

* No. 55 in Dominions No. 93. † No. 57 in Dominions No. 93.

In the case of the Union of South Africa it is understood that the amount of duty payable on the samples must be deposited in cash with the Customs authorities and cannot be refunded until these samples have actually been exported, which must take place within one year of the date of importation. It is further understood that the agreement applies reciprocally to the acceding British Dominions, Colonies and Possessions in the same manner and on the same conditions as it applies to Great Britain.

In the event of any other of His Majesty's Dominions, Colonies and Possessions desiring to accede to the agreement in future, the Austrian Federal Government hereby agree that a similar formal notification of their accession to the Austrian Government and the acceptance of such accession by the latter will suffice for the purpose.

I have, &c.,
G. FRANCKENSTEIN,
Austrian Minister.

1ST APRIL. Confidential. Following on discussions which took place in connexion with Peace Settlement as regards Treaties of 1839 establishing status of Belgium (see Article 31, Treaty of Versailles), Governments of Belgium and Netherlands have now agreed upon Treaty to replace Treaty between these countries of 19th April, 1839 (see pages 356 to 366 of Hertslet's Treaties, Volume V). New Treaty provides for abrogation of Article 7, 1839 Treaty, in so far as relates to Belgian neutrality, and Article 14, under which Antwerp was to be solely port of commerce. Accordingly Governments of Belgium and Netherlands have asked His Majesty's Government and French Government to agree to formal abrogation of Multilateral Treaties of 19th April, 1839, with Belgium and Holland, to which Great Britain was party (see pages 26 to 28 and 354 to 356 of Hertslet, Volume V). Provisions of new Treaty under examination. If they are satisfactory reply contemplated (which will be settled in consultation with French Government) is to effect that His Majesty's Government have, in common with Allies, already placed on record opinion that 1839 Treaties no longer conform to requirements of situation; that it is therefore matter of great satisfaction to them that Governments of Belgium and Netherlands should have been able to agree as to lines on which settlement of 1839 should be revised; that they are in agreement with proposed revision, and are therefore ready, in so far as they are concerned, to proceed to abrogation of 1839 Treaties; and that they will at once consult French, Belgian and Netherlands Governments as to necessary instrument.—SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES.

23RD MAY. Confidential. My telegram 1st April† Treaties of 1839 establishing status of Belgium. Notes were sent to Belgian and Netherlands Governments in terms foreshadowed and draft treaty to abrogate multilateral Treaties of 1839 has now been prepared. Terms of new Treaty are being telegraphed separately.‡ This form of instrument has been adopted in preference to simple exchange of notes as it was considered that act of abrogation could only be effected by instrument equal in weight and character with those to be abrogated.

Precise manner in which ex-enemy Powers are to be associated in new instrument is still under discussion, but as soon as this is settled it is desired to proceed at once with remaining formalities as Belgian and Netherlands Governments are pressing for conclusion of Treaty in time to enable it to be ratified by Netherlands Parliament before adjournment at end of May, and Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs wishes, if possible, to meet this request on grounds both of diplomatic courtesy and of expediency of not losing present opportunity of regularizing anomalous situation which has obtained since Peace Conference as a result of inability hitherto of Belgian and Netherlands Governments to settle basis of new arrangement.

As regards procedure for signature of new Treaty, agreement of Powers that 1839 settlement no longer conformed to situation has already been placed on formal record at Peace Conference (see Article 31 Treaty of Versailles). Hence it is considered desirable that act of abrogation should be performed with as little formality as is compatible with legal validity and accordingly proposed that signature should be limited to those of Principal Allied and Associated Powers who were parties to 1839 Treaties.

In view of reference in Article 31 Treaty of Versailles to conventions to be "entered into by the Principal Allied and Associated Powers," and fact that British Empire is described as Principal Allied and Associated Power in preamble to that Treaty new instrument has as matter of form been drawn in name of British Empire rather than Great Britain which was party to 1839 Treaties. As, however, new instrument merely terminates existing obligation entered into by Great Britain under 1839 Treaties without imposing new obligations of any kind either on Great Britain or on other parts of Empire, and as Treaty between Belgium and Netherlands to which assent is given by new instrument contains nothing concerning other than those two Powers apart from provisions relating to abrogation of neutrality of Belgium, abolition of restriction on use of port of Antwerp and provisions relating to navigation of Scheldt which are considered satisfactory, it would seem to be in accordance with principles underlying Resolution of Imperial Conference, 1923, regarding negotiation, signature and ratification of Treaties, that new Treaty should be signed, so far as British Empire concerned, only by His Majesty's Representative at The Hague, and it is proposed to proceed accordingly.

In view of extreme urgency of matter His Majesty's Government would be obliged if, in event of your Ministers having any observations on procedure described above, they could be communicated before Wednesday, 27th May.—SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES.

My advisers appreciate the full statement of the situation and under the circumstances desire to avoid raising any question as to the procedure suggested. In view of the scope and antecedents of the agreement, they are of the opinion that the United Kingdom of Great Britain might have been expected as indicating (?) party to the Treaty, but if it is felt necessary to utilize Article 31 of the Treaty of Versailles to secure German adherence they consider that might constitute sufficient grounds for using same term "The British Empire" as in the preamble of Treaty of Versailles. It will doubtless be agreed that term required in this case would not involve precedent under different circumstances. It is recognized that certain amount of verbal ambiguity or inconsistency is difficult to avoid where Treaties framed at different periods are involved.—BYNG.

SIR,

Downing Street, 26th June, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Your Excellency's telegram of the 27th May† regarding the abrogation of the Treaties of the 19th April, 1839, establishing the status of Belgium.

2. As indicated in my telegram of the 23rd May,* the proposed new Treaty on the one hand terminates an existing obligation by abrogating entirely the Multilateral treaties of the 19th April, 1839, Article II of which provided that the Treaty of the same date between Belgium and the Netherlands should be placed under the guarantee of the parties to those treaties, and, on the other hand, imposes no new obligations upon the Dominions or indeed upon Great Britain.

3. Accordingly, neither paragraph 2 (a) nor paragraph 2 (b) of Part I of the Resolution of the Imperial Conference of 1923 regarding the Negotiation, Signature and Ratification of Treaties (which refer respectively to Treaties imposing obligations upon one part of the Empire and to Treaties imposing obligations upon more than one part of the Empire) seems to be literally applicable to the case, but it would appear to follow from the principles underlying the Resolution that, as the Treaty has been negotiated by His Majesty's Government, it should be signed only by His Majesty's Representative at The Hague.

4. The reference to the British Empire rather than Great Britain was made as a matter of form owing to the wording of Article 31 of the Treaty of Versailles.

5. His Majesty's Government are glad to learn that your Ministers have no observations on the proposed procedure other than those to which the foregoing paragraphs reply. I may add that the procedure has now been accepted by all the other Dominions.

WITH reference to my telegrams of the 23rd of May* regarding the draft treaty for the abrogation of the Treaties of 1839 establishing the status of Belgium, I have the honour to request [Your Excellency] [you] to inform your Ministers that, owing to the unexpected prolongation of the political crisis in Belgium, it was found impossible to complete the remaining formalities by the desired date.

2. His Majesty's Government and the French Government have arrived at agreement as to the form of the instrument, and copies of the French and English texts† are enclosed herewith. The only outstanding question is whether the treaty should be drawn up in French only or in French and English. As soon as this question is settled, His Majesty's Government propose to concert with the French Government in communicating the text to the Belgian and Netherlands Governments in order that they may have an opportunity of expressing their views before the ex-enemy Governments are called upon to instruct their representatives to take part in the execution of the instrument.

3. His Majesty's Government much appreciate the action of the Dominion Governments in replying so speedily to the telegrams of the 23rd of May, especially in view of the insistent nature of the appeals being made at the time by the Belgian and Netherlands Governments.

I have, &c.,

WITH reference to my despatch No. 423 of the 3rd April last, I transmit herewith the text, drafted in agreement with the French Government, of the treaty† approving the revision of the Treaties of the 19th April, 1839, in accordance with the agreement recently concluded between the Belgian and Netherlands Governments.

Enclosure 2 in No. 151.

SIR, Foreign Office, S.W. 1, 17th August, 1925.

WITH reference to my despatches to Sir G. Grahame and Sir C. Marling, Nos. 791 and 309 respectively of the 7th ultimo, I transmit herewith copies of notes from the Belgian and Netherlands representatives in London, stating that the two Governments are not prepared to agree to the Franco-British draft recently submitted to them of a treaty to be substituted for the 1839 Treaties. The French Government have received similar notes from the Belgian and Netherlands representatives at Paris, and the French Ambassador here has shown me semi-officially a draft of the reply which the French Government propose to address to them. In this reply the French Government limit themselves to asking for "des précisions" in regard to the objections of the two Governments.

2. I entirely agree that the Belgian and Netherlands Governments must be pressed to formulate in writing the exact nature of their objections. Without such a statement it would be difficult to make any progress in the consideration of the question. At the same time, however, I think it would be desirable to suggest that the matter should, in the first instance, be discussed by the legal representatives of the four Powers concerned at Geneva in September next. The agenda of the Assembly is comparatively short, and I have no doubt time could be found for this purpose. It is self-evident that such preliminary discussions would materially shorten the duration of a subsequent Conference. The note might terminate by an acceptance of the invitation to a Conference at The Hague in October next at the earliest, provided that the Belgian and Netherlands Governments are ready on their side to accept the Franco-British proposals, i.e., formulation in writing of their objections and preliminary discussion at Geneva.

3. I understand that the French Government, whose desire for concerted action in this matter I entirely share, are anxious to reply as soon as possible to the Belgian and Netherlands notes. I request, therefore, that you will communicate with them at once in the sense of the present despatch.

Ambassade de Belgique,
Londres, le 7 août, 1925.

PAR un office en date du 13 de ce mois, le Chargé d'Affaires du Gouvernement de Sa Majesté britannique à Bruxelles, a bien voulu informer le Gouvernement du Roi des négociations qui sont poursuivies entre les Gouvernements britannique et français en vue de l'élaboration du nouveau Traité collectif destiné à remplacer les traités signés à Londres le 18 avril, 1839, entre les grandes Puissances et respectivement la Belgique et les Pays-Bas. M. Wingfield a communiqué en même temps le texte du projet de Traité sur lequel le Gouvernement britannique et le Gouvernement de la République se sont mis d'accord, en demandant au Gouvernement du Roi s'il était disposé à accepter ce projet.

Le Gouvernement belge ne peut, à son vif regret, accepter ce projet de Traité, qui s'écarte complètement des suggestions présentées par le Cabinet de Bruxelles et de La Haye, à la veille de la signature du Traité holland-belge d'avril, 1925.

Ce projet ne cadre pas davantage avec celui qui avait été élaboré par la Commission des XIV et qui avait pourtant rencontré l'approbation des Puissances en 1920.

Le Gouvernement belge se permet de rappeler à cette occasion la proposition qu'il avait faite au mois d'avril dernier, d'accord avec le Gouvernement hollandais : réunir à La Haye des représentants de la France, de la Grande-Bretagne, de la Belgique et des Pays-Bas, en vue d'examiner en commun la manière la plus opportune de constater l'abrogation des traités de garantie. Il estime qu'il sera plus aisé de trouver les bases d'un accord dans des échanges de vue et des négociations verbales, qu'en traitant cette affaire par voie de communication officielle.

MONSIEUR LE SECRÉTAIRE D'ETAT, Londres, le 7 août, 1925.

LE Ministre des Affaires Etrangères à la Haye a pris connaissance avec intérêt du projet de traité désigné à remplacer les traités collectifs de 1839 qui lui a été remis de la part de Votre Excellence par le Ministre Britannique à la Haye. Il m'a chargé d'informer Votre Excellence que par ce document même, dont il a apprécié la remise, il se voit toutefois confirmé dans sa conviction que la meilleure voie à suivre pour résoudre la question de l'abolition des dits traités est celle d'une réunion de délégués des différents Gouvernements intéressés ainsi que je m'étais permis de le proposer à Votre Excellence dans ma note du 6 avril dernier No. 513.

De l'avis de Monsieur de Karnebeek il est douteux que dans la rédaction du projet présenté il ait été suffisamment tenu compte des résultats où ont mené les délibérations de la Commission des XIV et le projet semble se baser sur une conception erronée des rapports juridiques entre les Pays Bas et les autres Puissances.

Pour ces raisons le projet en question pourrait difficilement servir de base aux délibérations ultérieures et le Gouvernement de la Reine, d'accord avec le Gouvernement Royal de Belgique, le juge opportun de renouveler la proposition transmise dans ma lettre précitée du 6 avril et à laquelle Votre Excellence s'était ralliée en principe.

Comme Monsieur de Karnebeek regretterait un trop grand délai j'ai été chargé de prier Votre Excellence de bien vouloir me faire savoir si le mois d'octobre Lui conviendrait pour la réunion proposée.

Veuillez agréer, Monsieur le Secrétaire d'Etat, l'assurance renouvelée de la plus haute considération avec laquelle j'ai l'honneur d'être, etc.

25th February, 1925.

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

WITH reference to your note of the 27th ultimo, regarding the extension of the provisions of the Anglo-Belgian Civil Procedure Convention to Southern Rhodesia, I have the honour to inform you that, as no suggestion was made by the Government of Southern Rhodesia itself regarding the supply of English translations of legal documents, it is not anticipated that any difficulty will arise as to acceptance by that Government of the reservations referred to by Your Excellency. In the circumstances there appears to be no reason to delay the application of the Convention to Southern Rhodesia.

MONSIEUR L'AMBASSADEUR,

LORS d'une démarche effectuée le 20 courant dans mes bureaux, M. E. V. Millington-Drake, Premier Secrétaire de l'Ambassade de Sa Majesté Britannique, fut amené à envisager les sérieux avantages que présenterait pour la Grande-Bretagne et la Belgique la suppression de la légalisation des extraits d'actes de l'état civil délivrés dans l'un de ces pays et produits dans l'autre.

J'ai l'honneur de confirmer à Votre Excellence cet entretien, qui mit en lumière l'utilité évidente que présenterait cette réforme. Sans insister sur les démarches et déplacements onéreux qu'éviterait aux ressortissants des deux pays l'adoption de pareille mesure, il importe de considérer avant tout que la suppression entre la Grande Bretagne et la Belgique des légalisations actuellement exigées en matière d'extraits d'actes de l'état civil trouverait sa justification pleine et entière dans la fréquence des relations de voisinage existant entre les deux pays, relations que l'après-guerre n'a fait que développer et étendre.

De plus cette simplification aurait pour effet certain de ne plus occasionner aux parties intéressées les pertes de temps et les retards souvent préjudiciables auxquels donne nécessairement lieu le régime actuel.

C'est en tenant compte d'avantages de l'espèce que le Gouvernement du Roi a procédé à l'échange de déclarations concernant la suppression de la légalisation des extraits d'actes de l'état civil avec la France (Déclaration du 29 novembre, 1922) le Grand-Duché de Luxembourg (Déclaration du 6 juin, 1923) la Principauté de Monaco (Déclaration du 28 mars, 1924) et les Pays-Bas (Déclaration du 2 mai, 1924).

Ces déclarations visent la suppression de la légalisation des expéditions d'actes de l'état civil délivrés dans l'un des deux pays signataires et produits dans l'autre quel que soit l'usage auquel ils sont destinés.

L'application journalière de ces conventions n'a à ma connaissance, donné lieu à aucun abus du inconvénient d'ordre quelconque, mais a démontré au contraire les heureux résultats du nouveau régime.

Votre Excellence voudra bien trouver sous ce pli le texte de la déclaration échangée en cette matière entre la Belgique et les Pays-Bas, texte qui se rapproche sensiblement de celui qui a été adopté par les parties contractantes lors de la signature des autres arrangements de l'espèce.

Je serais obligé à Votre Excellence de vouloir bien soumettre au bienveillant examen de Son gouvernement la question de savoir s'il n'estime pas, en présence des considérations qui précèdent qu'il aurait également intérêt à réaliser, par voie de convention entre la Grande Bretagne et la Belgique, la simplification dont il s'agit.

Au cas où le gouvernement de Sa Majesté Britannique ferait bon accueil aux suggestions du Gouvernement du Roi, je serais désireux de connaître les propositions des autorités anglaises en ce qui concerne le texte de la déclaration à échanger.

A cet égard, il me serait indispensable d'obtenir des renseignements précis et détaillés sur les dispositions légales et réglementaires anglaises en matière de délivrance d'extraits authentiques d'actes de l'état civil.

Je crois utile d'ajouter, qu'en Belgique les expéditions d'actes de l'état civil certifiées conformes par le depositaire des registres et revêtues du sceau de l'administration communale de la localité où ils ont été dressés ou du sceau du tribunal par le greffe duquel ils ont été délivrés font foi jusqu'à inscription de faux.

Je saisis, etc.,

HYMANS.

Son Excellence

le Très Honorable Sir George Grahame,
Ambassadeur de Sa Majesté Britannique à Bruxelles.

MINISTÈRE DES AFFAIRES ETRANGÈRES.

DÉCLARATION échangée entre la Belgique et les Pays-Bas concernant la suppression de la légalisation des extraits d'actes de l'état civil délivrés dans l'un de ces pays et devant être produits dans l'autre quel que soit l'usage auquel ils sont destinés.

Le Gouvernement de Sa Majesté le Roi des Belges, et Le Gouvernement de Sa Majesté la Reine des Pays-Bas, voulant supprimer la légalisation des extraits d'actes de l'état civil délivrés dans l'un de ces pays et devant être produits dans l'autre, quel que soit l'usage auquel ils sont destinés.

Son convenus de ce qui suit :

Article 1er.—Les extraits d'actes de l'état civil dressés dans l'un de ces pays ne devront être munis d'aucune légalisation pour faire foi dans l'autre, à la condition qu'ils soient certifiés conformes par le depositaire des registres ou son délégué et sous réserve que leur authenticité ne puisse être mise en doute. Les expéditions d'actes de l'état-civil établies en Belgique seront, de plus, revêtues du sceau de l'administration communale de la localité où elles ont été dressées ou du sceau du tribunal par le greffe duquel elles ont été délivrées.

Article 2.—La présente déclaration entrera en vigueur le 15 mai, 1924.

En foi de quoi, les soussignés, savoir :

Mr. le Prince Albert de Ligne, Envoyé Extraordinaire et Ministre Plénipotentiaire de Sa Majesté le Roi des Belges à La Haye; et Mr. le Jonkheer H. A. van Karnebeek, Ministre des Affaires Etrangères de Sa Majesté la Reine des Pays-Bas, dûment autorisés à cet effet, ont signé la présente déclaration qu'ils ont revêtue de leur cachet.

Fait à La Haye, le 2 mai, 1924, en double exemplaire, en langues française et néerlandaise.

PRINCE ALBERT DE LIGNE.
KARNEBEEK.

Enclosure 2 in No. 160.

AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE BRITISH AND BELGIAN GOVERNMENTS TO DISPENSE WITH THE LEGALISATION OF CERTAIN OFFICIAL DOCUMENTS AND POWERS OF ATTORNEY.

His Britannic Majesty's Government, and

The Government of His Majesty the King of the Belgians, desiring to dispense with the legalisation of certain official documents and powers of attorney issued in Great Britain or Northern Ireland for use in Belgium and vice versa for any purpose, have agreed as follows:—

Article I.

Extracts from registers kept by registrars-general, local superintendent registrars and registrars of births, deaths and marriages (actes de l'état-civil), documents certifying patents, judgments and decrees of courts, and powers of attorney, drawn up in one of these countries need not be furnished, to be valid in the other, with any further legalisation than is afforded by their certification as in conformity with the original by the registrar or any person duly delegated by him or by the other qualified persons as hereinafter set forth, provided that they bear prima facie evidence of authenticity.

Article II.

(a) Records of civil acts (actes de l'état-civil) drawn up in Belgium will bear the seal of the communal administration concerned, or the seal of the tribunal from which they emanate.

(b) In Great Britain and Northern Ireland extracts from registers of births, deaths and marriages will bear the seal of the registrar-general of England, Scotland or Northern Ireland respectively, or the signature of the local superintendent registrar or registrar of births, deaths and marriages, and similarly with any other extracts from registers which are or may hereafter be kept by the registrars-general; documents proceeding from His Britannic Majesty's Patent Office will bear the seal of that department; copies of decrees of divorce or other judgments or decrees of His Britannic Majesty's Courts of Justice will bear the seal of the court responsible for the decree or judgment signed by the proper officer of the court where such decree or judgment was obtained.

(c) In both countries a power of attorney will bear the seal of the notary public before whom it was executed, or an authenticating certificate attached by such notary public.

Article III.

This agreement shall come into force on

In witness whereof the undersigned have signed the present agreement and have affixed thereto their seals.

[Answered by No. 162.]

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 23rd November, 1925.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Chamberlain to transmit to you herewith a copy of a memorandum by the Legal Adviser of the Foreign Office on the question of the best manner of introducing into the text of a commercial treaty or convention between this country and a foreign power such a modification as will exclude from its operation British subjects who are connected with those parts of the Empire which are not bound by it.

2. I am to suggest that, subject to the concurrence of Mr. Secretary Amery, an Interdepartmental Conference should meet in Mr. Montgomery's room at the Foreign Office at 3 p.m. on Friday, 4th December, for the purpose of considering this question in its various aspects, and that a representative of your department should be present at such a conference.

3. A similar letter is being addressed to the Department of Overseas Trade, Board of Trade, Colonial Office and India Office.

I am, &c.,

G. R. WARNER.

Enclosure in No. 161.

MEMORANDUM.

On 6th May the Secretary of State called for a memorandum on the question of trying to secure a modification of the language employed in treaties, such as commercial conventions, etc., so as to exclude from their operation British subjects who are connected with parts of the Empire which are not bound by the treaty.

The problem is one of very old standing, and was the subject of exhaustive inter-departmental discussion in 1909, but the discussion only resulted in inter-departmental disagreement. Attention had been called to it in connexion with the operation of the Anglo-Japanese Treaty of 1894 which came into force some six or seven years later, but the question had also arisen in connexion with various other treaties.

The common phraseology of a commercial treaty confers various rights on British subjects, e.g., such a treaty usually provides that there shall be reciprocal freedom of commerce and navigation between the territories of the two contracting parties; and then goes on to provide that the "subjects of each of the two contracting parties" shall have liberty freely to come with their ships and cargoes to all places, etc., in the territories of the other to which subjects of the other are allowed to come, and shall enjoy all the rights, etc., in matters of commerce, etc., which are enjoyed by the subjects of that contracting party (e.g., national treatment). There are other clauses as well which regulate the position of British subjects. A later clause usually provides that the stipulations of the treaty shall not be applicable to any part of the British territories outside the United Kingdom unless His Majesty gives notice of accession on behalf of that territory.

A person not versed in the intricacies of the constitution of the British Empire would naturally assume that, if the treaty was not to be applicable to a non-acceding portion of the British Empire, the inhabitants of that portion of the Empire would get no rights under it in the territories of the other party. But that is not so. The practice of His Majesty's Government, following various opinions given by the Law Officers of the Crown, is to maintain that every individual who owes allegiance to the Crown is a British subject wherever he resides or whatever is his domicile; consequently if a treaty confers rights on a British subject as such, it makes no difference whether the part of the Empire from which he comes accedes to the treaty or not—he is equally entitled to the benefits conferred by the treaty on British subjects. So far, therefore, as a commercial convention concluded by the Government in London with a foreign Power confers a right, let us say, on the subjects of each of the contracting parties in the territories of the other to acquire and hold land, Canadians, Australians and Indians will be entitled to exercise that right in the territory of the other party just as much as Englishmen, and that whether Canada, Australia and India accede to the convention or not. Consequently a commercial convention negotiated by the Government in London couched in the normal terms confers rights on the people of the whole Empire and affects the position both of them and, indirectly, of their Governments.

Meanwhile, the right of all the self-governing Dominions to conclude their own commercial arrangements with foreign Powers without reference to the Government in London is fully recognized, and is acted on, as is also their right to enact laws defining the classes of individuals who shall enjoy the citizenship of that Dominion. The Irish Constitution defines the persons who shall enjoy Irish citizenship; Canada has defined Canadian citizenship by her legislation, and South Africa is in process of doing the same. It may be assumed that in so far as any commercial arrangement is concluded by any of those Governments providing for rights to be enjoyed by individuals, they will be limited to individuals who are entitled to the citizenship of that Dominion.

The principle underlying the Treaty Resolutions adopted by the Imperial Conference of 1923 was that no part of the Empire was to negotiate treaties affecting other parts of the Empire without prior communication with them, and without affording an opportunity to other parts of the Empire whose interests were affected to participate in the negotiations. Conversely, for matters affecting exclusively one part of the Empire, the Government of that part of the Empire was free to conclude what treaties it pleased.

It would be unreasonable that His Majesty's Government should be obliged to negotiate their commercial conventions in consultation with the Dominion Governments or be forced to regard those conventions as affecting the interests of the Dominions. It is also undesirable that any ground should exist for a Dominion complaint that His Majesty's Government are not acting fully up to the spirit of the Resolutions of 1923. Some change must be made if His Majesty's Government desire to maintain unhampered their right to negotiate commercial conventions for the United Kingdom.

There are two ways by which these difficulties may be avoided. One would be to retain the use of the term "British subject," but to exclude from the benefits of the convention British subjects whose connexion is with a part of the Empire to which the convention does not apply. The difficulty of defining such persons is considerable but probably not insuperable. The second would be to separate the clauses in a commercial convention which denote the regime to be applied in a particular territory (e.g., customs dues, most-favoured-nation treatment in matters of commerce, etc.), from those which confer personal rights, and to embody the latter in conventions which could be negotiated Imperially or after due consultation with the Dominions, while the former would be dealt with in conventions negotiated by each Government for itself.

SIR,

Downing Street, 2nd December, 1925.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Amery to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 23rd November,* suggesting that an Interdepartmental Conference should be held to consider the possibility of altering the text of commercial treaties with foreign countries, so as to exclude from the benefits conferred by such treaties British subjects connected with parts of the Empire which are not bound by the treaties.

2. This matter has formed the subject of discussion on more than one occasion (see in particular the correspondence ending with your letter of the 25th April, 1922†). Mr. Amery shares the view held by successive Secretaries of State for the Colonies that a discussion of this question involves the most important issues of Imperial policy. He is arranging for the preparation of a memorandum dealing with the question, and in the circumstances he would much prefer that the suggested Interdepartmental Conference should be postponed until there has been time for the memorandum, after completion, to be considered by the various Departments concerned.

3. Copies of this letter are being sent to the Board of Trade, Department of Overseas Trade and India Office.

Government and the Bulgarian Government, which His Majesty's Minister at Sofia has been instructed to present to the Bulgarian Government, for their consideration, with a view to regularizing the commercial relations between Great Britain and Bulgaria.

2. In view of the fact that certain provisions of the Treaty of Neuilly relating to most-favoured-nation treatment expired on the 9th of August, His Majesty's Government considered it desirable that some modus vivendi should be arranged to cover the period from the 9th of August until the date when a full commercial treaty with Bulgaria shall have been negotiated. In their opinion, such an arrangement would most conveniently take the form of an exchange of notes providing mainly for reciprocal most-favoured-nation treatment of goods and national treatment of vessels and of subjects in regard to taxation.

3. The presentation of the notes will be deferred until the ratifications of the Anglo-German Commercial Treaty are exchanged, as the former Enemy Aliens (Disabilities Removal) Act, which will remove the disabilities to which Bulgarian nationals are still subject in this country, does not take effect until that date.

4. His Majesty's Minister has also been instructed to inquire when the Bulgarian Government would be prepared to commence negotiations for a full treaty of commerce and navigation with Great Britain.

NOTES TO BE SIGNED BY THE [BULGARIAN GOVERNMENT'S REPRESENTATIVE.]
[REPRESENTATIVE OF HIS MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT.]

SIR,

It being the desire of our respective Governments to make provision for the commercial relations between His Britannic Majesty's territories and Bulgaria, pending the conclusion of a treaty of commerce and navigation, I have the honour to inform you that my Government is prepared to undertake on condition of reciprocity that, [British] [Bulgarian] subjects and goods, the produce or manufacture of [the territories of His Britannic Majesty] [Bulgaria] shall enjoy in [Bulgaria] [the territories of His Britannic Majesty] treatment which, subject to the special reservations referred to in paragraph 5 of this Note, shall be at least as favourable in all respects as that accorded to the nationals of, and goods, the produce or manufacture of, the most favoured foreign country. This treatment shall be accorded in all matters of commerce and navigation and as regards importation, exportation and transit, and in general in all that concerns customs duties and formalities and commercial operations, the establishment of [British] [Bulgarian] subjects in [Bulgaria,] [the territories of His Britannic Majesty,] the exercise of commerce, industries and professions and the payment of taxes.

2. [British] [Bulgarian] vessels shall enjoy in the ports, rivers and territorial waters of [Bulgaria] [the territories of His Britannic Majesty] treatment not less favourable than that accorded to [Bulgarian] [British] vessels or the vessels of the most favoured foreign country, subject, however, to the right of [the Bulgarian] [His Britannic Majesty's] Government to reserve the coasting and internal trade to [Bulgarian] [British] vessels.

3. [The Bulgarian] [His Britannic Majesty's] Government further undertake on condition of reciprocity, to accord freedom of transit to persons, goods, vessels, carriages, wagons and mails in transit to or from [the territories of His Britannic Majesty] [Bulgaria] over [Bulgarian] [British] territory including territorial waters, and to treat them at least as favourably as [Bulgarian] [British] persons, goods, vessels, carriages, wagons and mails respectively, or those of any other more favoured nationality, origin, importation or ownership as regards facilities, charges, restrictions and all other matters.

4. The foregoing stipulations will not be applicable to India or to any of His Britannic Majesty's self-governing Dominions, Colonies, Possessions or Protectorates or to any territory in respect of which a mandate on behalf of the League of Nations has been accepted by His Britannic Majesty, unless notice of accession to this arrangement shall have been given on behalf of India or any such Dominion, Colony, Possession, Protectorate or Mandated Territory by His Britannic Majesty's representative at Sofia. Nevertheless, goods, the produce or manufacture of India or of any of His Britannic Majesty's self-governing Dominions, Colonies, Possessions and Protectorates, or of any Territory in respect of which a mandate on behalf of the League of Nations has been accepted by His Britannic Majesty, will enjoy in Bulgaria complete and unconditional most-favoured-nation treatment, so long as India or such self-governing Dominion, Colony, Possession, Protectorate or Mandated Territory accords to goods the produce or manufacture of Bulgaria, treatment as favourable as that accorded to goods produced or manufactured in any other foreign country.

5. It is understood that nothing in this Agreement shall be held to confer any right or impose any obligation upon either party which might be in conflict with any general international convention to which the Bulgarian or His Britannic Majesty's Government is, or hereafter may be, a party.

6. Effect will be given immediately to the undertaking contained in this Note, and will continue to be so given until the conclusion of a definitive Treaty of Commerce and Navigation between the two countries, subject, however, to the right of either party at any time to give notice to the other to terminate the arrangement, which shall then remain in force until the expiration of six months from the date on which such notice is given.

As regards India and the British self-governing Dominions, Colonies, Possessions, Protectorates and Mandated Territories which may have acceded to this arrangement in virtue of the provisions of paragraph 4, it may be terminated separately at any time on six months' notice to that effect being given either by or to His Britannic Majesty's representative at Sofia.

1ST SEPTEMBER. Secret. My telegram 21st August.‡ His Majesty's Government have now accepted invitation of Chinese Government to be represented at Tariff Conference and have agreed to 26th October as date for formal opening.

Sir R. Macleay, His Majesty's Minister at Peking, who is returning to China via Canada 19th September, will be Chief Delegate, and he will be assisted by Lieutenant-Colonel The Hon. Sidney Peel as financial adviser, Mr. Basil Newton, Foreign Office, and Mr. F. H. Fox, C.M.G., Commercial Counsellor to His Majesty's Legation, Peking, as commercial adviser. Composition of delegation is, however, not necessarily final and other additions may be made.

Main objects of Conference as defined in Washington Treaty are—

(b) to determine date, purposes and conditions for imposition of surtax of 2½ per cent, ad valorem on imports with surtax not exceeding 5 per cent. on certain luxuries.

* No. 166. † No. 167. ‡ 38145/25: not printed; it dealt with the general situation in China.

Chinese Government have also proposed that question of tariff autonomy for China should be brought up at Conference. His Majesty's Government have replied that they are willing either at Conference or at a subsequent time to consider and discuss any reasonable proposal that may be made by Chinese Government for revision of treaties on subject of tariff.

Please inform your Prime Minister. Should he wish to send representative to Conference please let me know at once.

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

Chinese Legation, London, W.1, 19th August, 1925.

IN accordance with Article XI of the Treaty between the United States of America, Belgium, British Empire, China, France, Italy, Japan, Netherlands and Portugal, relating to Chinese Customs Tariff, signed at Washington, 5th February, 1922, a special Conference shall meet in China within three months after coming into force of this Treaty, on a day and at a place to be designated by the Chinese Government, with a view to continuing and completing the work of the Washington Conference relative to Chinese Customs questions. In connexion with the said Treaty, it may be recalled that on 5th January, 1922, at the 17th Meeting of the Committee on Pacific and Far Eastern questions of the Washington Conference, the Chinese Delegation, in giving their assent thereto, declared that it was their intention to bring up again the question of restoration to China of her tariff autonomy for consideration on all appropriate occasions in future. In pursuance of the above declaration, the Chinese Government propose that the said question be also brought up at the forthcoming Conference, and expect that some arrangement will be made to remove tariff restrictions hitherto imposed upon China.

The said Treaty, as it has been provided in Article X thereof, takes effect on 5th August, 1925, being date of deposit at Washington of all ratifications of the Treaty. Accordingly, the Chinese Government in pursuance of the said Article XI of the Treaty referred to above have the honour to state that they intend to have the special Conference meeting on 26th October, 1925, at the City of Peking, in which His Britannic Majesty's Government are hereby invited to participate. I have the honour to request Your Excellency to be good enough to take note of the above invitation and to communicate to Wai-Chiao-Pu, Peking, the names and titles of the representatives of the British Government.

27TH OCTOBER. Secret. My telegram 24th October.||

The British Minister, Peking, telegraphs that Customs Tariff Conference was opened on 26th October by Chinese Chief of Executive who referred to Article I of Nine Power Principles and Policies Treaty agreeing to respect sovereignty, etc., of China and based thereon renewal of claim to tariff autonomy. This was subsequently developed by Chinese delegate, C. T. Wang, who made following specific proposals:—

- (1) Participating Powers to agree to removal of all tariff restrictions in existing treaties.
- (2) China to agree to abolish likin simultaneously with enforcement of a new Chinese tariff law to come into force not later than 1st January, 1929.

No. 180. † No. 172. ‡ No. 170. § No. 181. || 48113/25: not printed; it dealt with the situation in China.

(3) Previous to enforcement of above law an interim surtax of 5 per cent. on ordinary goods, 30 per cent. on wine and tobacco and of 20 per cent. on other luxuries to be levied in addition to existing tariff.

After election of Chinese Minister for Foreign Affairs as Chairman the heads of each delegation in alphabetical order were invited to address the meeting. Japanese chief delegate in lengthy speech declared readiness to consider tariff autonomy, but made it clear that it could only be reached by stages. He emphasized precedent of Japan, pointing out that latter had only reached complete tariff autonomy after winning confidence of foreign Powers by effecting drastic internal re-organization over a period of fifty-three years.

British Minister declared our willingness to discuss tariff autonomy either at the Conference or at a later date. He laid stress on the importance of abolition of likin, etc., and necessity of providing funds for requirements of provinces as well as central government. All other speeches were formal. United States Minister being markedly guarded and confining himself to expressing willingness of his Government to carry out terms of Washington Treaty.

29TH OCTOBER. Secret. My telegram 27th October.*

Previous to the meeting of the Tariff Conference, the Chinese Government submitted the following provisional agenda to the Legations concerned in Peking, but it was not accepted by them:—

A. Tariff autonomy.

- (1) Adoption by Chinese Government of Chinese general customs tariff. (For practical convenience a period to be agreed upon within which to make preparations for coming into force of tariff autonomy and application of Chinese general customs tariff.)
- (2) Abolition of likin.

B. Provisional measures to be taken during interim period.

- (1) Levy of an interim surtax.
- (2) Levy of ports surtax on articles of luxury.
- (3) Arrangements to unify rates of customs duties at land and maritime frontiers.
- (4) Valuation of commodities.

Related matters:—

- (1) Arrangement to ascertain country of origin of imported goods or produce.
- (2) Depositing of customs revenue. (Maritime Customs have since 1911 been deposited after collection with certain specified foreign banks. Chinese will claim that these revenues should be spread over other banks including Chinese.)

His Majesty's Minister in Peking now reports that when the committee of chief delegates met on 27th October, under the chairmanship of Wang, the latter immediately proposed the appointment of committees to deal with various items of this provisional agenda as if it had already been approved by governments. This assumption was emphatically challenged, but Wang objected strongly to any modification in agenda and threatened to postpone further progress for reference to Chinese Government. Eventually it was decided to accept agenda with formal understanding that disposal of proceeds of surtaxes and conditions to be attached would be dealt with by Committee on B items. When question of Board of Reference (see Resolution on page 52 of Cmd. 1627) was mentioned, Wang said that it had been deliberately excluded as the Chinese Government and people strongly objected to it. The Japanese delegate stated that he was prepared to postpone the subject to suit convenience of Chinese Government. United States delegate made a general reservation of right of dealing with all questions referred to Conference by Washington Conference, and Sir R. Macleay associated himself with this reservation.

Sir R. Macleay considers the outlook is unsatisfactory. Wang and the Extremists have exploited the political situation and the Central Government's fear of Feng, in order to obtain control of Chinese delegation. Sir R. Macleay fears that it may now be very difficult to keep the questions of likin and tariff autonomy separate, and further that it is Wang's intention to make extravagant and impossible demands regarding tariff autonomy, in total disregard of original objects and scope of Washington Treaty, and then to throw the odium of breaking up the Conference upon the Powers.

4TH NOVEMBER. Secret. My telegram 29th October.*

On 3rd November the United States delegation submitted a new list of proposals to the Chinese Tariff Conference. These proposals, which have been fully reported in the Press, provide for the granting of tariff autonomy to China in 1929 on the condition that by that date likin shall have been abolished. A Conference will be called, if desired by a majority of the powers, on 1st May, 1928, for the purpose of deciding whether likin has been abolished.

The British delegation, in expressing general agreement with these proposals as a basis for discussion, drew attention to the importance of obtaining the acceptance of the various provinces of China, and of developing other sources of revenue, such as railways, etc.

The British delegation are conscious of the desirability of inducing the Chinese to make proposals on their own initiative, and they have been instructed to keep in close touch with the Japanese, who have proposals of their own, and show a disposition to insist upon further safeguards.

At a subsequent meeting the British delegate thought it advisable to make the following declaration in order to make the attitude of His Majesty's Government quite clear:—

"The British delegation, recognizing inherent right to all independent and sovereign states to tariff autonomy and considering that fulfilment of provisions of Treaty of Washington of 6th February, 1922, will constitute a step towards attainment by China of such autonomy, formally declare that in addition to carrying out of terms of that Treaty they are willing to submit to ratification of their Government such further measures as may be desired and agreed upon at this conference, with a view to ensuring within a reasonable period full realization of China's claim to complete liberty of action in matters relating to her tariff."

* No. 184.

This declaration also has been published in the Press.

24TH NOVEMBER. Secret. My telegram 4th November.* The following resolution regarding Chinese tariff autonomy was adopted by the Tariff Conference in Peking, 19th November:—

"The delegates of the Powers assembled at this Conference resolve to adopt the following article relating to tariff autonomy with a view to incorporating it, together with other matters to be hereafter agreed upon, in a treaty which is to be signed at this Conference:—

Article.

The contracting Powers other than China hereby recognize China's right to enjoy tariff autonomy; agree to remove tariff restrictions which are contained in existing treaties between themselves respectively and China; and consent to the going into effect of a Chinese national tariff law on 1st January, 1929.

The Government of the Republic of China declares that likin duties shall be abolished simultaneously with the enforcement of the Chinese national tariff law; and further declares that the abolition of likin duties shall be effectively carried out by the first day of first month of eighteenth year of Republic of China (1st January, 1929)."

The situation thus created is described by British Minister in Peking as follows:—

It was necessary to agree to the resolution in order to avoid a breakdown in the Conference. There are two safeguards against the concession being used to vitiate the treaty which the Conference is attempting to draw up. In the first place the resolution will form merely one article in the treaty which can only be successfully concluded after agreement on other matters which are still open.

Secondly, the treaty would be subject to ratification. The British Minister hopes indeed that it may be possible to introduce into other parts of the treaty satisfactory guarantees that Chinese tariff autonomy will only come into force when the likin or Chinese Provincial tariffs have been abolished. He points out, moreover, that although the Chinese will try to make capital out of assertions that the abolition of likin is to be undertaken on their own initiative and not as the chief condition precedent to tariff autonomy, they have, in fact, by what has been said at the Conference, definitely committed themselves to the abolition of likin not at the same time as they received tariff autonomy, but before they received it.

3RD DECEMBER. Secret. My telegram of 24th November.* Situation at Chinese Tariff Conference causes His Majesty's Government some concern, for probability is that, notwithstanding safeguards mentioned by Sir R. Macleay, China will secure tariff autonomy on 1st January, 1929, giving little or nothing in return. To safeguard British interests change of ground may be necessary, and following suggestions have therefore been put to British Delegation for their observations:—

Begins: (a) Complete abolition of likin being probably unrealizable should not now be insisted upon as sine qua non for tariff autonomy. Even paper abolition, partially effective, would be of some value and is probably best we can hope for.

(b) It is essential that before Powers take responsibility of signing tariff autonomy treaty, Peking Government shall have made arrangements to allocate part of surplus revenues to provinces. Concentration of whole of new revenue in hands of Central Government would provoke an outburst among the provinces, new civil wars, possible attacks on foreign-staffed Customs machinery and fresh anti-foreign movement. This point should be clearly put to the Chinese at the Conference either by the British Delegation acting alone or by the Delegations of the participating Great Powers in concert if they will adopt suggestion.

(c) Application of general Chinese Tariff law especially if attended by only partial abolition of likin would endanger our export trade. Best remedy would be to follow Japanese example and try to negotiate outside the conference for signature at same time as general treaty a bilateral commercial treaty fixing maximum tariff on principal manufactures of United Kingdom. Our bargaining power is small, but only by this means can effects of tariff autonomy be mitigated. Ends.

19TH DECEMBER. Secret. My telegram 3rd December.† His Majesty's Government are still in consultation with Sir R. Macleay upon the situation created by the provisional consent of the Powers to Chinese tariff autonomy as from 1st January, 1929. They are examining the possibility of making a declaration on the principle of provincial participation in the customs revenues and are considering whether such participation might not best be secured by modifying the existing system, under which customs revenues after collection are controlled by foreign custodian banks, the Inspector-General of Customs and the Diplomatic Body.

The British Delegation consider the conclusion of a bilateral commercial treaty to be the logical consequence of tariff autonomy and ask for an indication of the lines on which such a treaty should be framed.

The proceedings of the Conference are being impeded by the disturbed political and military situation, but the Conference is still in being and sub-committees are meeting. The following brings the record of the proceedings up to date:—

Likin.—All Delegations except the British are lukewarm on this question. The British Delegation favour the levy of a special customs surtax in lieu of likin, the proceeds to go to the Provinces. His Majesty's Government approve generally. Sir F. Aglen, Inspector-General of Customs, has placed a somewhat similar proposal before the Chinese Delegation, whose own plan for likin abolition is impracticable. The Chinese have undertaken three months after Conference to abolish coast-trade duties, one of many imposts under heading of likin.

Interim surtaxes.—Chinese have submitted proposals for customs surtaxes as follows: (a) ordinary goods 5 per cent.; (b) "B" grade luxuries (152 articles representing 20 per cent. of total foreign imports and including practically every import of importance except cotton goods, metals, machinery and oils) 20 per cent.; (c) "A" grade luxuries (wines and tobacco only) 30 per cent. These are much in excess of 2½ per cent. on ordinary goods and 5 per cent. on luxuries authorized by Washington Treaty. British Delegation consider, and His Majesty's Government after consulting trade interests here agree, that trade can bear new rates if proposed surtaxes include likin surtax and if internal taxation is satisfactorily abolished, but not otherwise. His Majesty's Government defer further comment until they have examined schedule of "B" grade luxuries now received. Copy will be sent by mail. British Delegation will try to secure reductions on woollens and sugar. Other Delegations take a similar view except Japanese who will oppose surtaxes higher than those fixed at Washington.

Please inform your Prime Minister.—AMERY.

26TH NOVEMBER. Confidential. My telegram 9th September.* It has been arranged that Commission on extra-territoriality in China should meet Shanghai 19th December. Proposal that Malkin should be appointed to Commission was based on assumption that Sir Skinner Turner, Judge of His Majesty's Supreme Court for China, who would otherwise have been nominated, would be coming on leave. But it has since been ascertained that Turner's services will be available, and accordingly it is proposed that he and not Malkin should be appointed.

Following is abstract of instructions which are being issued to Turner:—

Begin: (1) It is very unlikely that Commission will find conditions in China justify abandonment of vital principle that a British subject in China must be tried in the Courts and by the law of his own country, but His Majesty's Government anticipate a gradual lessening and eventual disappearance of objections to abolition of extra-territoriality. Commission should recommend proposals which will assist China to attain this goal.

(2) Probably Commission will find that present system of extra-territoriality presents certain features which can be modified forthwith. His Majesty's Government would welcome early elimination of abuses.

(3) Commission should submit recommendations under following heads: (a) As to steps to be taken for improvement of Chinese judicial system and conditions which would justify complete transference to Chinese Courts of jurisdiction for foreigners; (b) as to what particular portions of the jurisdiction now exercised by foreign Courts might be progressively transferred to Chinese Courts, pari passu with what particular improvements in administration of Chinese justice; (c) as to measures to be put in force immediately with a view to remedying abuses of present system and unnecessary encroachments upon China's sovereign rights. Ends.

The scope of the inquiry is limited to the terms of the Extra-territoriality Resolution of the Washington Conference (pages 53-54 of Cmd. 1627). No definite action can be taken on the results of inquiry until Commission's report is submitted to the respective governments. The inquiry is expected to last for some months.

Complete text of the letter of instructions and the confidential notes for Turner's guidance are being forwarded by mail.—AMERY.

Enclosure in No. 197.

(No. 1512.)

Ambassade de Belgique, Londres,

le 30 mai, 1925.

MONSIEUR LE SECRÉTAIRE D'ÉTAT,

PAR Sa lettre du 15 mai, No. W 4221/153/4, Votre Excellence a bien voulu me faire savoir que les Iles Falkland avaient pris la décision de retirer, à partir du 31 mars 1926, leur participation à l'Union Internationale pour la publication des Tarifs Douaniers.

Monsieur le Ministre des Affaires Etrangères m'informe aujourd'hui qu'il a attendu pour donner acte de la notification faite par le Gouvernement de Sa Majesté Britannique, tant en ce qui concerne les Iles Falkland que les autres Colonies qui ont pris une détermination analogue, que le délai prévu pour les notifications de l'espèce fût écoulé, de manière à pouvoir faire connaître aux Colonies et Dominions intéressés dans quelle mesure les Gouvernements associés ont usé de la faculté de dénoncer la Convention du 5 juillet 1890 à l'occasion de l'expiration du septennat en cours.

Il en résulte que seuls ont manifesté l'intention de se retirer de l'Union Internationale les pays désignés ci-après :—

Australie, Chine, Iles Falkland, Nouvelle-Zélande, Terre-Neuve.

Après la date du 1er avril 1926 la presque totalité des pays du monde continuera donc à faire partie de l'Union.

Il a paru à Monsieur le Ministre des Affaires Etrangères que, quelles que fussent les considérations qui ont déterminé les pays cités plus haut à annoncer leur intention de se retirer de l'Union Internationale à la date du 31 mars 1926, peut-être ces pays se résoudraient-ils à renoncer à leur projet en présence de la continuation de concours décidée par tous les autres Etats associés.

Comme il a été constaté précédemment, le fonctionnement du Bureau International repose en quelque sorte sur une collaboration mondiale, la tâche du Bureau restant la même quel que soit le nombre des Etats participants; cette tâche comporte, en effet, en tout état de cause, la publication de tous les tarifs douaniers du monde, dans des langues déterminées.

Il y a dès lors, au point de vue des charges financières de l'Institution, un intérêt primordial à ce que le nombre des Etats adhérents soit aussi élevé que possible.

Ainsi que le constate le Président du Bureau International dans le Rapport qu'il a adressé au Gouvernement Belge au sujet du fonctionnement du Bureau de Bruxelles pendant l'exercice 1924-1925—rapport qui sera transmis prochainement aux Gouvernements intéressés—les Etats contractants pourraient, en organisant sur leur territoire la vente des collections qui leur sont remises comme contre-partie de leur cotisation, récupérer l'entière du chiffre de celle-ci tout en servant ainsi l'intérêt des commerçants des pays respectifs.

* 58889/24: not printed. It enclosed a copy of a Note to the Belgian Ambassador giving the substance of No. 91 in Dominions No. 93.

Mon Gouvernement serait reconnaissant si Votre Excellence voulait bien attirer sur ce point l'attention des Etats qui ont manifesté l'intention de se retirer de l'Union Internationale, dans la pensée que des considérations d'ordre financier n'ont pas été étrangères à leur détermination.

Je saisis, &c.,

B. MONCHEUR.

[MY LORD,] [SIR,]

Downing Street, 29th May, 1925.

WITH reference to my predecessor's despatch [Dominions No. 477] [No. 419] of the 30th of September, 1924,† I have the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency.]

[you,] to be laid before your Ministers, the accompanying copy of a memorandum from the Commercial Secretary to the British Legation at Prague regarding the position of the Dominions in relation to the Commercial Treaty with Czechoslovakia.

2. It is being explained to the Czechoslovak Government that they are under a misapprehension in supposing that goods produced or manufactured in any of the Dominions or Colonies could only obtain the benefits of the proposed new Conventional Tariff if the Dominion or Colony concerned had acceded to the Treaty, seeing that the second paragraph of Article 9 of the Treaty provides for the grant of most-favoured-nation treatment to goods produced or manufactured in any of the Dominions or Colonies (subject to the reservation contained in Article 4) so long as the Dominion or Colony concerned in fact grants similar treatment to Czechoslovak goods.

I have, &c.,

L. S. AMERY.

Enclosure in No. 202.

IN conversation with Dr. Dvoracek, the head of the Commercial Section of the Czech Ministry of Foreign Affairs, a few days ago, he asked me what action was going to be taken by the British Dominions overseas regarding ratification of the existing Commercial Treaty between the United Kingdom and Czechoslovakia.

He mentioned specifically in this regard the Governments of Canada, Australia, South Africa and New Zealand, and evidently hoped that His Majesty's Government would be able to see their way to lay the matter before the Governments of the respective Dominions in order that if possible their adhesion to the Commercial Treaty could be secured.

He told me that there would shortly be in course of preparation a new Customs Tariff for Czechoslovakia based upon the principle of duality, i.e., one scale of duties (General Tariff) for all countries with which no commercial treaty embodying the most-favoured-nation clause had been signed, and a second scale of duties (Conventional Tariff) which would be applied to the product and manufactures of countries with whom a commercial treaty containing most-favoured-nation clause had been signed. He went on to express the hope that goods coming from the British Dominions could be included under the Conventional Tariff, but stated that of course this would not be possible unless their adhesion to the existing Treaty were secured.

From other sources of information I am led to suppose that the question of Czechoslovak goods entering Canada is not foreign to the matter, and, of course, the adhesion of Canada to the Commercial Treaty would automatically bring Czechoslovakia into the ranks of those countries entitled to receive most-favoured-nation treatment as regards Canadian import duties.

The total amount of produce and goods coming from the Dominions to Czechoslovakia is not very large, but perhaps I might venture to suggest that the above points be brought to the notice of the Dominion Governments concerned in order that they may take whatever action may seem to them advisable.

Enclosure 1 in No. 203.

(No. 279.)

SIR,

British Legation, Prague, 19th August, 1925.

WITH reference to your despatch No. 206 of the 20th May last, I have the honour to transmit herewith copy of a note which I have received from the Czechoslovak Ministry of Foreign Affairs, from which it will be seen that they are in agreement with the views expressed by His Majesty's Government.

2. The note goes on to ventilate the question of the formal adhesion of certain of the Dominions to the existing Commercial Treaty, and asks for information regarding the treatment which Australia gives to Czechoslovak imports. At the same time information is requested regarding the Newfoundland Law of the 16th October, 1923, respecting "a preferential tariff on products of Spain."

3. Perhaps the question of most importance to Czechoslovakia is that of coming to some arrangement with Canada under which Czechoslovak goods would be granted "most-favoured-nation" treatment, and it will be seen that this point is the one first mentioned in the note transmitted.

4. It may be of interest to state that the question of the import into Czechoslovakia of wool from Cape Colony has recently formed the subject of correspondence between the Commercial Secretary and the Department of Overseas Trade, and the High Commissioner for the Union of South Africa. Apparently the import of Cape wool to Czechoslovakia is hampered by the fact that a special permit from the Ministry of Agriculture is required. This permit is stated to be necessary for the import of animal raw material coming from countries infected with cattle disease. The question will, I understand, be investigated by a member of the High Commissioner's staff who is coming to Czechoslovakia personally.

5. Another point which has formed the subject of correspondence with the Commercial Commissioner for the Union of South Africa, whose office is in Milan, is that of the Czechoslovak luxury tax of 12 per cent. levied on the importation of ostrich feathers. According to the Commercial Commissioner in question the sole source of ostrich feathers is the South African Union, and such a tax hits particularly at this industry.

6. Recently another question has arisen regarding the import into Czechoslovakia of Australian apples. The note transmitted asks for information regarding the treatment which Australia gives to Czechoslovak imports, and the two questions seem to be related, for the importer of the apples in question told my Commercial Secretary that according to the local Ministry of Commerce the apples could only be admitted to duty at the most favourable rate if and when he could produce some evidence that Australia admitted Czechoslovak goods under most-favoured-nation terms. The competent official at the Ministry and also the section head at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs were seen by the Commercial Secretary. Both stated that the apples must pay duty at the higher rate because, so far as they were aware, Australia did not grant "most-favoured-nation" treatment to Czechoslovak goods.

7. I mention the above as some of the points which have arisen between the British Dominions and Czechoslovakia and as illustrating in some measure the desire of the Czechoslovak Government to clear up the vagueness at present surrounding their trade position with more especially Canada and Australia.

8. I should be grateful for instructions as to the reply which I am to return to the Czechoslovak Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

I have, &c.,

En accusant réception de la Note No. 79 en date du 28 mai, 1925, le Ministère des Affaires Etrangères a l'honneur de porter à la connaissance de la Légation de Sa Majesté Britannique ce qui suit:—

1. Tous les dominions, colonies, possessions ou protectorats britanniques qui accordent aux produits d'origine tchécoslovaque le traitement de la nation la plus favorisée, jouissent pour leurs importations en Tchécoslovaquie du régime prévu à l'alinéa 2 de l'article IX du Traité de Commerce du 14 juillet, 1923.

Conformément aux communications parvenues au Gouvernement tchécoslovaque par la voie diplomatique le régime susdit est accordé aux produits des territoires britanniques suivants:—

Inde Britannique (note du Foreign Office du 19 novembre, 1923).

"Colonies not possessing responsible Government," protectorats britanniques et territoires sous mandats A et B (note du Foreign Office du 13 décembre, 1923).

Etat libre d'Irlande (note du Foreign Office du janvier, 1924).

Union Sud-Africaine, Afrique du Sud-Ouest et Rhodésie du Sud (note du Foreign Office du 13 février, 1924).

Terre-Neuve (note du Foreign Office du 9 avril, 1924).

Le Gouvernement tchécoslovaque est donc d'avis que l'application donnée de sa part à l'alinéa 2 de l'article IX du Traité de Commerce, ne diffère en rien du point de vue qu'occupe à ce sujet le Gouvernement britannique.

2. L'entretien de Monsieur Dvoracek, Chef de la Section Economique de ce Ministère, dont il est fait mention dans la note No. 79, a touché la question d'une adhésion formelle éventuelle—si celle-ci répondait aux vues du Gouvernement britannique—au Traité du 14 juillet, 1923 (conformément à l'article IX alinéa 1), de certains des territoires britannique dont la position est dès maintenant déterminée par les dispositions de l'article IX alinéa 2 du Traité précité, ainsi que la possibilité d'un arrangement au sujet de territoires qui jusqu'à présent n'accordent pas aux produits tchécoslovaques le régime de la nation la plus favorisée, comme Canada (voir la Note du Foreign Office No. C.555/143/12 du 16 janvier, 1924). En ce qui concerne l'Australie, le Ministère des Affaires Etrangères n'est pas encore en possession de renseignements exacts sur le régime qui est réservé dans le Commonwealth aux importations tchécoslovaques en comparaison aux autres provenances européennes et serait particulièrement reconnaissant de toute information à ce sujet.

En informant de ce qui précède la Légation de Sa Majesté Britannique, le Ministère des Affaires Etrangères a en même temps l'honneur de remarquer que la Terre-Neuve a voté, le 16 août, 1923, une loi appelée "An Act respecting a Preferential Tariff on Products of Spain." Le Ministère des Affaires Etrangères serait reconnaissant de pouvoir apprendre si les dispositions de cette loi ont un caractère préférentiel et s'ils sont encore en vigueur.

Le Ministère des Affaires Etrangères saisit l'occasion pour renouveler à la Légation de Sa Majesté Britannique les assurances de sa haute considération.

Praha, le 4 août, 1925.

Enclosure 2 in No. 203.

(To Australia only.)

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 7th July, 1924.

In continuation of my note of the 28th ultimo, respecting customs duties and import and export duties in British Dominions and Colonies and Mandated Territories, I have the honour to transmit to you herewith, copies of the documents* referred to in the enclosed list, respecting the Commonwealth of Australia, Papua, Norfolk Island and New Guinea.

2. With regard to Papua, Norfolk Island and New Guinea, I have the honour to add that goods are accorded treatment in these territories as favourable as that accorded to goods produced or manufactured in any other foreign country.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch Dominions No. 402 of the 11th September,† on the subject of the position of the Dominions in relation to the Commercial Treaty with Czechoslovakia and to inform you, with reference to paragraph 2 of Sir George Clerk's despatch,‡ that the Treaty between Newfoundland and Spain was a special arrangement with respect to the duty on fish following the special agreement between Norway and Spain on the same subject.

[Answered by No. 208.]

SIR,

Downing Street, 2nd January, 1925.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Amery to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 25th of November‡ forwarding a revised draft of the proposed treaty of commerce and navigation between this country and Esthonia.

2. The altered form of the wording of the instrument leaves a certain ambiguity as to the categories of British subjects for whom the rights under the treaty can be claimed, and, if it is intended that it should be possible, in accordance with the established practice, to claim rights for all British subjects irrespective of the part of the Empire with which they are connected, the wording seems, in Mr. Amery's opinion, open to serious objection. The "country" referred to, on the British side, is presumably Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and to argue that the expressions "British subjects" and "subjects or citizens of Great Britain and Northern Ireland" were equivalent would be most unacceptable to the Dominion Governments. It will be remembered that one of the reasons why the Government of the Irish Free State did not wish Free State citizens to be described as "British subjects" on passports, was that this expression is interpreted in certain quarters in the Irish Free State as connoting a "subject of Great Britain."

* No. 154. † Not printed: it was in the usual form. ‡ No. 120 in Dominions No. 93.

3. Mr. Amery would be glad to learn whether there would be any insuperable objection to making the treaty one between His Majesty and "the Esthonian Republic" (in somewhat the same way as there have been in the past Treaties between His Majesty and "the United States of America" and certain South American Republics). This course would presumably make it possible to adhere more closely in the wording of the treaty when completed to the terms of the model draft commercial treaty. I am to suggest that, if this is considered not to be possible, it might be better, whilst retaining His Britannic Majesty's Government as the contracting party, to use the phrases "territories of His Britannic Majesty" and "territories of the Esthonian Republic," as far as possible, throughout the treaty, making the other necessary consequential alterations in wording and in particular referring throughout to "British subjects" and to "Esthonian citizens."

4. In this connexion I am to invite reference to the correspondence with the Governor-General of Canada as to the meaning of the expression "British nationals" in the Treaties with the Soviet Union, where the Contracting Party was "Great Britain and Northern Ireland" (see Colonial Office letters of the 6th of August, the 12th of August and the 19th of August*). I am also to observe that the Resolution of the Imperial Conference of 1923 on the subject of the Negotiation, Signature and Ratification of Treaties, implies that the normal form of Treaty (except in the case of agreements of a technical or administrative character) is in His Majesty's name, and that every instance in which His Majesty's Government conclude a formal Treaty otherwise than in His Majesty's name would make it more difficult to press a Dominion Government to conclude its Treaties in His Majesty's name, if for any reason it were disposed to adopt a different form.

5. Copies of this letter are being sent to the Board of Trade and the India Office.

I am, &c.,
E. J. HARDING.

(Received 4th April, 1925.)

[Answered by No. 209.]

SIR, Foreign Office, S.W.1, 3rd April, 1925.
I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Chamberlain to refer to your letter of the 2nd January,† regarding the proposed treaty of commerce and navigation between this country and Esthonia, and to state that careful consideration has been given to the questions raised therein.

2. A decision as to the final form of the treaty has been delayed owing to the knowledge that certain changes are impending in the Esthonian constitution which will give the President of the Esthonian Republic treaty-making powers.

3. His Majesty's Minister at Riga now reports, however, that the date on which the change will be made is a matter of considerable doubt; and, in view of the inadvisability of delaying the matter further, Mr. Chamberlain proposes to proceed with the conclusion of the treaty as between His Majesty the King and the Esthonian Republic, a form which meets the view of Mr. Secretary Amery expressed in paragraph 3 of your letter under reference.

4. The treaty will accordingly be put in the form of a final draft and transmitted in due course to you for such observations as Mr. Secretary Amery may wish to offer.

5. Although in the present instance, in view of the urgent necessity of concluding a commercial treaty with Esthonia without further delay, the questions raised in paragraphs 2 and 4 of your letter have been left undecided by the adoption of the form mentioned in the preceding paragraph, Mr. Chamberlain considers that the time has now come for a careful re-examination of the question of the extent to which all British subjects should henceforth benefit under the terms of commercial treaties concluded with foreign States on behalf of Great Britain and Northern

SIR, WITH reference to your telegram No. 46 of the 20th ultimo and previous correspondence regarding the proposed extradition treaty with Albania, I have to observe, for your personal information, that the point has recently arisen whether, having regard to the fact that in theory capitulatory rights still exist in that country, it would be expedient at the moment to conclude a treaty of this nature, which might be held to imply on the part of His Majesty a surrender of such rights.

2. It seems on the whole undesirable to waive any advantage which may result from the existing position till an opportune time arrives for dealing with it comprehensively, and as in the circumstances the proposed treaty would involve the question of the capitulations, the principle of which His Majesty's Government do not at present desire to abandon, I shall be glad if you will take no further action in the matter and allow it to drop for the present.

Enclosure 1 in No. 216.

(No. 236.)

SIR,

31st October, 1924.

I HAVE the honour to refer to your despatch No. 126 of 30th June last transmitting the observations of His Majesty's Government on the Brazilian counter-draft of the proposed extradition treaty between the United Kingdom and Brazil.

2. I have now received from the Ministry of Foreign Affairs the reply of the Brazilian Government to the amendments proposed by His Majesty's Government, and I enclose herein a copy of the Note in question, together with a translation thereof.

3. It will be observed that, with the exception of that part of Article 2 of the British draft which enumerates the crimes in respect of which extradition shall be granted, all the amendments proposed by His Majesty's Government have been found acceptable by the Brazilian Government.

4. In regard, however, to the first paragraph of Article 2 of the British draft we appear to have arrived at a deadlock. According to the Home Office letter of

* No. 129 in Dominions No. 93. † No. 130 in Dominions No. 93.

24th March to the Foreign Office, British Extradition Law, allows the surrender of persons accused of certain crimes only, for which reason it is usual for "extraditable" crimes to be enumerated in the treaty to be concluded. On the other hand, according to the Ministry for Foreign Affairs' note, the difficulty consists, not in finding an appropriate translation of the crimes enumerated in the British draft, but in the fact that the sole criterion in Brazilian law of an extraditable crime lies in the gravity of the punishment to which it is liable.

5. Two divergent principles accordingly presented themselves, but it seemed to me that if it could be shown that all or at least the majority of the crimes enumerated in the British draft were punishable in Brazilian law with a heavier penalty than one year's imprisonment a compromise might be found.

6. Mr. Howe accordingly discussed the matter by my directions, unofficially, with a subordinate of the Department concerned.

7. Mr. Howe was informed that Brazilian Extradition Treaties had indeed in the past contained a clause enumerating the crimes for which extradition could be demanded, but on the re-organization of the Penal Code this clause had been the source of such embarrassment to the Brazilian Government that the Treaties had been denounced in 1912, since when no Brazilian Extradition Treaty had ever contained any specification of crimes. The Ministry of Justice were resolutely opposed to the idea of specification.

8. Roughly speaking, Brazilian criminal law distinguishes two kinds of offences—crimes and delinquencies; the penalty for the former being imprisonment for more than one year; for the latter imprisonment up to one year, and it is the circumstances of the offence which determine whether it shall be treated as a crime or a delinquency. Consequently, it is almost impossible, for the purpose of an extradition treaty, to lay down a sufficiently definite dividing line. To do so, it was stated, would require the citation of three-quarters of the Brazilian Penal Code.

9. In these circumstances I fear I do not see how the difficulty can be overcome.

I have, &c.,
ERNEST SCOTT.

The Right Honourable

J. Ramsay MacDonald, M.P.,

His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

(Translation.)
(PE/432/25.)

Ministry for Foreign Affairs, Rio de Janeiro,

MONSIEUR LE CHARGÉ D'AFFAIRES,

11th October, 1924.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of the note No. 120 of 25th August last in which Sir John Tilley communicated to me the observations of His Britannic Majesty's Government on the counter-draft of the extradition treaty which I forwarded to the Embassy.

For greater clearness I shall expose to Your Excellency, point by point, the views of the Brazilian Government in regard to each of those observations.

It was not the difficulty which exists, but which, as His Excellency said, is not insuperable, of appropriately translating the crimes enumerated in the British draft, which caused this Ministry not to make that enumeration. The specification in a treaty of crimes for which extradition may be demanded is not executable (exequível) in Brazilian law, whose sole criterion is the gravity of the punishment with which the crime is punished by its legislation, being included attempted crime, collusion (co-autoria), and complicity; and this appears to be the greatest obstacle to the negotiation of an extradition treaty between the two countries.

The modification which the Embassy proposes in the sole paragraph of this same article is perfectly acceptable and could be translated as follows: "The Brazilian Government shall be able at its discretion (a sua critério) to refuse to deliver an extraditable person (extraditando) when the punishment to which he may be liable is death or corporal punishment."

In the interests of an extradition treaty with Great Britain, Brazil would be disposed to accept the elimination of the sole paragraph of this Article, although this is contrary to the principle of international assistance (assistencia internacional), so it would be preferable to modify the first words of that paragraph as follows: "Persons not nationals of the High Contracting Parties accused or convicted, etc." Thus the difficulty in English law which His Excellency mentions would be avoided.

(c), (d) and (e). Articles 17, 18 and 19.

The Brazilian Government will have no hesitation in including the proposed modifications in the text of a treaty which may be concluded, and it was merely by error, which I regret, that such modifications were not included in the counter-draft which I transmitted to Sir John Tilley on 27th November last.

I avail myself, &c.,

FELIX PACHECO.

SIR, Home Office, Whitehall, 4th June, 1925.

In reply to your communication of the 3rd December last forwarding a despatch from His Majesty's representative at Rio de Janeiro regarding the proposed extradition treaty with Brazil, I am directed by Secretary Sir William Joynson-Hicks to transmit herewith a memorandum thereon and to suggest that the Brazilian Government should be asked to assent to the proposals contained therein. In the event of their assent being obtained, Sir William Joynson-Hicks will proceed to examine in detail the other proposals in the Brazilian counter-draft which was enclosed in your communication of the 16th February, 1924.

MEMORANDUM.

PROPOSED EXTRADITION TREATY BETWEEN GREAT BRITAIN AND BRAZIL.

Observations on the reply of the 11th October, 1924, from the Brazilian Ministry for Foreign Affairs.

Articles 1, 2 and 3.

BRITISH law authorizes the extradition to foreign States of persons accused or convicted of certain offences which are specified in the Statutes by which extradition is governed. These offences are all punishable in this country with imprisonment for 12 months or more; but there are other offences punishable in this country with imprisonment for 12 months or more in respect of which persons cannot be extradited under British law. It is not therefore possible to accept the proposal in Article 2 of the Brazilian counter-draft that extradition shall be granted in respect of all offences punishable with imprisonment for more than one year.

In order that an extradition treaty may be concluded between His Majesty's Government and Brazil and in order to overcome the difficulties arising out of Brazilian law in the enumeration of definite offences in the Treaty, the following Article is suggested for the consideration of the Brazilian Government in substitution of Articles 1, 2 and 3 of the former draft:—

"The High Contracting Parties engage to surrender to each other, subject to the conditions set out in the following Articles of this Treaty, any person who has been either convicted or accused of a crime or offence committed within the jurisdiction of one Party in respect of which the law of both Parties for the time being in force allows extradition to be granted and is found in the territory of the other Party; Provided always that either Party may in its absolute discretion refuse to grant the extradition of any person who is one of its own subjects or is accused or convicted of a crime or offence punishable under the law of the Party by whom extradition is claimed by death or corporal punishment; Provided also that extradition shall not be granted for any crime or offence unless it is punishable by at least 12 months' imprisonment or some greater punishment."

Crimes on Ships, etc.

The Brazilian reply does not wholly meet the English law on this point. Thus, if a man having been surrendered by a third State to Brazil is in a ship in an English Port or is transferred from one ship to another, he is within the jurisdiction of the English Courts. The foreign warrant would not be sufficient authority for his custody, if he applied for a writ of habeas corpus for his discharge. In the event of such an application being made, it would be necessary for the Brazilian Government to apply in the ordinary way for his extradition from England. Applications for discharge in such circumstances are in fact but rarely made; but as the "sole paragraph" of Article 11 in the Brazilian counter-draft does not conform with English law it cannot be accepted.

SIR,

I HAVE the honour to refer to the British Czechoslovak Extradition Treaty signed at London on 11th November, 1924, and to approach you in the following matter.

According to Article 12 of this Treaty the Czechoslovak Ministry of Justice is the authority by whom the warrants and other documents mentioned in this article are to be sealed. In view of the fact that according to the constitution of the Czechoslovak Republic, in the case of the prosecution of military persons, the Military Courts are within the sphere of competence of the Ministry of National Defence, I beg to ask you whether His Majesty's Government will agree that in the case of prosecution of persons by the Military Courts the documents named in Article 12 may be sealed by the Czechoslovak Ministry of National Defence instead.

Should His Majesty's Government agree with this proposition, I should esteem it as a great favour if I could be informed whether the exchange of notes will be regarded as sufficient for the purpose.

Having regard to section 15 of the Extradition Act, 1870, which sets out the manner in which depositions and other documents are required to be authenticated in order that they may be admissible as evidence in English Courts it would be desirable in the circumstances mentioned in Monsieur Bráf's note that the terms of Article 12 of the Treaty should be amplified by the addition of the words "or other Minister of State" at the end of that Article.

* No. 136 in Dominions No. 93.

3. This amendment might in the view of His Majesty's Government now most conveniently be effected by means of a signed protocol to place on record the insertion of these words in Article 12 of the Treaty, and the Treaty and Protocol could then be embodied in the instruments of ratification to be exchanged.

4. If this proposal is agreeable to the Czechoslovak Government I shall be happy to transmit to you a draft Protocol for their concurrence.

SIR,

Ottawa, 27th August, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to inform you that inquiry has been made by the Department of the Secretary of State of Canada whether extradition treaties have been negotiated with Esthonia and Lithuania, and, if not, whether these States are still affected by such treaties applicable to Russia before they ceased to be territory of that Power.

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 21st October, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of the Deputy Governor-General's despatch No. 346 of the 27th of August* and to request Your Excellency to inform Your Ministers that an Extradition Treaty on the lines of the model draft extradition treaty has been negotiated with Esthonia and is at present awaiting signature. In this connexion I would invite reference to Mr. Churchill's Confidential despatch Dominions No. 341 of the 8th of September, 1922.†

2. As regards Lithuania, a draft extradition treaty on similar lines has been submitted to the Lithuanian Government and is at present under their consideration.

3. With reference to the position of Esthonia and Lithuania in relation to the Anglo-Russian Extradition Treaty of 1886, I would invite the attention of your Ministers to the despatch from the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs of the 20th of December, 1920, to His Majesty's Minister at Helsingfors on the subject of the application of Anglo-Russian Treaties to Finland, a copy of which was enclosed in the late Lord Milner's despatch Dominions No. 521 of the 29th of December, 1920.‡ It will be observed that the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs was advised in that connexion that in the case of a new State being formed out of part of an old State, there is no succession by the new State to the Treaties of the old one.

Enclosure in No. 224.

Prime Minister's Office, Pretoria, 6th January, 1925.

MINUTE No. 17.

MINISTERS have the honour to refer to His Excellency's Minute No. 55/572 of the 5th of July last transmitting a despatch Dominions No. 261 of the 11th June from the Secretary of State for the Colonies and a copy of the text of the Extradition Treaty between His Majesty and the Government of the Republic of Finland and to His Excellency's Minute No. 55/601 of the 2nd instant transmitting a despatch Dominions No. 569 of the 10th of December from the Secretary of State for the Colonies.

2. Ministers note that, though under Article 17 of the Treaty its stipulations are not applicable to the Union of South Africa, they may be made applicable if notice to that effect is given on behalf of the Union Government by His Majesty's representative in Finland.

Ministers would therefore request His Excellency that the request be made through the proper quarter—which they assume to be the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs—that His Majesty's representative at Helsingfors should on behalf of the Government of the Union of South Africa give to the Government of Finland notice that the stipulations of the Extradition Treaty signed on the 30th May, 1924, shall be applicable to the Union of South Africa.

which inquires whether Ministers desire arrangements to be made under Article 19 of the Extradition Treaty with Finland for the extension of the Treaty to the Mandated Territory of South-West Africa.

2. Ministers have given the matter further careful consideration, and while appreciating the inquiry made by the Secretary of State and the possible convenience that might result from such an extension, consider that, for reasons indicated in paragraphs 3, 4 and 6 of their Minute No. 988 of the 17th December, they are unable to make the request for such extension. Ministers would refer also to paragraph 3 (c) of their Minute No. 66 of the 24th January relative to the proposed Extradition Treaty with the United States of America.

MINISTERS have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of His Excellency's Minutes No. 55/635 and No. 55/636, both dated the 27th August, with which were transmitted copies of despatches dated 31st July, 1925, from the Secretary of State for the Dominions relative to the new Extradition Treaty between His Majesty the King and the Government of the Latvian Republic.

2. Ministers beg to request that His Excellency inform the Secretary of State that they desire notice to be given under Article 17 of the Treaty on behalf of the Government of the Union of South Africa that the stipulations of the Treaty shall be applicable to the Union of South Africa.

3. Ministers also request His Excellency to inform the Secretary of State that the Government of the Union of South Africa desires that the provisions of the Treaty should under Article 19 thereof be extended to the territory of South-West Africa, for the administration whereof a mandate is held by His Majesty on behalf of the Government of the Union from the League of Nations, and that Ministers are willing that notes for the purpose of effecting such extension be exchanged by His Majesty's representative at Riga, acting on behalf of the Union Government, with the Government of the Latvian Republic.

4. Ministers consider that the notice under Article 17 and the note under Article 19 should in each case operate from the 1st January, 1926.

Enclosure in No. 259.

(Confidential.)

MINUTE No. 66.

Prime Minister's Office, Pretoria, 24th January, 1925.

MINISTERS have the honour to acknowledge His Excellency's Minute (Confidential) No. 55/603 of the 5th instant covering a despatch from the Secretary of State for the Colonies dated 11th December, 1924, with which despatch was enclosed a draft extradition treaty between His Majesty the King and the President of the United States of America.

2. Subject to the suggestions and remarks which Ministers make hereunder, they concur in the procedure proposed by His Majesty's Government and outlined in the Secretary of State's despatch.

3. These suggestions and remarks are as follows:—

(a) With reference to the omission from the draft Treaty of the provision that the contracting parties shall not be bound to surrender their own nationals, Ministers feel (as in the case of the extradition treaty with Brazil which formed the subject of Ministers' Minute No. 887 of 31st October, 1924) that any treaty which makes it compulsory that either of the parties thereto should surrender its own nationals, may be open to objection; and that they would therefore prefer the retention of the provision whereby each party reserves to itself the right to refuse or to grant the surrender of its own nationals. Inasmuch, however, as under Article 16 of the draft Treaty the application thereof to the Union depends on notice being given on its behalf to the United States Government, Ministers are unwilling to press unduly this point.

No. 162 in Dominions No. 93. † No. 132 in Dominions No. 93. ‡ No. 407 in Dominions No. 93.

(b) Ministers consider that the obligation undertaken under Article 15 by the surrendering State to defray the expense of conveying to its own frontier may operate somewhat inequitably against the Union Government in the case of an extradition to the United States from South Africa; as presumably, on the analogy of a decision given in a recent case of extradition from the Union to the Belgian Congo, the Union would have to bear the cost of the passage of the surrendered fugitive and his escort to England and of the fugitive's detention there until he could be embarked from England to America. This would not operate in the same way if the fugitive were being surrendered by Great Britain or by the United States, as its frontiers in each case would be the port of embarkation. Ministers therefore suggest for consideration the addition of the following words to Article 15: "Provided that in the case of the surrender of any person by the Government of a self-governing Dominion to which the stipulations of the present treaty are applicable under Article 16, the expression 'frontier' shall mean the boundary of that Dominion, and 'territories' shall mean the limits of that Dominion."

(c) In regard to the second paragraph of Article 18 of the draft Treaty, Ministers observe that the provisions of the Treaty may be applied in respect of extradition to and from territories for which a mandate is held from the League of Nations. In regard to this Ministers feel that they must adhere to the view which they expressed in their Minute No. 988 of 17th December, 1924, in relation to the proposed extension of existing extradition treaties to "B" and "C" mandated territories generally (His Excellency's Minute No. 55/597 of 3rd December, 1924, enclosing a cable despatch from Secretary of State 2nd December, 1924). Their adherence to those views is given, notwithstanding the terms of the second paragraph of their predecessors' Minute No. 1240 of 26th November, 1920, in which Ministers notice that a suggestion came from their predecessors that His Majesty's Government might consider whether extradition treaties in future should not contain some provision under which they could be made applicable to territories administered by self-governing Dominions under mandate.

Ministers suggest now that the second paragraph of Article 18 of the draft extradition treaty with the United States of America should be so phrased as not to include territories administered by self-governing Dominions under mandates. They are advised that the insertion in parenthesis after the words "His Britannic Majesty" of the words "(other than on behalf of a self-governing Dominion)" would carry out this suggestion.

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 18th August, 1925.

I HAVE the honour, with reference to Your Excellency's Confidential(2) despatch of the 27th of January* on the subject of the draft extradition treaty with the United States of America, to request you to inform your Ministers that, so far as His Majesty's Government are concerned, the policy adopted for many years has been to make no distinction between British subjects and aliens in regard to extradition. In some of the older extradition treaties with Powers whose law precluded them from surrendering their own subjects there is a stipulation against the surrender of nationals by either party. More recent treaties, however, have made the surrender of nationals optional for the sole purpose of complying with the requirements of the foreign Power concerned, and under these treaties, cases in which His Majesty's Government have exercised the power of refusing the extradition of a fugitive criminal on the ground of nationality are very rare indeed. Such objections as have in the past been raised to the surrender of criminals to foreign justice have been due to the condition of some foreign prisons. It might be necessary in the event of the conclusion of an extradition agreement with the Government of the Soviet Union to insert a restrictive clause, but there is clearly no reason for doing so in the case of the United States of America. In the circumstances, and particularly as the existing Treaty with the United States of America, which has been in force since 1842, contains no provision that the Contracting Parties are not bound to surrender their own nationals, His Majesty's Government would much prefer not to raise the point in the negotiations with the United States Government regarding a new Treaty.

2. As regards the proposed alteration of Article 15 of the draft treaty, it would appear that, under the Article as it now stands, the Union Government would be under no obligation to defray the cost of conveying a prisoner beyond one of their own ports where he could be delivered to an agent of the United States Government. In the view of His Majesty's Government the consideration which led to the arrangements referred to under (b) of Ministers' Minute No. 66 of the 24th of January† would be applicable only in extradition cases between territories, having contiguous land frontiers, in which any given Extradition Treaty was in force, and not in cases involving transport by sea.

3. As regards (c) in Ministers' Minute, I would invite reference to later correspondence on the subject, and especially to your telegram of the 28th of April,‡ in view of which steps are being taken to insert in the draft Treaty with the United States of America and similar treaties the form of words agreed upon.

[MY LORD,] [SIR,]

Downing Street, 16th September, 1925.

WITH reference to my Confidential despatch of the 11th December, 1924,§ I have the honour to request [Your Excellency] [you] to inform your Ministers that the United States Government have inquired whether it would be possible to conclude a Convention, applicable to the British Empire generally or to Great Britain, which would provide for the extradition of persons charged with crimes and offences against the laws for the suppression of the traffic in narcotics [To Canada: similar to that concluded between the United States and Canada (vide your despatch No. 311 of the 6th August*)].

* No. 259. † Enclosure in No. 259. ‡ No. 606 (in Part II). § Nos. 163 and 162 in Dominions No. 93.

The United States Government in this connexion alluded to the case of a person under an indictment in the United States, charged with the sale of narcotics in violation of the Federal Narcotic Laws, and believed to be in England, as an example of an offence regarded by them with much seriousness, the number of which was increasing very rapidly.

2. His Majesty's Government think it desirable that arrangements with the United States should exist for the extradition of persons charged with such offences, provided that offences of a minor or merely technical character were excluded from the arrangements, and they think that the most satisfactory procedure would be to insert in Article 2 of the suggested new extradition treaty with the United States, the draft of which was enclosed in my despatch under reference, the following paragraph:—

"25. Offences or attempted offences in connexion with traffic in dangerous drugs, if punishable by the laws of both States with imprisonment for at least twelve months."

3. As the Extradition Acts do not at present authorize the surrender of persons accused or convicted of offences in relation to the traffic in dangerous drugs, amending legislation would be necessary before a Treaty containing such a provision could be ratified, and it would therefore be necessary to make it clear to the United States Government that the proposal was dependent on the necessary provision being made by Parliament.

4. I should be glad to learn, at your Ministers' early convenience, whether, having regard to the terms of Article 16 of the draft Treaty, they desire to express any special views on this proposal.

5. It is also proposed that an additional paragraph should be inserted in Article 2 of the draft Treaty after paragraph 22, in the following terms:—

"23. Bribery, defined to be the offering, giving, or receiving of bribes made criminal by the laws of both States."

This crime was added to the list of extraditable crimes in 1906 at the request of the United States Government.

[To Canada: 6. I take this opportunity to state that I should be grateful for an early reply to my Confidential despatch of the 11th December, 1924.† The other Dominions have expressed general concurrence in the proposals referred to in paragraphs 1 and 2 of that despatch.]

MINUTE No. 821.

Prime Minister's Office, 21st September, 1925.

MINISTERS have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Minute No. 55/639 Confidential from His Excellency the Governor-General dated the 10th instant, which covered a despatch dated 18th August from the Secretary of State for the Dominions relative to the draft Extradition Treaty with the United States of America.

2. As indicated in paragraph 3 of Ministers' Minute No. 66 of the 24th January last Ministers are unwilling to press the point previously raised by them that the Union Government so far as the Treaty with the United States is made applicable shall not be bound to surrender its own nationals. Ministers fully appreciate that His Majesty's Government would prefer not to raise this matter in the negotiations with the United States Government regarding the new Treaty. Ministers, however, reserve to themselves the possibility of pressing this point in extradition treaties which may be made with countries whose criminal procedure or prisons system is unknown to them or regarded by them as unsatisfactory.

3. With regard to Article 15 of the draft treaty as drafted, Ministers accept the interpretation which His Majesty's Government places thereon that the Union Government would be under no obligation to defray any other expense on the surrender of a prisoner, than is involved in delivering him to an agent of the United States Government at a Union port, such being regarded as the Union frontier, when the transport is by sea, notwithstanding that for purposes of convenience the prisoner may be conveyed to the United States via Great Britain.

4. With regard to the form of words to be used in Article XVIII of the draft treaty, Ministers have already in their Minute No. 377 of 28th April last indicated their concurrence in the form of words suggested in the last paragraph of the Secretary of State's cable despatch of 11th April.

MINUTE No. 900.

MINISTERS have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of His Excellency the Governor-General's Minute No. 55/645 of the 12th instant covering despatch No. 420 from the Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs.

Ministers beg to state that under existing legislation (Section 10 of Act No. 35 of 1922), the penalty in the Union for offences in connexion with traffic in dangerous drugs is a fine of one hundred pounds or six months' imprisonment with hard labour or both such fine and imprisonment.

The addition of the proposed new paragraph 25 to Article 2, would therefore not at present have the effect of making offences in connexion with traffic in dangerous drugs extraditable as between the Union and the United States. It seems to be a matter for consideration whether in the proposed new paragraph 25 to Article 2 "six months" should not be substituted for "twelve months."

Subject to the above Ministers do not desire to express any special views on the proposals.

[Answered by Nos. 271 and 274.]

(Confidential.)

SIR, Governor-General's Office, Melbourne, 22nd December, 1924.

I HAVE the honour to inform you that I transmitted to my Prime Minister a copy of your predecessor's despatch dated 15th May, 1924, Confidential,† together with a copy of the Note from the Finnish Minister in London, enclosed therewith, stating that Australian goods imported into Finland will not enjoy the treatment accorded, under the Treaty of Commerce and Navigation with Finland, to similar goods produced or manufactured in the United Kingdom, owing to the action of the Commonwealth Government in bringing Finnish Kraft Paper within the operation of Section 8 of the Commonwealth Customs Tariff (Industries Preservation) Act, 1921-22.

My Prime Minister advises that no discriminatory action is now being applied by the Commonwealth Government to Kraft Paper originating in or exported from Finland, as the notice issued by the Minister for Trade and Customs, and published in Commonwealth Gazette of 24th January, 1924, No. 5, stating that Kraft Paper originating in or exported from Finland, the landed duty-paid cost of which at any port in Australia was less than £34 per ton, would be brought within the operation of Section 8 of the Act referred to, has been cancelled. Since 21st May, 1924, Kraft Paper originating in or exported from any country except the United Kingdom, the c.i.f. and duty-paid cost of which (excluding wharfage and stacking) is less than the manufacturers' selling price of Australian-made Kraft Paper, has been brought within the operation of Section 5 of the Customs Tariff (Industries Preservation) Act, 1921-22.

The Commonwealth Government considers that the objection of the Finnish Government that Kraft paper from Finland is being accorded on importation into Australia treatment less favourable than that accorded to similar goods from other foreign countries has now been entirely removed. I should be glad if you would be so good as to cause the Finnish Minister to be so informed, and also that the Commonwealth Government confidently hopes that in the circumstances the preferential treatment previously accorded to Australian goods will be restored.

With reference to the concluding portion of your predecessor's telegram of 11th August last,* you will have learned from my telegram of 19th December,† that the Commonwealth Government does not desire that the Mandated Territory of Nauru should become a party to the Anglo-Finnish Commercial Treaty.

I have, &c.,

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 29th May, 1925.

WITH reference to Your Excellency's Confidential despatch of the 22nd of December,† I have the honour to transmit to you, to be laid before your Ministers, the accompanying copy of a note to the Finnish Minister regarding the tariff treatment of Australian goods imported into Finland.

I have, &c.,
L. S. AMERY.

Enclosure in No. 274.

Foreign Office, S.W.1.

14th May, 1925.

SIR,

IN your note No. 576 of 11th April, you informed me that in view of the fact that Finnish Kraft paper had been brought under the operation of section 8 of the Australian Customs Tariff (Industries Preservation) Act and a dumping duty applied, Article 23, paragraph 2, of the Treaty of Commerce and Navigation between the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and Finland of 14th December, 1923, could not be applied to Australian goods, which would not therefore, in Finland, enjoy the treatment accorded to similar goods produced or manufactured in the United Kingdom.

2. I have the honour to inform you that no discriminatory duty is now being applied by the Commonwealth Government to Kraft paper originating in or exported from Finland, as the notice issued by the Minister for Trade and Customs, and published in the Commonwealth Gazette of the 24th January, 1924, No. 5, stating that Kraft paper originating in or exported from Finland, the landed duty-paid cost of which at any port in Australia was less than thirty-four pounds per ton, would be brought within the operation of section 8 of the Act referred to, has been cancelled. Since the 21st May, 1924, Kraft paper originating in or exported from any country except the United Kingdom, the c.i.f. and duty-paid cost of which (excluding wharfage and stacking) is less than the manufacturers' selling price of Australian-made Kraft paper, has been brought within the operation of section 5 of the Customs Tariff (Industries Preservation) Act, 1921-1922.

3. The special dumping below cost duty imposed on Kraft paper under section 5 of that Act is general in its application to Kraft paper of any foreign origin and cannot, in the view of His Majesty's Government, be held to constitute discrimination against Finland; and the objection of the Finnish Government that Kraft paper from Finland is being accorded, on importation into Australia, treatment less favourable than that accorded to similar goods from other foreign countries, has now, therefore, been entirely met.

* 40170/24: not printed; it confirmed No. 176 in Dominions No. 93. † No. 270.

4. In these circumstances I confidently hope that the preferential treatment previously accorded in Finland to Australian goods will now be restored.

UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 17th February, 1925.)

(Confidential.)

SIR,

Governor-General's Office, Pretoria, 27th January, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to you herewith, with reference to your despatch Confidential Dominions No. 556 of the 2nd December, 1924,‡ copy of Minute from Ministers on the subject of the proposal for a special inquiry in connexion with the present system of consultation on matters of foreign policy and general Imperial interest.

I have, &c.,
ATHLONE,
Governor-General.

Enclosure in No. 281.

(Confidential.)

Prime Minister's Office, Pretoria, 22nd January, 1925.

MINUTE No. 63.

REFERRING to the Governor-General's Confidential Minute No. 23/569 of the 27th December, 1924, it is noted that the British Government shares in the view, that at this stage the proposal for a special inquiry in connexion with the present system of consultation on matters of foreign policy and general Imperial interest is not likely to prove of any advantage.

* No. 277. † No. 279. ‡ No. 25 in Cmd. 2301.

Ministers desire to avail themselves of the present opportunity of submitting to the British Government that according to their views the difficulties which have been encountered in making the present system of consultation effective, are due, not so much to any inherent defect in the system itself, as to the failure, in the case of negotiations with foreign powers, to insist upon the recognition by such powers of the fundamental fact upon which that system is based, viz., that every member of the Commonwealth by itself constitutes a distinct National entity with equal status.

Ministers are of opinion that experience during the last years has shown that while the members of the Commonwealth have inter se acceded wholeheartedly to this view and have formed it as the basis for joint consultation and common action in relation to foreign affairs and common interests, they have, in the event of opposition by foreign powers to its application, not shown themselves prepared to give it the measure of support necessary to overcome that opposition.

As a result, foreign powers, whenever they find it convenient or to their interest to have the Dominions excluded from participating in any negotiations as distinct national entities refuse to recognize their distinct existence; and, as a consequence, wherever this refusal ultimately prevails—as in the recent Conference over the Dawes Report—the system of consultation and representation necessarily cannot be given effect to.

This is felt as creating a highly unsatisfactory state of affairs; for no matter what may be the responsibility incurred by a Dominion through its share in any Joint Consultation with other members of the Commonwealth upon a matter of foreign affairs, it is ultimately left to the discretion of the foreign power concerned to say as to whether such a Dominion shall be barred or not from actual participation in the final decision.

Ministers feel convinced that the only remedy that can be applied here is, whenever opportunity arises, to insist that the distinct status of every Dominion and its right to separate individual representation shall be recognized by foreign powers concerned. Unless this attitude is frankly adopted in our relations with foreign nations and the correctness of it recognized by these nations, it is felt that all efforts to devise methods of closer co-operation in matters of foreign policy must of necessity prove fruitless.

While the international recognition of the status of the Dominions as distinct nations entitled to separate representation in the case of international negotiations, seems to this Government so essential as to constitute a condition precedent to the success of any attempt at a satisfactory method of consultation upon foreign affairs and general Imperial interest, Ministers feel satisfied that it will at the same time prove of incalculable value in removing suspicion and thereby many of the difficulties at present constantly interfering with the speedy determination of international questions. As between the different members of the Commonwealth the definite and explicit recognition of the international status of the individual Dominions cannot but lead to a most salutary increased measure of confidence. But that will not be all. Such international recognition of individual status must necessarily reflect upon and enhance the collective status of the Commonwealth, and force upon the world an international recognition of the Commonwealth relationship to which international law will eventually be forced to adjust itself.

2. My Ministers request me to inform you that the Government of this Colony desires to conclude with the French Government an arrangement similar to that existing with the British Government in regard to the attestation of certificates of origin and invoices in respect of goods exported to France, namely, that a charge not exceeding 5 gold francs shall be made by the French Consul in Rhodesia for such attestation in the case of goods exceeding 100 gold francs in value exported to France from Southern Rhodesia.

3. As regards sub-section (b) of the last paragraph of your despatch under reply, my Ministers state that Southern Rhodesia does not at present require the attestation by a British Consul of certificates of origin and invoices of goods exported from France and French Possessions to Southern Rhodesia, and that it is not desirable to make any alteration in this respect.

SIR,

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Chamberlain to transmit to you, for deposit with the Secretariat of the League of Nations, the formal instrument of accession of Newfoundland and Southern Rhodesia to the following Conventions signed at Geneva, 9th December, 1923, viz.:—(1) The Convention and Statute on the International Régime of Railways; (2) the Convention and Statute on the International Régime of Maritime Ports; (3) the Convention relating to the Transmission in Transit of Electric Power; and (4) the Convention relating to the Development of Hydraulic Power.

2. I am to request that the receipt of this instrument of accession may be acknowledged and its deposit notified to the States parties to the Conventions.

I am, &c.,
MILES W. LAMPSON.

The Secretary-General, League of Nations,
Geneva.

THE Undersigned, His Britannic Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, hereby declares that His Britannic Majesty accedes on behalf of Newfoundland and Southern Rhodesia to the following instruments signed at Geneva, 9th December, 1923:—

- (1) The Convention and Statute on the International Régime of Railways;
- (2) The Convention and Statute on the International Régime of Maritime Ports;
- (3) The Convention relating to the Transmission in Transit of Electric Power; and
- (4) The Convention relating to the Development of Hydraulic Power affecting more than one State.

AUSTEN CHAMBERLAIN.

Foreign Office,

Enclosure 3 in No. 289.

League of Nations, Geneva.

4th May, 1925.

SIR,

I BEG to acknowledge receipt of your letter of 21st April, 1925, by which you have been good enough to transmit to me the formal instrument of accession by His Britannic Majesty on behalf of Newfoundland and Southern Rhodesia to the following conventions signed at Geneva, 9th December, 1923:—

- (1) The Convention and Statute on the International Régime of Railways;
- (2) The Convention and Statute on the International Régime of Maritime Ports;
- (3) The Convention relating to the Transmission in Transit of Electric Power; and
- (4) The Convention relating to the Development of Hydraulic Power affecting more than one State.

The above-mentioned instrument of accession has been deposited with the Secretariat of the League on 23rd April, 1925, and has been duly noted in the Registers of the Secretariat.

I will not fail to inform of this deposit the Members of the League and the other States signatories of these instruments.

I am, &c.,

22ND MAY. Your despatch of 24th May, 1924, No. 187.* Order in Council passed 24th April that His Majesty be moved to accede on behalf of the Commonwealth of Australia to the Convention, Statute and Protocol of Signature on International Régime of Maritime Ports adopted 1923, accession not to be deemed to apply to Papua, Norfolk Island and New Guinea. With respect to Nauru, Administrator sees no reason for non-application. As, however, it has been customary to exclude mandatory territory from operation of international conventions and it is desired present convention be not applied to New Guinea, Commonwealth Government is of opinion that question should be fully considered before this mandate is placed in a different position from others by extending the present convention to Nauru.—GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

REFERRING to my letters C.L. 4. 1925. V. and C.L. 40. 1925. V. of 22nd January, and 20th April, 1925, respectively, I beg to inform you that, in consequence of the deposit of the ratification by Siam on 9th January, and of the ratification by His Britannic Majesty for the British Empire and for New Zealand on 1st April, 1925, of the Convention relating to the Development of Hydraulic Power affecting more than one State and Protocol of Signature, Geneva, 9th December, 1923, this Convention and its Protocol will come into force on 30th June, 1925, according to Article 18 of the Convention, which reads as follows:—

"The present Convention will not come into force until it has been ratified in the name of three States. The date of its coming into force shall be the ninetieth day after the receipt by the Secretary-General of the League of Nations of the third ratification. Thereafter, the present Convention will take effect in the case of each Party ninety days after the receipt of its ratification or of the notification of its accession.

In compliance with the provisions of Article 18 of the Covenant of the League of Nations, the Secretary-General will register the present Convention upon the day of its coming into force."

13TH JANUARY. His Majesty's Ambassador, Berlin, reports that after 10th January (see Article 280 of Treaty of Versailles) German Government will adopt in customs matters general principle of giving most-favoured-nation treatment to other countries giving Germany such treatment and accordingly, though Anglo-German Commercial Treaty not yet ratified, they have given orders that until further notice most-favoured-nation treatment shall be accorded to goods from this country and Dominions and Colonies except Canada, Australia and New Zealand which are excluded on the ground that they do not give Germany most-favoured-nation treatment. His Majesty's Ambassador adds that countries not enjoying most-favoured-nation treatment in Germany will for the present come under general tariff (which at present imposes slightly higher duties on a limited number of articles than those imposed on same articles by most-favoured-nation tariff), but it is possible that new and much higher tariff will be applied to countries discriminating against her. This may include imposition of duty on goods hitherto free.—AMERY.

British Embassy, Berlin, 14th August, 1925.

His Majesty's Ambassador at Berlin presents his compliments to His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and has the honour to report that the Commercial Secretary at this Embassy has received the following information from the Ministry for Foreign Affairs regarding the progress of negotiations for the conclusion of commercial treaties between Germany and the British Dominions.

Ireland.—Negotiations are proceeding satisfactorily for a treaty which will be similar mutatis mutandis to that concluded with the United Kingdom.

Canada.—Negotiations have made no progress, as the Canadian Government have adopted the view that to attempt to pass a commercial treaty with Germany through the House of Representatives in Ottawa might lead to anti-German demonstrations. They therefore propose that a commercial arrangement should be made between Canada and Germany in some form which would not require parliamentary sanction.

The German Government cannot conceive what form this could be and negotiations are, therefore, for the time being at an end.

South Africa.—Negotiations were proceeding favourably when a set-back resulted from the introduction by the South African Government of new tariff proposals. The Commissioner for the South African Government in Europe, Mr. Pienaar, has, however, now received instructions to conduct tariff negotiations.

Australia and New Zealand.—There are no prospects of the negotiation of a treaty with either of these two Dominions.

SIR, London, W.1, 9th December, 1924.

WITH reference to my Notes No. 2516 and 2617 of the 10th September last, I have the honour to bring to your knowledge, by order of my Government, that according to a Bill passed yesterday by the Greek National Assembly the application of the new Greek Custom Tariff, mentioned in my Note No. 2617, which was to have come into force on the 10th December, 1924, was postponed until the 1st March, 1925.

* No. 299. † No. 231 in Dominions No. 93.

Following this, the Greek Government is prepared to continue the application of the Commercial Agreements in existence between Great Britain and Greece until the above-mentioned date, with the power to apply the new custom tariff, if in the meantime a new provisional agreement valid for six months to be tacitly renewed upon its expiration for an equal limit of time, could be concluded on this basis. It is understood that the extension of the existing agreements should be based on reciprocity.

I would be very grateful if you could inform me, at your early convenience, of the consent of His Britannic Majesty's Government to the above notification, and in this case to be good enough to bring the aforesaid to the knowledge of the Governments of such Dominions, Colonies, Protectorates, and Dependencies as have adhered to the Commercial Agreements between Great Britain and Greece, mentioned in my Note No. 599 of 3rd March, 1919, and in your reply thereto by Note of the 11th June, 1919.

4TH MARCH. Confidential. My despatch 22nd September, Dominions 467.* Greek Government have since arranged for prolongation of validity of commercial agreements referred to until 1st June, 1925. In view of Greek Ministers' statement in note of 10th September† as to readiness of Greek Government to negotiate new Commercial Treaty, His Majesty's Government have prepared and are submitting to Greek Government draft of General Commercial Treaty based on model draft with usual provision for accession of Dominions. In addition, it appeared to His Majesty's Government that it would be essential in the interest of the trade of the United Kingdom with Greece to negotiate special commercial arrangement (to be embodied either in Treaty itself or in separate instrument) on lines similar to those of Agreement of 28th March, 1890, and Declarations of 1904-1905, under which duties on certain scheduled articles produced or manufactured in United Kingdom on importation into Greece would be limited to specified figures. Question then arose what concession would be necessary by way of return, and as only concession of any value to Greece would be undertaking in respect of currants His Majesty's Government on careful consideration have come to conclusion that they would be justified, if satisfactory rates on articles of importance to United Kingdom could be obtained, in agreeing that during currency of arrangement currants produced in Greece should not on importation into United Kingdom be subjected to higher duty than that already existing, viz., 2s. per cwt. They propose that duration of above Treaty arrangements should be limited to five years with provision for subsequent termination by one year's notice. Prime Minister advises that intimation of proposal to continue admission of currants at 2s. per cwt. viewed with regret by the Commonwealth Government. At the Economic Conference the Minister representing His Majesty's Government, after reference to Treaty with Greece, affirmed that, subject to production being on adequate scale, Government was ready to consider larger duty necessary to give more effective preference. New Treaty proposed with Greece defers possibility of any larger preference at least six years. In the meantime, Australian production of currants rapidly increasing owing to development of new areas by Murray River Scheme. Ministers trust that means may be found to avoid disappointment of expectation founded on His Majesty's Government's undertaking at the Economic Conference.—FORSTER.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your telegrams of the 4th instant,‡ on the subject of a proposed new Commercial Treaty with Greece, and to confirm my telegram of even date§ to the effect that my Ministers desire that a separate treaty be negotiated applying as between this Colony and Greece on similar lines to those of the special arrangement under the Declaration of 1904-05. Newfoundland would give free admission of Greek currants and sultanias into this Colony in return for special rate of duty on Newfoundland codfish imported into Greece at minimum rate, viz., 2s. per cwt. TELEGRAM.

YOUR telegram 20th March.† Your Ministers will recollect that as explained by Prime Minister in speech reported in enclosure to my despatch of 23rd December, No. 589,‡ His Majesty's Government are pledged to refrain from further taxation of imported foodstuffs, but that to fulfil undertakings given at Economic Conference they propose to devote full monetary equivalent of the advantages of new duties proposed at Conference to development of Empire trade. As your Ministers are aware the Imperial Economic Committee has already commenced its deliberations, as a result of which it is hoped that scheme will be evolved for granting such assistance to Empire trade as would adequately compensate for any disappointment felt at inability of His Majesty's Government to give full effect to proposals put forward at Conference in 1923. Special case of currants will no doubt be considered by Committee.

I regret that my telegram of 4th March§ did not make it quite clear that draft treaty provides for possibility of termination five years after treaty comes into force and not after six years as stated in your telegram.—AMERY.

MY LORD,

EN réponse à la note que vous avez bien voulu m'adresser le 23 avril dernier, j'ai l'honneur de vous informer que le Gouvernement Royal accordera aux sujets, sociétés et navires britanniques au Greenland oriental le traitement de la nation la plus favorisée sous tous les rapports et particulièrement, en ce qui concerne l'accès à la côte et à la mer territoriale y appartenante, l'exercice de la chasse et de la pêche, le droit d'occuper des terrains à titre d'usage, d'établir des stations météorologiques, télégraphiques ou téléphoniques et d'y faire des installations dans ces buts scientifiques et humanitaires.

Considérant les relations union-elles existant entre le Danemark et l'Islande il est cependant entendu que ce traitement ne comprendra pas les avantages spéciaux que le Danemark a accordés ou pourrait à l'avenir accorder à l'Islande.

Le présent arrangement entrera en vigueur immédiatement et ne pourra être dénoncé qu'après un avis préalable de douze mois.

Veuillez agréer, etc.,

2. After Sir C. Hurst's Memorandum had been examined by the Committee of Imperial Defence in December last it was agreed that a draft denunciation of Hague Convention VI of 1907 should be prepared and communicated to the Dominion Governments for their consideration; it was considered, however, that the draft should contain no reference to an international conference (as suggested at the end of the Memorandum). A copy of the draft denunciation which has now been drawn up is enclosed.

3. In view of the issues of policy involved, His Majesty's Government would be glad to learn whether your Ministers have any observations to offer on the proposal to denounce the Convention, or on the wording of the draft denunciation.

Enclosure 1 in No. 31.

NOTE BY SIR C. HURST ON THE DENUNCIATION OF HAGUE CONVENTION VI OF 1907 (DAYS OF GRACE).

THE work of the sub-committee of the Imperial Defence Committee over which Mr. Wellesley presides has reached a stage when various draft documents have to be prepared embodying the policy which would be followed by His Majesty's Government in the event of war in the matter of granting "days of grace" to enemy merchant ships at the outbreak of hostilities.

The grant of such "days of grace" is regulated by one of the Conventions concluded at the Second Peace Conference at The Hague in 1907. This particular Convention, No. VI, is so unsatisfactory in its terms and has been applied so differently by the Powers in the late War that the question ought to be considered whether the Convention should not be denounced.

Up till 1907 merchant vessels in the ports of the opponent or caught by him at sea at the outbreak of war were liable to capture, though sometimes they were treated with leniency (as at the outbreak of the Crimean War) and allowed to depart. The shipowners in this country for many years before the War fostered the idea that the British mercantile marine was so large and at any given moment so scattered over the face of the globe that the British Empire stood to gain by the adoption of an international convention giving "days of grace" to enemy merchant ships at the outbreak of war. The Admiralty were doubtful in 1907, and other nations half-hearted or antagonistic, and the result was a compromise convention which, as regarded enemy merchant ships in port at the outbreak of war, said it was desirable that days of grace should be given, and, as regards such vessels found at sea unaware of the outbreak of war, subjected them on capture to detention only and not to condemnation.

It was commonly supposed that where "days of grace" were not granted, the convention left the old right of capture untouched. The Privy Council have now held (The Blonde, 1922) that this interpretation is not correct and that vessels are only subject to detention and not to condemnation if not allowed to depart under "days of grace."

It may be well to explain that in 1914 Great Britain gave effect to the recommendation in favour of the grant of "days of grace" by issuing an Order in Council giving such days of grace to German ships in British ports if Germany did the same to British ships in her ports, but owing to difficulties of communication, etc., no sufficient information was forthcoming within the time specified as to Germany's treatment of British ships, and the offer, therefore, lapsed.

The interpretation now placed upon the Convention by the Privy Council is only binding upon His Majesty's Government, but it is binding on them and, therefore, restricts British liberty of action.

The whole purpose of regulating a matter by international agreement is to secure uniformity of action, but Convention VI has wholly failed to achieve this result.

In 1907 the United States of America refused to sign the Convention because their Prize Courts had laid down the rule that days of grace were obligatory under international law, and they were not, therefore, content with a convention which only rendered the grant of days of grace "desirable." In 1917 when the United States of America came into the War, there being at the moment many valuable German liners lying in their ports, they avoided the inconvenience of the American Prize Court decisions by confiscating all the German vessels en bloc by administrative order without subjecting them to Prize Court proceedings at all.

I annex a most useful memorandum* by Mr. Ritchie showing the course of action adopted by each Power as regards the treatment of enemy vessels in port at the outbreak of war. The remarkable fact is that in general foreign powers never even brought seizures of such vessels before their prize courts.

The net result is that every Power except Great Britain has found means of condemning such enemy vessels, whereas His Majesty's Government are now in virtue of the Privy Council decision quoted above bound to abstain from condemnation, even if days of grace are not conferred.

If Convention VI is regarded by itself alone, the case for denunciation seems so strong that I submit it should at least be considered by the Committee of Imperial Defence.

Denunciation of one of the Conventions signed at The Hague may be thought undesirable as a matter of policy, but denunciation of Convention VI might well be coupled with an intimation that His Majesty's Government would welcome international re-examination of the subject matter of this Convention with a view to arriving at some satisfactory instrument to replace it.

2. It will be observed that reference is made in the document to various proposals put forward by the Economic Committee of the League of Nations. These proposals, which are contained in League of Nations' paper [Not to Newfoundland: C. 453 dated the 5th September, 1924,] [To Newfoundland only: A. 52 dated the 5th September, 1924, a copy of which was enclosed in my Predecessor's despatch No. 168 of the 5th November,‡] are concurred in by His Majesty's Government, who hope that they will meet with general approval.

UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 14th April, 1925.)

(No. 110.)

SIR, Governor-General's Office, Cape Town, 26th March, 1925.
I HAVE the honour to transmit to you herewith, with reference to your despatch Dominions No. 14 of the 10th January, 1925,† and in confirmation of my telegram of the 25th March, 1925,‡ copy of Minute from Ministers regarding proposals for the amendment of the Industrial Property Convention of 1911.

The Minute of the 4th March referred to was a formal reminder sent from my Office.

I have, &c.,

ATHLONE,

Governor-General.

Enclosure in No. 335.

Prime Minister's Office, 21st March, 1925.

MINUTE No. 252.

MINISTERS have the honour to acknowledge His Excellency's Minutes No. 75/151 of the 4th February, 1925, and 4th March, 1925. With the earlier minute were transmitted a despatch (No. 14 Dominions of 10th January, 1925) from the Secretary of State and a printed document received by His Majesty's Government from the International Bureau of the Industrial Property Union at Berne and containing proposals for the amendment of the Industrial Property Convention of 1911.

* No. 328. † No. 325. ‡ No. 332.

2. Notwithstanding that reference is made in that document to various proposals put forward by the Economic Committee of the League of Nations and contained in League of Nations paper of 5th September, 1924 (which has been before Ministers owing to the fact that the Union of South Africa is a member of the League), Ministers do not feel that they are in a position to offer any observations on the proposals for amendment of the Convention of 1911, inasmuch as the Union of South Africa is not a party to the Convention.

3. Ministers desire, however, to express their appreciation of His Majesty's Government's invitation to them to offer observations on those proposals.

CIRCULAIRE DU CONSEIL FÉDÉRAL SUISSE AUX ÉTATS DE L'UNION PRÉCISANT LA SITUATION DU CANADA À L'ÉGARD DE L'UNION INTERNATIONALE POUR LA PROTECTION DE LA PROPRIÉTÉ INDUSTRIELLE.

PAR note du 21 août, 1923, la Légation de Sa Majesté britannique a notifié au Conseil fédéral suisse l'adhésion, à partir du 1er septembre, 1923, du Gouvernement du Dominion du Canada à la Convention de Paris du 20 mars, 1883, révisée à Bruxelles le 14 décembre, 1900, et à Washington le 2 juin, 1911, pour la protection de la propriété industrielle. Cette adhésion a été portée à la connaissance des gouvernements des pays de l'Union par note-circulaire du 1er septembre, 1923.*

En complément de cette notification, la Légation de Sa Majesté britannique a fait savoir au Conseil fédéral suisse, par note du 22 avril dernier, que le Canada doit être considéré, au point de vue de son adhésion, comme Partie contractante, en vertu de l'article 16 de la Convention de Paris, et que, conformément à l'article 13 de celle-ci, il doit être rangé en seconde classe pour la contribution aux frais du Bureau international.

Nous avons l'honneur de prier Votre Excellence de vouloir bien prendre note de l'information qui précède, et nous saisissons cette occasion. . . .

(Département Politique Fédéral.)

(Division des Affaires étrangères.)

EN se référant à sa note du 15 mai dernier, concernant l'adhésion du Canada, comme Etat indépendant, à la Convention d'Union internationale pour la Protection de la Propriété industrielle, le Département Politique Fédéral a l'honneur de faire connaître à la Légation de Sa Majesté Britannique que le Gouvernement Autrichien en accusant réception à la Légation de Suisse à Vienne de la circulaire du Conseil Fédéral, du 12 mai, 1925, a ajouté la phrase suivante:—

"Tout en accusant réception de cette communication, je me permets de porter à la connaissance de Votre Excellence qu'à l'avis du Gouvernement Fédéral cette communication ne saurait influencer l'effet juridique de l'adhésion notifiée par la Légation Britannique par sa note du 21 août, 1923."

Comme, en présence du texte très clair de la circulaire précitée, la portée véritable de cette phrase échappe au Département, il croit devoir la signaler à la Légation, à toutes fins utiles.

YOUR telegram 4th December.* Industrial Property Convention. Article 16 bis makes special provision for accession by contracting countries on behalf of their Colonies, Possessions, etc., and has in past been considered as providing also for case of mandated territories. Moreover, corresponding Article in Convention as recently revised at Hague provides specifically for accession in respect of such territories. As Commonwealth acceded to Convention as Contracting Country under Article 16, separate declaration under Article 16 bis on behalf of Papua and New Guinea would appear to be most suitable course and would, moreover, permit of separate denunciation in respect of these territories under last paragraph of Article should occasion arise. GEORGE, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas, King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India, etc., etc., etc. To all and singular to whom these Presents shall come, Greeting!

Whereas for the better treating of and arranging certain matters which are now in discussion, or which may come into discussion between Us and the Powers and States in connexion with the forthcoming Peace Congress,

We have judged it expedient to invest fit person with full Power, to conduct the said discussion on Our Part in respect of Our Dominion of Canada; Know ye, therefore, that We, reposing especial Trust and Confidence in the Wisdom, Loyalty, Diligence, and Circumspection, of our Right Trusty and Well-beloved Councillor Sir Robert Laird Borden, Knight Grand Cross of our Most Distinguished Order of St. Michael and St. George, one of our Counsel learned in the law, etc., etc., Member of the Parliament of Canada, Prime Minister of the Dominion of Canada, have named, made, constituted and appointed, as We do by these Presents name, make, constitute and appoint him, Our undoubted Commissioner, Procurator, and Plenipotentiary, in respect of Our Dominion of Canada; Giving to him all manner of Power and Authority to treat, adjust and conclude with such Ministers, Commissioners, or Plenipotentiaries, as may be vested with similar Power and Authority on the part of any Powers or States as aforesaid, any Treaties, Conventions, or Agreements that may tend to the attainment of the above-mentioned end, and to sign for Us and in Our Name in respect of Our Dominion of Canada everything so agreed upon and concluded, and to do and transact all such other matters as may appertain thereto, in as ample manner and form, and with equal force and efficacy as We Ourselves could do, if personally present.

* 41057/25: not printed; it dealt with the arrangements for the Conference. † No. 430 in Dominions No. 93. ‡ No. 628 (in Part II).

Engaging and Promising, upon Our Royal Word, that whatever things shall be so transacted and concluded by Our said Commissioner, Procurator and Plenipotentiary in respect of our Dominion of Canada, shall, subject if necessary to Our Approval and Ratification, be agreed to, acknowledged and accepted by Us in the fullest manner, and that We will never suffer either in the whole or in part any person whatsoever to infringe the same, or act contrary thereto, as far as it lies in Our Power.

In witness whereof We have caused the Great Seal of Our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland to be affixed to these Presents, which We have signed with Our Royal Hand.

Given at Our Court of St. James, the first day of January, in the Year of Our Lord One Thousand Nine Hundred and Nineteen and in the Ninth Year of Our Reign.

SIR,

Vice Regal Lodge, Dublin, 17th October, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to refer to your despatch No. 382 of the 2nd October,† regarding the issue of Full Powers to the Delegates of the Irish Free State to the Conference of the International Union for the Protection of Industrial Property.

2. In view of the fact that the Irish Free State is not yet a member of the International Union for the Protection of Industrial Property, my Ministers do not consider it necessary to have Full Powers issued at the moment. It is presumed that any revision of the International Convention will be embodied in a Protocol which will be open for signature until a fixed date.

* No. 355. † No. 356.

3. My Ministers may after consideration of the revised Convention nominate someone to sign the Protocol on behalf of the Irish Free State, in which case Full Powers will be requested for whoever is nominated to sign.

As any new convention agreed upon at Conference will presumably be, as is existing Convention, in the name of His Britannic Majesty as one of the High Contracting Parties, it is thought that, in order to sign such convention on behalf of Commonwealth, representative of Commonwealth should hold Full Powers from His Majesty in the form employed at Paris and Washington (see Part I (2) (c) of Resolution of Imperial Conference 1923 on Negotiation, etc., of Treaties). Steps are accordingly being taken for issue of Full Powers to Colonel Watson.—AMERY.

SIR,

Downing Street, 28th October, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Your Excellency's despatch No. 298 of the 17th of October,† relative to the Conference of the International Union for the Protection of Industrial Property, and to transmit to you, to be laid before your Ministers, the accompanying copy of a despatch to His Majesty's representative at Berne requesting him to notify the Swiss Government of the desire of the Free State Government to accede to the International Convention of 1883 for the Protection of Industrial Property, as revised in 1900 and 1911.

2. It will be observed that in accordance with the provisions of Article 16 of the Convention of 1911, the accession of the Irish Free State as a separate member of the Union will take effect one month after the despatch of the notification by the Swiss Government to the other countries of the Union.

3. It is noted that Ministers do not at present wish Full Powers to be prepared for the representative of the Irish Free State at The Hague Conference. In view of the procedure at the Conference at Washington in 1911, it is doubtful whether it may be assumed that a protocol of signature in respect of any Convention which may be settled at the present Conference at The Hague will be left open for subsequent signature; but, in any case, no difficulty should arise since presumably any such Convention would contain a clause corresponding to Article 16 of the Convention of 1911 under which it would be possible for the Irish Free State to accede.

I have, &c.,

INDUSTRIAL PROPERTY CONVENTION, 1925.

Supplementary Report of Official Delegates.

WITH reference to the General Report of the British Delegation at the recent Conference of the Industrial Property Union at The Hague, the two official Delegates think it desirable to make a supplementary report on certain points specially affecting inter-Imperial relations and the position of self-governing Dominions and Mandated Territories in relation to the revised Industrial Property Convention.

These matters are dealt with in the supplementary instructions dated 12th October which were furnished to us during the course of the proceedings at The Hague (see Annex A). As will be seen, these supplementary instructions deal with three points:—

- (1) The right of the self-governing Dominions to separate representation and vote;
- (2) the position of Mandated Territories;
- (3) the relation of the Convention to the regulation of the relations inter se of different parts of the Empire.

(1) No opposition was offered by any Delegation to the separate representation of self-governing Dominions as contracting countries, and it was therefore unnecessary for us to raise this question. Canada and Australia were so represented at The Hague Conference, and before its close the accession of the Irish Free State (which was represented by two observers) was notified and accepted, though as this accession could not take actual effect until after the close of the Conference the representatives of the Irish Free State took no active part in the proceedings and neither voted nor signed the Convention. The High Commissioner for South Africa (which is not a party to the Convention) attended the opening meetings of the Conference as an observer.

(2) As regards Mandated Territories we proposed and carried without opposition an amendment to Article 16 bis in the terms set out in our supplementary instructions. The effect is to bring British Mandated Territories (other than Iraq) within the scope of that Article. As instructed we raised no opposition to the French claim for the separate representation of Syria, nor was any difficulty raised by any other delegation.

(3) As regards the regulation of inter-Imperial relations, we followed the line indicated in the memorandum of the Dominions Office,* viz., to make no proposal for the insertion of any provision in the Convention as to its non-applicability as between different parts of the Empire, but to rely, if the subject should be raised by any other delegation, on the Statement in the General Report of the Arms Traffic Convention, copy of which is set out in the Dominions Office Memorandum. In point of fact, no Delegation alluded to the subject.

We may add that as the British proposal for the reference of disputes to the Permanent Court of International Justice was not adopted, and as in all other matters the basis of the Convention is "national" rather than "most-favoured-nation" treatment, the practical importance of the question of reserving inter-Imperial relations is, apart from the question of principle, so slight as to be negligible.

The only points so far as we could judge on which the special position of the Dominions could conceivably arise were: (1) the use of the term "sujets ou citoyens" as defining the persons entitled to the benefit of the Convention;

* Attached to Annexure A to No. 361.

(2) the use in Article 6 of the word "nationalité."

As regards (1) we obtained without difficulty the substitution of the word "ressortissants" throughout the Convention, as being at once somewhat more comprehensive and as not raising in quite so direct a way the question of nationality.

As regards (2) we satisfied ourselves that the context is such that no practical difficulty is to be anticipated from the retention of the word "nationalité." We therefore refrained from calling attention to the point, especially as it would have been very difficult to suggest an appropriate alternative.

When the proceedings of the Conference were drawing towards a close a representative of the Netherlands Government inquired if we had any views as to the order in which the British contracting countries should appear, (a) in the Preamble, (b) in the list of signatures. The point is not one that was dealt with in our instructions, but after looking through some of the most recent international Conventions we replied that the usual practice seemed to be that the names of the British contracting countries should be placed together in the following order: (1) Great Britain and Northern Ireland, (2) Canada, (3) Australia, both in the preamble and in the list of signatures. We added that we had no authority to express the views of the Dominion Delegates whom it would be well to consult.

The Canadian and Australian delegates on being consulted agreed that the three British countries ought to appear together in the above order in the preamble, but they claimed that in the list of signatures each country should appear in its proper alphabetical order. It did not appear to us that we had any authority to overrule this claim.

Subsequently we received on 3rd November the letter (marked B) from Mr. Villiers conveying (inter alia) the view of the Foreign Office and Dominions Office that the signatures of the British contracting countries should appear together and in the same order as in the preamble and not separately in alphabetical order. We thought it necessary, in view of Mr. Villiers' letter, to re-open the question, and we therefore conferred with the Canadian and Australian delegates, basing our arguments on the prevailing procedure in recent League of Nations Conventions. We found it, however, impossible to move the Canadian and Australian delegates from their position. They took the view that the Industrial Property Convention stands on a different footing from League of Nations Conventions in which the "British Empire" figures as a unit, that a nearer analogy to a purely trade arrangement of the present kind was the Stockholm Postal Convention where signatures were in alphabetical order, and that in any case their instructions required them to sign in the same way as other contracting countries. We therefore sent the attached reply to Mr. Villiers' letter (marked C). We take this opportunity of calling attention to the facts set out in that reply as to the cordial and intimate relations which prevailed throughout the Conference among the British Empire delegates.

The signing of the Convention was fixed for 3.15 p.m. on Friday, 6th November. On the morning of that day we received an intimation from the British Legation that a cipher telegram from the Foreign Office had been received, and at 12.15 we received a copy of the decoded telegram (see D). In the very short interval before the hour for signature we were fortunate enough to be able to arrange an interview with the Canadian and Australian delegates, when we put before them the new point raised for the first time in the telegram, viz., that the order of signature might conceivably be held to have a bearing on the position of inter-Imperial relations. We regret to say, however, that this argument made little impression on them. Rightly or wrongly they believed that provided the names of the British countries appeared together in the preamble the mere order of the signatures could have no appreciable effect of the kind suggested. Unfortunately, in combatting this contention we derived no assistance from the Dominions Office Memorandum on the bearing of the Convention on inter-Imperial relations, as that Memorandum was silent on the point. But what apparently weighed more with the Dominion delegates than any purely constitutional considerations was the practical objection that if by varying the order of signature they gave any colour to the idea that their position was different from that of other contracting countries the latter would be less likely to deal with them direct on technical questions affecting their interests arising out of the Convention. The Australian delegate seemed to be smarting under a sense of grievance arising from some case in which he alleged that serious delay and prejudice to Australian interests had arisen from correspondence having passed through this country. Without going into the merits of that case we merely report the fact as suggesting what was probably one of the reasons for the stiff attitude of the Australian Government. Obviously there was not time for the Dominion delegates to communicate with their Governments and receive replies, and in any case they held out no hope that the result would be a modification of their instructions.

In the circumstances there was nothing more to be done, and we therefore replied to Sir William Tyrrell's telegram in terms shown in (E). We trust that His Majesty's Government will consider that in the difficult circumstances in which we were placed we did all that was possible to give effect to their wishes.

Board of Trade, Great George Street, London, S.W.1., 12th October, 1925.

SIR,

Industrial Property Convention, 1925.

IN continuance of the Instructions addressed to you on the 30th ultimo, I have now to give you the following supplementary directions for your guidance in dealing with any question which may arise in regard to the position of self-governing Dominions and of Mandated Territories:—

(1) The right of the self-governing Dominions to be separately represented at Conferences of the International Union for the Protection of Industrial Property and to have a separate vote in the discussions at such Conferences would appear to have been clearly established by the acceptance of Canada and the Commonwealth of Australia as separate contracting states. It would not, therefore, appear to be necessary for you to propose any amendment of the Convention in this respect.

(2) As regards any question which may arise as to whether the Convention applies between the British parties to the Convention, a memorandum prepared by the Dominions Office is attached for your use.

(3) Mandated Territories (other than Iraq) should, if possible be treated as coming within Article 16 bis of the Convention, and you should propose the addition of some such words as "Territories administered under a mandate of the League of Nations" in Article 16 bis to make this clear.

(4) The distinction between Iraq and the other Mandated Territories is that the other Mandated Territories are directly administered by the Mandatory by virtue of the respective Mandates from the League of Nations, while Iraq on the other hand is not so directly administered, but the relations between Great Britain and Iraq are governed by the Anglo-Iraq Treaty and the instruments subsidiary thereto. The provisions of this Treaty have been approved by the League as giving effect to Article 22 of the Covenant. Iraq is regarded as an independent State, and should be treated as a separate contracting party.

(5) If any difficulty arises in regard to the position of Iraq, or of the other Mandated Territories, it would be desirable that you should refer back by telegraph for further instructions.

(6) You should not, however, raise any objection to any claim for separate representation for any Mandated Territory which pays a contribution to the expenses of the International Bureau.

I have, &c.,

P. CUNLIFFE-LISTER.

Sir H. Llewellyn Smith, G.C.B.

MEMORANDUM PREPARED BY THE DOMINIONS OFFICE.

WHEN the draft Conventions on Freedom of Transit, to be considered at the Barcelona Conference, were under discussion early in 1921, the question was raised whether, in view of the fact that the Conventions would be agreements between the members of the League of Nations, their provisions could be regarded as applying as between the various parts of the Empire inter se. The view was then expressed on behalf of the Colonial Office that it was vital in the interests of Imperial unity that international instruments defining the relations of the members of the League inter se should not be regarded as applying between the British members of the League, but that the ordinary and established rule that all arrangements between one part of the Empire and another are matters of domestic interest should be maintained. The two particular dangers which it was desired to guard against were:—

(1) The possibility of a claim by a foreign state which was a party to the Conventions, that provisions in the Conventions as to equality of treatment for all parties to the Conventions should be interpreted as meaning that any preferential treatment granted by one part of the Empire to another (e.g., special railway rates) must be extended to the foreign state in question.

(2) The possibility of its being held that any disputes between two parts of the Empire on the subject matter of the Convention would have to be referred to the Permanent Court of International Justice.

In the Transit Conventions as finally signed, effect was given to the Colonial Office view referred to above in two ways:—

(1) By dividing each of the draft Conventions into two parts:—

(a) A covering Convention of the ordinary type between "high contracting parties," containing the usual statements as to ratification, etc., and

(b) A statute annexed thereto containing the whole of the operative provisions with regard to the special subject matter, expressed as an agreement between "contracting states," i.e., between the various members of the League.

(2) By the insertion in the statutes of the following provision—"It is understood that this statute must not be interpreted as regulating in any way the rights and obligations inter se of territories forming part, or placed under the protection, of the same sovereign state whether or not these territories are individually members of the League of Nations."

The Barcelona Conference was the first occasion on which the question of inter-Imperial applicability of Conventions negotiated under the auspices of the League had arisen and, while the Conference was willing to accept the solution described above, the Chief British Delegate stated in his report to His Majesty's Government on the Conference that the difficulties rising out of the peculiar constitution of the British Empire aroused a good deal of curiosity on the part of foreign delegates. At subsequent International Conferences there has been an increasing tendency on the part of representatives of foreign countries to raise difficulties in connexion with the position of the British Empire and its component parts in relation to the Conventions negotiated at the Conference, and in cases where it is the intention not to differentiate in the application of the actual provisions of a Convention, between the various parts of the British Empire and foreign countries, it has been found desirable not to press for the insertion of any clause similar to that in the Barcelona Conventions. A recent case was that of the Dangerous Drugs Convention.

When the draft Arms Traffic Convention was under discussion here in the early part of 1925, it was at first thought unnecessary to raise the question of inter-Imperial trade except by proposing the insertion of a clause designed to exclude from the provisions of the Convention shipments for the armed forces of the High Contracting Parties wherever situate. The question of inter-Imperial trade was, however, directly raised at the Arms Traffic Conference by an amendment proposed by the Netherlands delegate to the effect that the provisions of the Convention should not apply to the despatch of arms from and to territories forming part of or placed under the protection of one and the same sovereign State. After considerable discussion at the Legal Committee of the Conference, it was decided not to incorporate this amendment in the text of the Convention, but to record in the proceedings of the Conference a definite statement that the general principle underlying it "forms the basis of all international Conventions." Various alterations were also made in the text of the Convention with a view to differentiating inter-Empire trade from trade between foreign countries, e.g., the use of the expression "consignments" rather than "exports" to describe shipments from one part of the Empire to another. From this point of view the Convention marks a distinct advance and leaves the main question in a most satisfactory position. Nothing in fact could have been more welcome than to have the principle for which His Majesty's Government have contended asserted in this fashion in the proceedings of an International Conference. The principle is now laid down in terms which should supply a decisive answer to all doubts that may be raised in the future, including the argument that the insertion of the "Barcelona" clause in certain League Conventions was evidence that, in its absence, international Conventions would apply between the various British Members of the League inter se.

As indicated above, the general principle that International Conventions do not apply as between the different parts of the Empire does not, of course, preclude His Majesty's Government from putting into force, as a matter of practice, the regime of any particular Convention in the case of transactions with other parts of the Empire in the same way as in the case of foreign States. Nor is there any objection, if the question is raised, and it is the intention so to apply a Convention, to making that intention clear either by statement or, if necessary, in the Convention itself.

So far as concerned the Industrial Property Convention of 1911, it appears (i) that under Section 91 of the Patents and Designs Act of 1907, the treatment given to other parts of the Empire which are dealt with under that section is in practice similar to that given under the Convention to foreign countries; (ii) that it is probable that any modifications of the system laid down in the 1911 Convention, which might be adopted as a result of the present revision of the Convention would equally be applied in practice, on a basis of reciprocity to other parts of the Empire as well as under the Convention, to the foreign countries which are parties to it.

In the circumstances the position seems to be that, at the forthcoming Conference, no proposal should be made by the delegates of His Majesty's Government for the insertion of any provision in the Convention as to its non-applicability as between different parts of the Empire, and that no allusion to this point should be made unless it is raised by foreign delegates. If the question is raised by foreign delegates, the British delegates should refer to the Statement in the General Report of the Arms Traffic Conference, of which a copy is attached as Appendix I,* but explain that Section 91 of the Patents and Designs Act, 1907, is based on reciprocity, and that there is no difference in fact between the treatment accorded to a Dominion in respect of which an Order in Council has been issued under sub-section (5) of Section 91 of the Act, and the treatment given to a foreign State in respect of which an Order has been made under sub-sections (1) and (4) of that Section. They should further explain that there is no present intention of departing from that arrangement. Should the question be pressed, the British delegates should refer to His Majesty's Government for instructions.

If it were found necessary to define, either by a statement to the Conference or by provisions in the Convention, those stipulations of the Convention which in the view of His Majesty's Government could be applied in respect of other parts of the Empire as well as in respect of foreign countries, it would be essential to make it clear that provisions as to the reference of disputes to the Permanent Court of International Justice (if such provisions are inserted in the Convention) are not among those which are considered so applicable.

Annexure B.

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 2nd November, 1925.

DEAR SIR HUBERT LLEWELLYN SMITH,

WE have been considering the forms to be followed in the preamble, etc., of the Industrial Property Convention which you are negotiating at The Hague, with special regard to the recitation of the British Empire plenipotentiaries at the beginning and the signatures at the end.

The Netherlands Government will no doubt follow the precedent of the International Convention signed at Washington on 2nd June, 1911, the relevant portions of which are as follows:—

(1) "His Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas, Emperor of India;

Mr. Alfred Mitchell Innes, Councillor of the Embassy of His Britannic Majesty at Washington;

Sir Alfred Bateman, K.C.M.G., formerly Comptroller-General of Commerce, Labour and Statistics;

Mr. H. W. Temple Franks, Comptroller-General of Patents, Designs and Trade-marks;"

and (2) "For Great Britain:—

A. Mitchell Innes.

A. E. Bateman.

W. Temple Franks."

* See No. 118.

If the Netherlands Government consult you as to the form of the new Convention we think the following text would meet the present circumstances; and the Foreign Office, after consulting the Dominions Office and the Board of Trade, are particularly anxious that this form should be adopted:—

(1) "His Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas, Emperor of India;

For Great Britain and Northern Ireland:

Sir Hubert Llewellyn Smith, G.C.B., Chief Economic Adviser to His Britannic Majesty's Government;

Mr. Alfred James Martin, O.B.E., Assistant Comptroller-General of the Industrial Property Department of the Board of Trade;

Sir Arthur Balfour, K.B.E., one of His Majesty's Justices of the Peace;

For Canada:

Mr. Frederick Herbert Palmer, Trade Commissioner of the Dominion of Canada at Rotterdam.

For the Commonwealth of Australia:

Charles Vincent Watson, D.S.O., a Lieutenant-Colonel in His Majesty's Australian Military Forces, Commissioner of Patents to the Government of the Commonwealth of Australia;"

and (2)

"For Great Britain and Northern Ireland:

H. Llewellyn Smith.

A. J. Martin.

A. Balfour.

For Canada:

F. H. Palmer.

For the Commonwealth of Australia:

C. V. Watson."

If any signature takes place on behalf of the Irish Free State, the name of the plenipotentiary of the Irish Free State should be inserted in both places after that of the Australian plenipotentiary in the same form.

This procedure of course differs from that adopted in the case of the conventions negotiated at the Barcelona Conference and at other conferences held under the auspices of the League of Nations, where the practice has been to include signatures for the British Empire and separate signatures for the Dominions participating in the convention (the latter being slightly indented). The convention now under discussion will not be one between the members of the League, but a revision of the 1911 convention which, as stated above, was signed for Great Britain, and the procedure therefore adopted in the case of League conventions would not be appropriate.

Yours sincerely,

G. H. VILLIERS.

Sir Hubert Llewellyn Smith, G.C.B.

Annexure C.

British Delegation, Hotel Wittebrug, The Hague,

3rd November, 1925.

DEAR VILLIERS,

THANKS for your letter of the 2nd November. Before its arrival it had become necessary to fix provisionally the form of the preamble and signatures of the revised Industrial Property Convention, but in all respects except one this will follow the lines now suggested by your letter. The exception is the order of signatures. On this point the Australian delegate has express instructions and the Canadian delegate takes the same view, viz., that while the Dominions should be named immediately after Great Britain and Northern Ireland in the preamble, the signatures should be in alphabetical order. These are the only two Dominions entitled to sign, as the Irish Free State has not yet qualified, and the Union of South Africa is not a member of the Union. Canada and Australia point out that the situation is not the same as in a League of Nations Convention in which the unit is the British Empire, and they lay stress on the fact that this is a purely industrial convention with no political character.

I may say that the Canadian, Australian and Free State delegates have co-operated very closely and in the most friendly way with the British Delegation, and have attended its meetings. A very striking mark of the friendly spirit was shown on the first day of the Conference when the Canadian, Australian and Free State delegates insisted on sitting close to us and not in the alphabetical order in which they had been placed. This collaboration has been maintained throughout the Conference. When therefore they say that they must sign in alphabetical order I am quite sure that it is solely in consequence of their instructions, and I have taken the line that while we should have preferred to follow the League of Nations' practice it is a matter primarily for them to settle. I am sure that in the circumstances this is right, and I hope that you and the Dominions Office will agree.

I am, &c.,
H. LLEWELLYN SMITH.

TELEGRAM FROM MR. AUSTEN CHAMBERLAIN TO SIR CHARLES MARLING.

(Despatched 11.35 p.m., 5th November, 1925.)

(Received 10 a.m., 6th November, 1925.)

THE following for Sir H. Llewellyn-Smith from Sir William Tyrrell. Your letter to Mr. Villiers. Practice as regards signatures in cases where Dominions are separately represented at International conferences of this kind follows that shown in Mr. Villiers' letter of 2nd November and neither we or Dominions Office feel certain that when Australian instructions were issued possibility of political implications of change were appreciated, viz., that separate signatures may suggest that Convention governed relations between parts of Empire concerned.

It is true that in Stockholm Postal Convention alphabetical order was followed as regards Dominions and Great Britain both in preamble and list of signatories, but this was not an agreement between Heads of States. We should greatly prefer, if it were found possible, to adopt usual practice as set out in Mr. Villiers' letter, which does not affect position of three countries as contracting separately but avoids any appearance of their contracting inter se. Please do your utmost to obtain observance of usual practice.

Annexure E.

FOLLOWING from Llewellyn-Smith for Tyrrell:—

On receipt of your telegram I had confidential conversation with Canadian and Australian delegates, but regret I was unable to persuade them to depart from their instructions. Neither of them can see how questions of inter-Imperial obligations can really be affected by mere order of signature provided names appear together in preamble. Unfortunately no indication of view of Foreign and Dominion Offices on this point was given us in time to allow Dominions delegates to seek new instructions even if they were willing to do so.

In present circumstances only irritation and misunderstanding would result from pushing matter further.

OFFICE OF THE HIGH COMMISSIONER to DOMINIONS OFFICE.

York House, 15, Regent Street, London, S.W.1.

Sir, 8th December, 1925.

I AM directed by the High Commissioner to refer to despatch No. 298 of 17th October, 1925,* from the Governor-General on the subject of the Industrial Property Convention, and to say that as the Irish Free State is now a member of the International Union for the Protection of Industrial Property (your despatch No. 443 of the 28th November, 1925*) it is the desire of the Executive Council that Full Powers should be issued to Count Gerald O'Kelly, Irish Free State Trade Representative in Belgium. I am to request you to have the Full Powers prepared and sent to Dublin for transmission thence to Count O'Kelly.

I am also to ask you to request the Netherlands Government to have the Convention held open for signature by the Irish Free State representative until such time as Count O'Kelly will be in possession of Full Powers. It will be appreciated that as the accession of the Irish Free State to the International Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property took effect from 4th December, 1925, it was not possible to arrange for the signature of the Irish Free State representative to the Convention on a date prior to the 1st December, 1925.

No. 363.

IRISH FREE STATE.

MR. J. MCNEILL (HIGH COMMISSIONER) to THE EARL OF CLARENDON.

York House, 15, Regent Street, London, S.W.1.

DEAR LORD CLARENDON,

9th December, 1925.

AN official letter was sent yesterday† to the Dominions Office, making two requests, firstly, that the Netherlands Government be asked to hold open for signature the Industrial Property Convention, and secondly, that Full Powers be prepared for transmission to Count O'Kelly.

The letter did not make it clear that the Irish Free State did not become a member of the International Union until 4th December, while the last for signature would ordinarily be 1st December.

It is considered likely that the Netherlands Government would be prepared to hold the Convention open for a few days for the signature of the representative of the Irish Free State if a request to that effect is made at once. My Government would be grateful if His Majesty's Ambassador at The Hague could be instructed by telegram to make the request.

I think you will understand that my Government has been so occupied with grave matters recently that it was unable to give the matter consideration earlier, and that communication by despatch in the usual way would have led to further delay.

If the Netherlands Government is unable to accede to the request, of course Full Powers for Count O'Kelly will not be needed.

I should be much obliged if you would have me informed as soon as possible of the result of the reference to the Government of the Netherlands.

Yours sincerely,
JAMES MCNEILL.

The Right Hon.

The Earl of Clarendon.

(No. 330.)

Sir,

Governor-General's Office, Melbourne, 21st November, 1924.

I HAVE the honour, at the instance of my Prime Minister, to inform you that on 3rd September, 1924, I, with the advice of the Federal Executive Council,

* No. 51904/25: not printed; it dealt with certain points arising out of the accession of the Irish Free State to the Convention. † No. 362.

approved of a request being made to His Majesty the King for the ratification, on behalf of the Commonwealth of Australia, so far as the subject matter is within the legislative competence of the Commonwealth Parliament, of the following draft Conventions which were adopted at the Second Session of the International Labour Conference held at Genoa in June-July, 1920:—

1. Draft Convention fixing the minimum age for admission of children to employment at sea.
2. Draft Convention concerning unemployment indemnity in case of loss or foundering of the ship.
3. Draft Convention for establishing facilities for finding employment for seamen.

I should be glad if you would be so good as to cause the necessary action to be taken to effect such ratification.

My Prime Minister asks that an exception be made at the time of ratification in respect to the Territories of Papua and Norfolk Island, and the Mandated Territories of New Guinea and Nauru, as it is not deemed desirable that the Conventions should be made applicable to these Territories.

I have, &c.,
FORSTER,

(No. 35.)

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 3rd February, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Your Excellency's despatch No. 330 of the 21st November,* regarding the ratification on behalf of the Commonwealth of Australia of certain draft Conventions adopted by the Second Session of the International Labour Conference in 1920.

2. The practice in the case of draft Labour Conventions which are accepted by His Majesty's Government is not to effect ratification by an instrument signed by His Majesty the King, but to signify confirmation and approval by the issue of an Order of the Lords of the Council, the agreements in question being regarded as analogous to those referred to in Part II of the Resolution of the Imperial Conference of 1923 on the subject of the Negotiation, Signature, and Ratification of Treaties. Copies of the Orders approving and confirming in respect of the United Kingdom certain of the draft Conventions adopted by the First and Second Sessions of the International Labour Conference were enclosed in Mr. Churchill's despatch Dominions No. 371 of the 6th September, 1921.† The procedure adopted is somewhat similar to that followed in the case of Conventions negotiated at Congresses of the Universal Postal Union.

3. In the circumstances, your Ministers may think it desirable to adopt a similar procedure and to signify their confirmation and approval of these draft Conventions on behalf of the Commonwealth in the same manner as in the case of the Postal Convention of 1920 (vide your despatch No. 401 of the 1st December, 1921‡).

I have, &c.,

I HAVE the honour to refer to Mr. Thomas's despatch No. 342 of the 4th June last* and to previous correspondence regarding the ratification of the Protocol embodying an Amendment of Article 393 of the Treaty of Versailles and the corresponding Articles of the other Treaties of Peace.

2. My Ministers note that it is admitted that the Irish Free State cannot be bound by an agreement except with the expressed sanction of the Irish Free State Government. They regret that in the present instance the ratification was deposited without their knowledge and advice, but in the special circumstances and on the understanding that their prior sanction will be sought in all such matters henceforth, they agree to notify the League that the Irish Free State is included in the list of States Members of the International Labour Office which have accepted the Protocol. Steps are being taken to inform the Secretary-General accordingly.

3. In order to avoid any confusion in future, my Ministers consider that every instrument of ratification purporting to include more than one member of the Commonwealth should set out nominatim the members on whose behalf the ratification is made.

Downing Street, 16th September, 1925.

WITH reference to previous correspondence on the subject of a proposed International Conference on Radio-telegraphy, I have the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [you,] for the consideration of your Ministers, a copy of a note from the United States Ambassador in London conveying, on behalf of the Government of the United States of America, an invitation to His Majesty's Government and to the Governments of those Dominions, Colonies, Protectorates, etc., which are parties to the International Radio-telegraph Convention, 1912, to participate in an International Radio-telegraph Conference to be held at Washington in the spring of 1926.

2. A copy of a note to the United States Ambassador informing him that His Majesty's Government and the Government of India accept the invitation of the United States Government is also enclosed.

3. It will be observed that the exact date for the holding of the Conference, and a programme for the Conference amplifying the summary contained in the last paragraph of the United States Ambassador's note will be communicated later.

Enclosure 1 in No. 373.

(No. 217.)

Embassy of the United States of America,

SIR,

London, 20th August, 1925.

THE United States Government is making arrangements to hold a Radio-telegraph Conference in Washington, in accordance with a provision made in an Act of Congress approved 4th March, 1925. I am accordingly instructed to extend to His Majesty's Government an invitation, as follows:—

Article 11 of the Convention signed at London on 5th July, 1912, provides that each Conference shall fix the time and place of the next meeting. It will be recalled that at the close of the Radio-telegraph Conference held in London in July, 1912, the delegates that represented the United States invited the Governments to hold the next Radio-telegraph Conference at Washington. The invitation of the United States was accepted, and it was agreed that the next Conference should take place at Washington in 1917. Later, proposals were made with a view to holding a joint Conference of parties to the Telegraph Convention and parties to the Radio-telegraph Convention, and a draft for a Universal Communications Union was prepared and circulated. As unanimity could not be obtained for these proposals, the French Government has proceeded with arrangements to hold the Telegraph Conference at Paris, beginning 1st September, 1925.

Accordingly, the United States Government has taken the necessary steps for holding the Radio-telegraph Conference, and I hereby, pursuant to instructions of my Government, have the honour to extend to you, as one of the parties to the Radio-telegraph Convention, a courteous invitation to participate in a Radio-telegraph Conference to be held in the spring of 1926 at Washington, the exact date for the holding of the Conference to be communicated to you later. This invitation is also extended on the part of my Government to the Governments of Canada, Australia, New Zealand, The Union of South Africa, India, and the various British Colonies and Protectorates on whose behalf ratification of the International Radio-telegraph Convention was deposited on 2nd June, 1913, by His Majesty's Government; as well as to the following Dominions, Mandates, Colonies, Protectorates and Possessions, which have acceded to the Convention: Newfoundland, Papua, Norfolk Island, Zanzibar, Sarawak, Tonga, New Hebrides, Brunei, Tanganyika Territory, and the Irish Free State.

As regards the subjects to be considered at the Conference at Washington, I am instructed to refer to the fact that the provisions of the Radio-telegraph Convention signed at London deal with communication between ships and shore, and do not cover many uses of radio which have been developed since 1912. Furthermore, many of the provisions of the 1912 Convention with respect to communication between ships and between ship and shore are not in general practice followed to a considerable extent.

In the circumstances, I am instructed to state that the Government of the United States believes that at the forthcoming Conference to be held at Washington the following subjects should be taken up for consideration: (1) Revision of the Convention and regulations signed at London 5th July, 1912; (2) Preparation of new articles and modification of present articles of Convention and regulations, so that they will be applicable to and regulate (a) communication between [by] radio between fixed points, (b) radio-telegraph broadcasting including press messages, (c) radio-telephony including broadcasting, (d) allocation of frequencies to classes of service such as fixed stations, mobile stations, broadcasting stations, etc., (e) elimination of interference as far as practicable, (f) distress messages so as to take cognizance of increased uses and classes of service, (g) radio aids to navigation, (h) all other international uses of radio. A more complementary programme amplifying the statements above made will be forwarded by my Government as soon as possible for your consideration and an expression of your views.

IN your note of the 20th ultimo you were so good as to invite His Majesty's Government and Dominion and Colonial Governments, parties to the International Radio-telegraph Convention, to attend the forthcoming Radio-telegraph Conference in Washington.

2. I have the honour to inform Your Excellency that His Majesty's Government and the Government of India gladly accept the invitation of the United States Government. I shall not fail to inform you in due course of the replies of the Dominion and Colonial Governments concerned.

(Private and Personal.)

DEAR AMERY,

Government House, Pretoria, 11th November, 1925.

I AM sending by this week's mail a despatch (No. 613 dated 9th November†) containing my Government's reply to the United States Government's invitation to the Radio-telegraphic Conference next year. You will notice that Hertzog has written directly to the American Secretary of State at Washington, a copy of his letter being sent for the information of His Majesty's Government. This action is not altogether unexpected for you are aware of the present Government's anxiety to establish their independent status in the eyes of the world and especially of the United States Government, which has shown some reluctance in the past to recognize the Dominions as separate entities. The letter had been despatched some days previously to my receiving Ministers' Minute, and I could not therefore do anything to modify their action even if such a course had been desirable. I discussed the subject with my Prime Minister and he apologised to me for the mistake which, he said, was the fault of his Secretary for having placed the letter before him for his signature. The letter was drafted by the Minister of Posts and Telegraphs (Mr. Boydell), and though he may have had the intention of depriving me of my prerogative I feel certain that Hertzog had no intention of doing so. I purposely did not refer to the medium of communication but merely treated the complaint as a personal one, namely, that as the invitation had been forwarded to me, and I had handed it on to Ministers for their reply, I naturally expected the acknowledgment to go through me.

MINISTERS have the honour to inform His Excellency the Governor-General, with further reference to His Excellency's Minute No. 43/892 of 12th October, 1925, that they have accepted the invitation of the United States Government to the Union of South Africa to participate in a Radio-telegraph Conference to be held at Washington in the spring of 1926.

Ministers enclose herewith a copy of their letter to the American Government which they have the honour to request that His Excellency will be pleased to transmit to London for the information of the Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs together with an expression of their thanks for conveying the invitation.

J. B. M. HERTZOG.

SIR, Pretoria, 3rd November, 1925.
ADVICE has been received from the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs in London of a cordial invitation extended to the Union of South Africa by the United States Government to participate in the Radio-telegraph Conference which it is proposed to hold at Washington during the coming spring.

I have the honour to inform you that the Government of the Union of South Africa gladly accept the invitation and, whilst they have taken cognizance of the subjects which the Government of the United States believe will be considered at the Conference, the receipt of copies of the more complete programme, referred to in the despatch of the United States Ambassador in London, dated 20th August, 1925,† to the British Foreign Office, will be awaited with pleasure.

Downing Street, 6th March, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [you,] for the consideration of your Ministers, the accompanying copy of a Note from the French Ambassador regarding a proposal that an International Sanitary Conference should be held at Paris, beginning on the 26th of October, for the purpose of revising the International Sanitary Convention of the 17th of January, 1912.

Enclosure in No. 380.

Le Gouvernement français, qui avait été saisi, à différentes reprises, de propositions tendant à la revision de la Convention sanitaire internationale du 17 janvier, 1912, n'avait pas pu jusqu'ici, en raison des circonstances, donner satisfaction à ces demandes. Aujourd'hui, il lui paraît possible d'envisager la réunion d'une Conférence qui serait chargée de cette revision.

Le Comité de l'Office International d'Hygiène Publique a procédé, au cours de plusieurs de ses sessions, à l'étude des modifications qu'il serait opportun d'apporter au texte de ladite Convention.

M. Herriot m'a chargé de faire parvenir à Votre Excellence dix exemplaires* des résolutions de ce Comité.

La suggestion a été faite de constituer en conférence le Comité de l'Office International d'Hygiène Publique, dont les membres, munis de pleins pouvoirs, rédigeraient et signeraient la nouvelle convention. Il ne paraît pas possible au Gouvernement français d'entrer dans cette voie parce qu'il y a des pays non adhérents à l'Office et parce que certains Etats voudront adjoindre des conseillers techniques pour le commerce et la navigation à leurs délégués spécialistes en matière d'hygiène. Mais il estime qu'il y aurait avantage à ce que les pays participant à l'Office d'Hygiène comprissent au nombre de leurs délégués leurs représentants à l'Office. Afin d'éviter à ces derniers un double déplacement, le Gouvernement français propose de choisir pour l'ouverture de la Conférence sanitaire une date rapprochée de la fin d'une des sessions du Comité de l'Office.

J'ai en conséquence, été chargé de demander à Votre Excellence si le Gouvernement britannique entend envoyer des délégués munis de pleins pouvoirs à une conférence sanitaire qui se tiendrait à Paris et s'il accepte la date du lundi 26 octobre, 1925, pour la séance d'ouverture de ladite conférence. Le Gouvernement français serait heureux de connaître également l'avis à ce sujet des Dominions et des Colonies de l'Empire britannique.

Il y aurait intérêt à ce que les services d'hygiène de la Grande Bretagne et des pays ci-dessus mentionnés fussent invités à examiner le projet de revision de la Convention sanitaire du 17 janvier, 1912, rédigé par le Comité de l'Office International

[MY LORD.] [SIR,]

Downing Street, 20th May, 1925.

WITH reference to my despatch Dominions No. 96 of the 6th of March* I have the honour to enclose, for the information of [Your Excellency's] [your] Ministers, a copy of a note to the French Ambassador regarding the participation of His Majesty's Government and the Government of India in the Conference which it is proposed to hold at Paris, opening on the 26th of October, to consider the revision of the International Sanitary Convention of 1912.

I have, &c.,
L. S. AMERY.

Enclosure in No. 381.

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 27th March, 1925.

WITH reference to your note of 7th February last, I have the honour to state that His Majesty's Government and the Government of India will be pleased to participate in a Conference to be opened at Paris on 26th October next to consider the revision of the International Sanitary Convention of 1912.

2. When the views of the Governments of the Dominions and Colonies are received, I will communicate them to Your Excellency. In the meantime I shall be glad if you will be so good as to supply me with fifty additional copies of the draft revision of the Convention for the information of the Governments of the Colonies and the Protectorates.

I have, &c.,
(For the Secretary of State),

G. H. VILLIERS.

[MY LORD.] [SIR,]

Downing Street, 29th May, 1925.

WITH reference to my despatch Dominions No. 214 of the 20th of May,* I have the honour to request [Your Excellency] [you] to inform your Ministers that an Inter-Departmental Committee has been appointed to advise on the instructions to be given to delegates from this country to the Conference which it is proposed to hold at Paris for the purpose of revising the International Sanitary Convention of the 17th of January, 1912. The Minister of Health considers that the work of the Committee would be materially assisted if it could be informed of the views of Dominion Governments on the main points of policy involved, since he considers it important that on the main issues the delegates from all parts of the Empire should be as far as possible in accord.

2. I enclose copies of the revised draft† prepared by the Committee of the Office International d'Hygiène Publique which, it is anticipated, will be adopted as the basis of discussion at the Conference, together with two memoranda‡ prepared by Sir George Buchanan, C.B., the British representative on the Committee of the Office International. The first memorandum examines the draft in detail while the shorter summarizes the main points which call for consideration. Copies of the model Bill of Health referred to in Sir G. Buchanan's memorandum will be sent as soon as they are available.

3. The Minister of Health would be obliged if your Ministers would be so good as to communicate their views on the questions at issue as soon as may be convenient to them, and he has suggested that, if any technical expert or other representative of your Government happens to be in England during the summer, he might, perhaps, be willing to afford representatives of the Ministry the opportunity of discussing with him any questions of detail which present special difficulties.

I have, &c.,
L. S. AMERY.

MINUTE 558.

WITH reference to Minute No. 33/1583, dated 23rd June, 1925, from His Excellency the Governor-General, transmitting despatch Dominions No. 229, dated 29th May, 1925, from the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies, with enclosures, regarding the International Sanitary Conference proposed to be held in Paris, also to His Excellency's Minute No. 33/1585 of 24th June, 1925, transmitting telegrams dated 23rd June, 1925, from the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies, intimating that the Conference has been postponed and that the date of opening has been definitely fixed for 10th May, 1926, Ministers have the honour to inform His Excellency that they concur broadly in the views expressed in the Memoranda prepared by Sir George Buchanan, C.B., which accompanied the despatch referred to; there are, however, certain points raised in these Memoranda and in the draft Convention which, in view of the special circumstances of the Union of South Africa, call for further consideration.

Ministers are therefore pleased to note the invitation conveyed in paragraph 3 of the despatch dated 29th May, 1925, and have to state that Dr. J. A. Mitchell, Secretary for Public Health and Chief Health Officer of the Union, is shortly proceeding to Europe on three months' leave, is due to arrive in London about 27th August, 1925, and thereafter will call upon the Honourable the Minister of Health with a view to arranging to discuss the matter with representatives of the Ministry, as suggested. Dr. Mitchell will be authorized to represent, and act on behalf of, this Government in connexion with the matter.

SIR, Vice Regal Lodge, Dublin, 4th November, 1925.

on the 10th May, 1926, for the purpose of revising the International Sanitary Convention of the 17th January, 1912.

2. I am to convey the following observations of my Ministers on the main questions at issue as summarized in the memoranda prepared by Sir George Buchanan, C.B., the British representative on the Committee of the Office Internationale, which accompanied your despatch:—

It does not seem advisable that any other document than that submitted by the Office Internationale should be admitted as the basis of discussion.

The present system of dealing with ships from infected ports consists of prompt inquiries, medical examination on landing and hospital treatment for the sick, whilst healthy passengers are allowed to go about their business, subject to notification to the health authorities of the districts to which they are bound, in order that they may be kept under surveillance. It is suggested that this administrative procedure should be adhered to.

It is considered that the functions hitherto discharged by the Office Internationale should be retained.

A revision of the text of the Convention of 1912 in the sense suggested by the Office Internationale appears to confer sufficient security.

As the present system is unsatisfactory on account of the various forms in use, it would appear necessary that a uniform and comparatively simple Bill of Health be adopted, provided that compensation can be secured to shipping interests by the simplification of the requirements of foreign countries and by the adoption of a reasonable scale of fees for visas and other expenses connected with these documents.

Understand from Postmaster-General that it is usual for acceding State when notifying accession to mention—

(a) In what class it wishes to be placed for purpose of contribution to expenses of International Telegraph Bureau (see Régulation 82 annexed to Convention);

(b) Terminal and transit rates charged on international telegrams;

(c) Equivalent of gold franc in local currency.

Should be glad to receive this information by telegraph. As regards (c) it is presumed that this will be notified as in case of this country and Colonies as 96 pence. 595 The Governor-General Union of South Africa, 91 ... March 13 (Rec. Mar. 30)	Transmits copy of Ministers' Minute suggesting that treaties should clearly indicate that the stipulations thereunder are not applicable to territories held under a "C" mandate, the mandatory whereof would negotiate its own treaty ... 124
596 To the Governor-General Union of South Africa, Telegram ... May 20	Suggests that relevant clause in future commercial treaties should be amended by adoption of same formula as to applicability to mandated territories as that proposed for extradition treaties (see No. 600) ... 125
597 The Governor-General Union of South Africa, Telegram ... June 1 (Rec. June 1)	States that Ministers cannot accede to suggestion that a commercial treaty between His Majesty's Government and a foreign Power should be capable of application to a mandated territory of which the Union holds the mandate, even with the proviso indicated, and they press for insertion of words in any new treaty making it clear that the treaty is not applicable to the Union or South West Africa ... 125
598 To the Governor-General Union of South Africa, Telegram ... November 14	Explains difficulty of inserting in text of commercial treaties provision on lines suggested in No. 597 ... 126
599 To the Governor-General Union of South Africa, Telegram, Private and Personal ... January 15	Prefers to await result of discussion with General Hertzog referred to in No. 577 before replying officially to Governor-General's confidential despatch of 18th December, but since question of extradition may arise outlines reply which it is proposed to make 126
600 To the Governor-General Union of South Africa, Telegram ... February 4	States that it is now proposed to reply to Governor-General's telegram of 18th December on lines indicated ... 127
601 The Governor-General Union of South Africa, Telegram, Confidential February 11 (Rec. Feb. 11)	States that if Ministers can be satisfied that there is no fear of infringement of their rights as mandatory, it is possible they may agree to treaty negotiations as regards South-West Africa being conducted through the Foreign Office ... 127

602 To the Governor-General Union of South Africa, Telegram, Private and Personal ... February 28	States that alteration proposed as regards Article 18 of draft Extradition, United States Treaty would not be acceptable as it would prevent application of that Treaty to New Guinea and Western Samoa, which would presumably be desired by Commonwealth and New Zealand Governments ... 128
603 To the Governor-General Union of South Africa, Telegram, Confidential February 28	Explains points which have arisen in connexion with the procedure contemplated regarding the extension of Extradition Treaties to mandated territories ... 128
604 The Governor-General Union of South Africa, Telegram, Confidential March 17 (Rec. Mar. 17)	States that Ministers do not propose to press further the suggestions made in the last paragraph of their Minute in No. 259. They suggest insertion of formula mentioned or any alternative having the same effect, in Article 18, whether as regards the United States or any other treaty ... 129
605 To the Governor-General Union of South Africa, Telegram, Confidential April 11	Agrees that specific references to territories administered by Dominions under mandates should be inserted in Article 18 of draft Treaty with United States and in any other extradition treaties to be negotiated, and in any formal extensions of existing Treaties and suggests alternative wording of formula ... 129
606 The Governor-General Union of South Africa, Telegram ... April 28 (Rec. Apr. 28)	Concurs in form of words suggested for insertion in Article 18, and in similar Articles in future, and expresses appreciation that the general tenor of Ministers' previous suggestions has been accepted ... 130
607 The Governor-General Commonwealth of Australia, Confidential (2) ... April 1 (Rec. May 4)	States that it does not appear to Ministers to be clear that any application of the new Treaty to New Guinea would be in the same manner as if that Territory were a possession of His Majesty. Suggests an amendment to Article 18 and considers it advisable that the corresponding article in all future Treaties should be similarly expressed ... 130
608 To the Governor-General Commonwealth of Australia, Confidential August 11	Considers that for reason stated it would be preferable not to alter the wording of the second paragraph of Article 18 of draft Treaty as suggested in No. 607, and makes alternative suggestion ... 131

18TH SEPTEMBER. Secret. I took the opportunity recently of making a full statement of present position of 'Iraq frontier dispute to representatives of Dominions now in Geneva and I think that following summary may be of interest.
The frontier between 'Iraq and Turkey was left undefined by the Treaty of Lausanne, Article 3 of which provided that the frontier should be settled by agreement between Great Britain and Turkey: failing such agreement it should be referred to the Council of the League for settlement. Conference held in Constantinople between representatives of Great Britain and Turkey in May, 1924, failed to reach agreement. General grounds which led His Majesty's Government to put forward claim for northern frontier of Mosul Vilayet with certain minor modifications may be summarized as follows:—

* No. 414 in Dominions No. 93.

(1) Inhabitants comprise very small minority of Turks (mainly in southern area); the great majority being Kurds who are not necessarily well disposed towards Turkish rule as witness recent revolt of Kurdish tribes in present Turkish territory, while remainder, e.g., Arabs and Christians, are strongly in favour of Iraq connexion.

(2) On strategical grounds proposed frontier would provide adequate security against not only armed invasion but also periodical raids which could not be secured by any alternative frontier further south.

(3) On economic grounds separation from Iraq of rich agricultural province of Mosul would seriously affect financial stability of Iraq kingdom.

(4) Future welfare of Assyrian Christian population, to whom apart from general importance of protection of Christian minorities His Majesty's Government owe particular debt of gratitude for their conduct during the War, and who are determined not to return under Turkish rule, could be secured by their settlement within proposed frontier.

The Turkish Government, on the other hand, claim that Kurds, of whom a large number are in Turkey, are really in feeling and political association Turks, and feel most strongly that if the large Kurdish population of the Mosul Vilayet were to be removed from Turkish sovereignty remaining Kurds in Turkey would be encouraged to persist in their present attitude of unrest.

Question was brought before Council of League September, 1924. On that occasion, after both parties had formally declared their acceptance in advance of the Council's decision, Council decided to appoint a Commission of three neutral members to make inquiries on the spot and report to Council. Accordingly the Commission visited Iraq, and after some months spent in investigation presented their report to the Council last July. Briefly summarized, recommendations of the Commission were that from the point of view of the interests and wishes of the population concerned the disputed area should not be partitioned but should remain under the effective mandate of the League of Nations for about twenty-five years and that special steps should be taken to secure local autonomy for Kurdish elements. If these two conditions were not fulfilled Commissioners recommended that disputed area should remain under Turkish sovereignty. They left it to Council of League to decide whether in order to ensure permanent peace it might not be preferable to partition territory. The report came before the Council at the beginning of this month. Statements were made (1) by myself on behalf of His Majesty's Government in which inter alia I explained that His Majesty's Government were willing to replace the present Treaty with Iraq as already contemplated in the Protocol to that Treaty (see my despatch 6th April, Dominions 144*) by a Treaty of longer duration which should safeguard those conditions of stable government and reasonable consideration for local interests, subject to which the Commissioners recommended that the disputed territory should continue in its present union with Iraq; and (2) by the Turkish representative who reaffirmed the Turkish claim to the disputed area laying particular stress on the statements in the Commission's Report that the sovereignty over that district still remains with Turkey. The Council then decided to appoint a sub-committee of three to consider question. The sub-committee did not hear the British case until 11th September. Cause of delay is understood to be disquieting effect produced upon Swedish Chairman and Uruguayan member by Turkish legal arguments. These may be summarized under two main heads. First, Turkish acceptance in advance of League decision was given in circumstances which pointed to early termination of British connexion with Iraq and new element now introduced by Commission's recommendation for prolongation of Iraq Treaty is said to modify or even cancel Turkish assurance of last year. Secondly, Turks maintain that it is beyond competence of Council to insist when fixing frontier upon any condition such as those recommended in report. Turks are said to have threatened reference of these points to Permanent Court of International Justice in event of League giving decision unfavourable to them but to have announced that if partition is decided upon they will abandon these legal arguments. While remaining unconvinced that either of these points has any real weight I thought it desirable to consult with Mr. Chamberlain and Lord Cecil in light of serious warnings received by me that majority of sub-committee would inevitably head for partition unless their doubts on legal aspect could be finally allayed. It had been suggested to me that in order to forestall Turkish action it might be politic for me, after laying our legal case before sub-committee, to volunteer to refer the two points to the Permanent Court of International Justice if sub-committee remained in any doubt. After careful and prolonged discussion with my two colleagues we arrived at conclusion that while it would be wise to accept reference to International Court rather than to allow sub-committee to drift into a thoroughly vicious conclusion such as partition of disputed area it was not yet sufficiently established that this was to be anticipated. It seemed to us that to volunteer reference to International Court on mere hearsay rumour that sub-committee were deeply impressed by arguments which appear to have been presented to them informally and not be included in their official statements, and which appear easily capable of refutation, would be sign of weakness and would encourage Turks to redouble their efforts to frighten Council by vague threats of non-acceptance. I accordingly presented arguments for extreme frontier after first dealing with Turkish written rejoinder to my last speech. I then invited Hurst to argue the legal points which he did with great force visibly impressing the members of the sub-committee. Our argument on question of sovereignty is that by virtue of Articles 3 and 16 of Treaty of Lausanne Turkish Government have agreed to renounce all rights including that of sovereignty over territory to south of frontier to be defined in absence of mutual agreement by decision of Council and that therefore no legal distinction exists between position of Vilayet of Mosul and of Vilayets of Baghdad and Basra over which Turkish Government have admitted that they have renounced their rights. I did not suggest a reference to the International Court in so many words, but I invited sub-committee to consider the legal arguments carefully and to let me know as soon as possible whether they were satisfied or whether they wished any further steps taken in order to set their minds at rest on this point. I understand that the Turkish representative when pressing his case before sub-committee on 12th September produced arguments which have again caused doubts in mind of sub-committee and it is I fear possible that I may not be able to avoid reference to International Court. I am fully conscious of administrative and other objections to delay involved in this reference but these must be faced if alternative is decision that disputed territory should be partitioned.

Please inform your Prime Minister.—AMERY.

21ST SEPTEMBER. My telegram 18th September.* 'Iraq. Council of League of Nations adopted following Resolution 19th September:—

Begins: Council of League of Nations having been seized of question of frontier between Turkey and 'Iraq by application of Article 3 paragraph 2 of Treaty of Lausanne decides for purpose of elucidating certain points of law to request Permanent Court of International Justice to give an advisory opinion on following questions:

(1) What is character of decision to be taken by Council in virtue of Article 3 paragraph 2 of Treaty of Lausanne? Is it an arbitral award, a recommendation, or a simple mediation?

(2) Must decision be unanimous or may it be taken by a majority? May representatives of interested parties take part in vote?

Permanent Court is requested to examine these questions if possible in an extraordinary session.

Council requests Governments of Great Britain and Turkey to be at the disposal of Court for the purpose of furnishing it with all relevant documents or information. It has the honour to transmit to Court minutes of meetings of Council at which question of frontier between Turkey and 'Iraq has been examined.

Secretary-General is authorized to submit present request to Court together with all relevant documents, to explain to Court action taken by Council in the matter, to give all assistance necessary in examination of question, and if necessary to take steps to be represented before Court.

Ends.

23RD NOVEMBER. My telegram 31st October, Secret.† 'Iraq frontier question. Permanent Court of International Justice has given its Advisory Opinion on questions referred to it by Council of League of Nations. For reasons which are set out at length Court is of opinion:

* No. 404. † 47771/25: not printed; it summarized the case presented on behalf of His Majesty's Government.

(1) that the "decision to be taken" by the Council of the League of Nations in virtue of Article 3 (2) of the Treaty of Lausanne will be binding on the parties and will constitute a definitive determination of the frontier between Turkey and 'Iraq;
(2) that the "decision to be taken" must be taken by a unanimous vote, the representatives of the parties taking part in the voting, but their votes not being counted in ascertaining whether there is unanimity.

17TH DECEMBER. [Not to Irish Free State: My telegram 12th December.*] 'Iraq. Following is text of decision taken by Council of League of Nations unanimously on afternoon of 16th December:—

Begins: 1. Frontier between Turkey and 'Iraq shall be as follows: (Here follows geographical description of Brussels line as in Council's Resolution of 29th October, 1924.)

2. British Government is invited to submit to Council a new treaty with 'Iraq ensuring continuance for twenty-five years of mandatory régime defined by Treaty of Alliance between Great Britain and 'Iraq and by British Government's undertaking approved by Council on 27th September, 1924, unless 'Iraq is in conformity with Article 1 of Covenant admitted as a member of League before expiry of this period.

As soon as—within a period of six months from present date—execution of this stipulation has been brought to the knowledge of the Council, the Council shall declare that present decision has become definitive and shall indicate measures required to insure delimitation on the ground of frontier line.

3. British Government as mandatory Power is invited to lay before Council the administrative measures which will be taken with a view to securing for Kurdish populations guarantees regarding local administration recommended by Commission in its final conclusions.

4. British Government as mandatory Power is invited to act as far as possible in accordance with other suggestions of Commission of Inquiry as regards measures likely to ensure pacification and to afford equal protection to all elements of population and also as regards commercial measures indicated in special recommendations of Commission's Report. Ends.

Please inform [Not to Irish Free State: your Prime Minister.] [Irish Free State only: President of the Executive Council.]

Note.—The decision of the Council was published in Cmd. 2562, of which copies were sent to the Dominions and Southern Rhodesia in a despatch of the 1st January, 1926. Other papers on the subject were published in Cmd. 2557, 2563 and 2565, of which copies were sent to the Dominions and Southern Rhodesia in despatches of the 28th December, 1925, and the 13th January, 1926.

[MY LORD,] [SIR,]

Downing Street, 22nd December, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [you,] to be laid before your Ministers, copies of an agreement* with Italy regulating the professional practice of medical practitioners.

2. The effect of this agreement is to embody in an international instrument arrangements which have, in fact, existed for many years under the internal legislation of Great Britain and Italy. Up to March, 1923, it had been assumed by the General Medical Council in this country that complete reciprocity in regard to medical practice had been established in relation to Italy as a result of the Order of His Majesty in Council of the 9th March, 1901, and Italian legislation of the 10th July, 1910, and the 12th August, 1911. Copies of these documents† are enclosed.

3. On the 25th March, 1923, however, the Italian Government published a Royal Decree† (of which a copy is enclosed) modifying the law of the 10th July, 1910, and stipulating that foreign practitioners could only be registered in Italy provided that there was a special reciprocity agreement between Italy and the State concerned. His Majesty's Government made no protest against this Decree at the time as it was understood that the case was covered by existing legislation. Subsequently, specific cases of hardship imposed by the Italian Government upon certain British doctors wishing to practice in Italy were brought to their notice. In the course of conversations on the subject between His Majesty's Ambassador at Rome and the Italian Directorate-General of Public Health, it became evident that the Italian Government declined to agree with the opinion of both His Majesty's Government and the General Medical Council that the subsequent modification of the law of the 10th July, 1910, did not make it necessary for the position to be regularized by a formal international instrument. For some time His Majesty's Government upheld the view that no special agreement was necessary in existing circumstances, and were even prepared to consider rescinding Part II of the Medical Act of 1886 so far as concerns Italy. It was finally decided, however, that, in spite of the conflict of legal opinion, it would be advisable for His Majesty's Government to waive their technical objections and to urge the Italian Government to come to an agreement without delay in order that His Majesty's Ambassador at Rome might be on stronger ground in protecting the growing interests of British doctors in the Italian Riviera.

4. His Majesty's Ambassador at Rome has reported that the Italian Official Gazette of the 28th August published a Royal Decree, dated the 18th June, 1925, giving full and entire execution to the agreement.

5TH FEBRUARY. Confidential. My despatch 11th September, Dominions 451.* Negotiations with Japanese representatives for revision of Commercial Treaty, 1911, have been in progress since April, and draft Supplementary Convention now prepared for presentation to them, of which following is summary:—

(1) Article I is similar to Articles I and II of Protocol to Anglo-German Treaty. See my despatch 9th December, Dominions 567.†

(2) Article II provides that stipulations of 1911 Treaty will not be held to preclude either party from making any special reduction of Customs duty for goods imported over land frontier which may be shown to be justified by considerations referred to in Article VII, Maritime Ports Statute (see my despatch 16th July, Dominions 321‡), and that should any question arise whether any such reduction is in accordance with that Article it shall in event of dispute be dealt with in manner prescribed in Articles XXI and XXII of Statute.

(3) Article III modifies Article XXI of 1911 Treaty by substituting "their respective laws" for "laws of United Kingdom and Japan respectively" in first sentence and by addition at end of second sentence of "but this benefit will be claimed only under condition of reciprocity in the event of such condition being required by laws of either party or by terms of arrangement with third party by which special concessions in that respect may be granted to that third party," as well as by making certain minor alterations of wording.

(4) Article IV provides that 1911 Treaty as modified by Supplementary Convention shall be applicable to all Japanese possessions, leased territories and mandated territories, and may be terminated separately in respect of such territories.

(5) Articles V to VII deal with position of British Dominions, Colonies, Protectorates, and Mandated Territories. Modifications of 1911 Treaty contained in Supplementary Convention are not to apply to Dominions, etc., which acceded to Treaty unless notice given. If no notice given, 1911 Treaty will continue to apply without modifications, unless terminated in accordance with second paragraph Article XXVII Treaty. If notice given, Treaty will apply as modified by Convention but right to terminate under second paragraph Article XXVII remains. Dominions, etc., which did not accede to 1911 Treaty may accede to Treaty as modified by Supplementary Convention, right of separate termination being as above.

(6) Articles VIII and IX provide that, notwithstanding provisions of first paragraph Article XXVII, remaining provisions of 1911 Treaty except as modified by Supplementary Convention shall continue in force until expiration of Convention, which is to remain in force for five years from exchange of ratifications, and thereafter until terminated by one year's notice.—AMERY.

28TH MAY. Confidential. My telegram 5th February.† Supplementary Convention with Japan. Japanese Government unwilling to accept Article I of draft on grounds that it had so far appeared only in Anglo-German Treaty and not in other commercial treaties. They were reluctant to subscribe any written undertaking which might be held to limit their full economic freedom, but at the same time they did not wish this reluctance to be interpreted as unwillingness on their part to give sympathetic consideration in the future as in the past to any representations which His Majesty's Government might wish to offer with regard to trade with Japan. In the circumstances His Majesty's Government have agreed to omit Article I. Article II (now Article I) amended by substitution of words "effect shall not be given to the reduction until the matter has been dealt with" for "it shall in event of dispute be dealt with." Now proposed to present draft as so amended to Japanese representatives for signature and at time of signature to place on record note of understandings reached between parties on certain points, including following:—

(1) Formula for defining application to British ships of condition of reciprocity contained in Article II (formerly Article III) of Supplementary Convention. Exact form which this should take is at present under consideration and further telegram will be sent when it is settled.

(11) Statement to be made that it is assumed on both sides that clauses of Supplementary Convention relating to application to mandated territories of provisions of Treaty as amended by Supplementary Convention did not prejudice provisions of Covenant of League of Nations and terms of Mandates in respect of those territories.—AMERY.

He suggested that detailed examination of questions involved might be left over for negotiation between representatives of the two Powers until decision to admit foreign ships to Japanese coasting trade had actually been taken by Japanese Government. DRAFT AGREEMENT.

His Britannic Majesty's Government and the Government of the Democratic Republic of Latvia, having judged it expedient to make arrangements for the disposal of the estates of deceased seamen, have agreed as follows:—

Article I.—In the case of Latvian seamen dying on board British vessels or on British or foreign territory whilst serving on board a British ship, the competent Department of His Majesty's Government in London will furnish the Latvian Consul-General in London with copies of the accounts which may be received by them in respect of the wages and effects of such deceased seamen, together with any particulars which may be at their disposal likely to facilitate the identification of the deceased and of the legal heirs.

In every case where an estate of such a deceased Latvian seaman does not exceed £100 sterling in value and His Majesty's Government are satisfied that the legal heirs of the deceased seaman are resident in Latvian territory, and that there are no persons elsewhere who have any valid claim to the wages and effects left by such seaman they will dispense with the customary form of claim and will hand over the property in question to the Latvian Consul-General in London.

Where the property of a deceased Latvian seaman is not so handed over, the competent Department of His Majesty's Government in London will, before disposing of the estate of such seaman in accordance with the appropriate law, give notice to the Latvian Consul-General in London of their intention to hand over such property to those persons having claims upon it, and will consider any representations that the Consul-General will make thereon.

The Latvian Government on their part undertake that in the case of all estates received by them, of British seamen, whether dying on board Latvian merchant vessels or on Latvian or foreign territory whilst serving on board a Latvian ship, similar action will be taken and the estates similarly handed over to His Britannic Majesty's Consular Officers.

Article II.—The present Agreement shall come into force from the date of its signature. It shall be terminable at any time on a notice of one year given in advance by either of the contracting parties to the other.

Article III.—Liberty is reserved for the Governments of the Dominion of Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, the Dominion of New Zealand, the Union of South Africa, the Irish Free State, Newfoundland and India and also the Government of any of His Majesty's Colonies, Possessions, Protectorates or of any territory in respect of which a mandate on behalf of the League of Nations has been accepted by His Britannic Majesty, to accede to this Agreement. In the event of any such Government acceding to the Agreement, the competent department of the Government of that territory will, where effect is to be given to the Agreement in the territory, be substituted in Article I for the competent Department of His Majesty's Government in London and the appropriate Latvian Consular Officer will be substituted for the Latvian Consul-General in London.

In the event of the provisions of this Agreement having been made applicable, in accordance with this Article, to the estates of Latvian seamen received by the competent department of the Government of any of His Britannic Majesty's self-governing Dominions, Colonies, Possessions or Protectorates, or of the Government of India or of the Government of any territory in respect of which a mandate on behalf of the League of Nations has been accepted by His Britannic Majesty, either of the Contracting Parties may terminate the Agreement separately in respect of any such self-governing Dominion, Colony, Possession or Protectorate or in respect of India or in respect of any such mandated territory, on giving to the other one year's notice to that effect.

In witness whereof the Undersigned, duly authorized to that effect, have signed this Agreement and have affixed thereon their seals.

Le Gouvernement des Etats-Unis a proposé au Gouvernement français de donner une adhésion définitive aux règles élaborées par la commission des Juristes réunir à la Haye en décembre, 1922, février, 1923, au sujet du contrôle de la radiographie en temps de guerre et de la guerre aérienne.

L'Ambassadeur de France est chargé de s'enquérir de l'avis du gouvernement britannique quant à la réponse à donner à la proposition du Gouvernement des Etats-Unis.

Cette proposition, qui en revient à transformer en une Convention l'assemblée des Règles de la Haye, a fait l'objet à Paris d'une étude dont les conclusions ne sont pas favorables à l'adoption de cette proposition.

Foreign Office, S.W.1.
4th February, 1925.

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

WITH reference to the memorandum which you were good enough to communicate on the 20th January, requesting information as to the views of His Majesty's Government in regard to a proposal made by the United States Government to the French Government for the conclusion of a convention embodying the rules for the control of radio in time of war and the rules for aerial warfare drawn up at The Hague in 1922-23, I have the honour to inform you that His Majesty's Government have been similarly approached by the United States Embassy in London.

2. No definite reply has yet been sent to the United States Embassy, as the whole question is still under consideration. It would, however, be of great interest to His Majesty's Government, to have some more detailed information as to the views of the French Government on this matter, and, in particular, as to the reasons for which your Government do not favour the adoption of the rules drawn up by the International Commission at The Hague.

I have, &c.,
(for the Secretary of State),
GEORGE MOUNSEY.

His Excellency
Monsieur A. de Fleuriau,

Enclosure 3 in No. 424.

Se référant à la lettre du Foreign Office, en date du 4 février dernier, l'Ambassadeur de France a l'honneur de communiquer, ci-joint, à Son Excellence le Principal Secrétaire d'Etat de Sa Majesté britannique aux Affaires Etrangères copie d'une lettre adressée par M. Herriot à l'Ambassadeur des Etats-Unis à Paris, pour lui faire connaître le sentiment du Gouvernement français en ce qui concerne la transformation en Convention des règles élaborées par la Commission des Juristes de La Haye sur la radiotélégraphie et la guerre aérienne.

M. de Fleuriau saisit cette occasion pour renouveler à Son Excellence M. Austen Chamberlain les assurances de sa haute considération.

Ambassade de France, à Londres,
Albert Gate House.
le 19 mars, 1925.

Le Président du Conseil,
Ministre des Affaires Etrangères,

à Son Excellence
M. Myron T. Herrick,
Ambassadeur des Etats-Unis à Paris.

VOTRE Excellence a bien voulu, par une lettre du 14 février, 1924, faire connaître à mon prédécesseur que le Gouvernement des Etats-Unis d'Amérique proposait d'incorporer dans une Convention nouvelle les règles élaborées par la Commission des Juristes réunis à La Haye du 11 décembre, 1922, au 19 février, 1923. Le Gouvernement français ne méconnaît pas le très grand intérêt que présente cette suggestion mais l'examen des règles proposées a fait ressortir que la plupart d'entre elles reproduisaient des solutions déjà adoptées par la France et comprises soit dans les Conventions internationales déjà en vigueur, telles que la Convention de La Haye de 1907, soit au nombre des pratiques du droit des gens consacrées par l'usage.

D'autres propositions ne seraient d'ailleurs pas sans inconvénient, car sur beaucoup de points, les innovations qu'elles impliquent ne sont pas conformes à certains principes tels que celui de la liberté des mers où sont critiquables à d'autres points de vue.

Les dispositions qui visent la guerre aérienne que la Commission précitée a plus particulièrement cherché à réglementer, figurent déjà en grande partie dans la Convention de navigation aérienne du 13 octobre, 1919, mais tendent parfois à s'en écarter.

La ratification par les Etats-Unis de la Convention aérienne de 1919 qu'ils ont déjà signée aurait l'avantage de mettre immédiatement en pratique les dispositions déjà acceptées depuis plusieurs années et qui ont reçu une base contractuelle, alors que la présente suggestion du Gouvernement des Etats-Unis risquerait de retarder leur application en soulevant de nouvelles discussions, soit de fond, soit de forme, qui pourraient être prolongées, étant donné le nombre des Etats qui seraient appelés à y prendre part.

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 6th April, 1925.

HIS MAJESTY'S Government have given careful consideration to the proposals of the United States Government to my predecessor contained in Mr. Kellogg's Note of the 13th February, 1924, inquiring whether His Majesty's Government would be disposed to conclude with the United States of America and certain other Powers two conventions, such as were proposed by the United States delegation at The Hague on 12th February, 1923, relative to the rules for the control of radio in time of war and for aerial warfare, drawn up at The Hague in 1922-23. I regret that, owing to the necessity of an exhaustive examination of the many important questions involved, I have been obliged to delay replying to Mr. Kellogg's above-mentioned and subsequent notes.

2. I now request you to inform your Government that His Majesty's Government, while warmly appreciating the friendly and humanitarian motives which have prompted these proposals, have decided to await further international discussion on this question before formulating their considered views on the Report of The Hague Commission.

from the Prime Ministers of Canada, Australia and South Africa indicate that each has grave difficulty in personally attending the proposed Conference and that each considers consultation by cable preferable. Secondly, I presume that Conference will therefore not take place. Though medical advice precludes certainty of my personal attendance this Government would attend by a Minister if Conference is still desired and can take place. Thirdly, I have sent by mail due London early in February (see Governor-General's despatch of 6th January* to the Secretary of State for the Colonies) concise statement of New Zealand's objection to Protocol in present form. Fourthly, one principal objection is to the provisions in Protocol accepting The Hague Council as conclusive authority to determine any questions of International Law and also to determine what is a matter of domestic jurisdiction. The reference to reservation(s) in Article 3 of Protocol is so drafted as to be without effect. Another principal objection is that, though defence against aggression is permitted to nation attacked, Protocol prevents a friendly nation coming to the aid of the nation attacked without the authority of the Council after tedious procedure. Article 8 Covenant of League thus reduced in practical effect. Fifthly, I should be glad to be informed whether France, Italy and Japan have actually given formal adhesion to Protocol. If not, whether it is probable that all or any of them will give adhesion. Ends.

15TH JANUARY. Confidential. Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister:—

Begins: I am sorry to say that replies from Dominion Prime Ministers to my message of 19th December† indicate that there are great difficulties in arranging for special meeting of Imperial Conference at beginning of March to discuss problems arising out of Geneva Protocol.

Following is summary of replies received. Mackenzie King telegraphed 29th December‡ that Canadian Government agree that it is highly desirable that similar attitude should be adopted towards Protocol by countries of British Empire which are members of League of Nations. Suggestion, however, to hold Imperial Conference in London to be attended by Prime Ministers of Dominions as well as of Great Britain in March does not appear practicable. Canadian Parliament has been called for first week in February. It would be quite impossible for him to be absent from Canada for any length of time during the session, and pressure of legislative duties would also make it difficult for any of the Ministers particularly concerned to be similarly absent. Canadian Government suggest change of opinions by cable and post with understanding that, if these means found inadequate and other Dominions consider it practicable to attend Conference in London, Canadian Government will be prepared to consider proposal again.

Bruce telegraphed 23rd December§ that Commonwealth Government agree that it is of utmost importance that on this difficult and delicate matter Empire should have single policy and speak with single voice. Before expressing opinion with regard to suggestion that Conference should be held in March, Commonwealth Government feel that they must await return of Sir Littleton Groom, first Commonwealth delegate at 1924 Assembly.

* No. 445. † No. 341 in Dominions No. 93. ‡ No. 351 in Dominions No. 93. § No. 347 in Dominions No. 93.

expected back 10th January. Whole position will be closely examined immediately on his return, and Commonwealth Government will then be in a position to communicate with British Government as to their views upon Protocol and also as to necessity for personal consultation in order to arrive at single Empire policy. As they see position at present they believe that consultation by cable should enable such a policy to be evolved. In the event of its being demonstrated that it is impossible to deal adequately with matter by cable it will be necessary for personal consultation to take place, but Bruce feels that it is practically impossible for him personally to attend, and grave difficulties are in the way of another Minister being sent in his place. In view of this fact Commonwealth Government urge very strongly that every effort should be made to deal with matter by cable communications.

Massey telegraphed 23rd December* that he was in communication with other Prime Ministers and would endeavour to arrange to attend in March if they were able to do so. He has now telegraphed that communications from Prime Ministers of Canada, Commonwealth of Australia and Union of South Africa indicate that each has grave difficulty in personally attending proposed Conference, and that each considers consultation by cable preferable. He presumes that Conference will therefore not take place. Though his personal attendance not a certainty New Zealand Government would attend by a Minister if Conference still desired and can take place.

General Hertzog telegraphed 3rd January† that it was not possible for him or any of his colleagues in Union Government to attend Conference before middle of August next.

Monroe telegraphed 24th December‡ that he was unlikely to be able to attend himself owing to sitting of Parliament, but would try to arrange to send representatives from Newfoundland.

No reply received from Irish Free State. In the circumstances it is clear that we must endeavour by correspondence to arrive at some common conclusion with regard to the Protocol itself, and the large issues of policy which arise out of its consideration.

Similar message sent to other Prime Ministers. Baldwin. Ends.

15TH JANUARY. Secret. Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister:—

Begins: My message of to-day.§ Following is summary of views so far expressed by Dominion Prime Ministers with regard to provisions of Geneva Protocol.

Prime Minister of Canada states that Canadian Government has given question some preliminary consideration; it is now being examined by Departmental Committee, and will in immediate future be gone into in detail by Cabinet.

Prime Minister of Commonwealth of Australia entirely concurs in view that it would be most unwise to reject Protocol except for some cogent reasons or without endeavouring to formulate some positive alternative policy, but

* No. 348 in Dominions No. 93. † No. 432. ‡ No. 350 in Dominions No. 93. § No. 434.

Australia will not allow any abrogation of her rights with regard to immigration and is anxious that policy pursued shall if possible be acceptable to United States. He regards as most essential preliminary to any discussion as to British Empire's policy ascertaining of United States Government's real opinion on subject.

Prime Minister of New Zealand stated in his message of 23rd December* that he considered whole proposal mischievous and only possible of effect in minor issues between small nations, but recognized difficulty in the way of Great Britain's refusal to concur in some form of general international obligation to refer to arbitration. He stated that New Zealand Government must be largely guided by British Government in final decision, but it was then his opinion that whatever is done now will be rendered nugatory under Article 21 of Protocol by inevitable failure of agreement concerning details of disarmament.

In his further message† now received he states that one principal objection is to provisions in Protocol accepting Hague Council as a conclusive authority to determine any questions of international law and also to determine what is a matter of domestic jurisdiction. Reference to reservations in Article 3 Protocol is so drafted as to be without effect. Another principal objection is that, though defence against aggression is permitted to nation attacked, Protocol prevents friendly nation coming to the aid of nation attacked without the authority of Council after tedious procedure. Article 8 Covenant of League thus reduced in practical effect. He asks to be informed as to attitude of France, Italy and Japan.

Prime Minister of Union of South Africa has no views to offer as yet as he feels that matter ought to be more fully considered after seeing what Committee of Imperial Defence have to say.

I have included in above summary and summary contained in my Confidential message of to-day‡ all replies so far received including your own in order that each Prime Minister may see form in which his views have been communicated to other Prime Ministers.

As regards conclusion of my Confidential message of to-day Report of Sub-Committee mentioned in my Secret message of 19th December§ not yet ready, but Committee of Imperial Defence will consider it as soon as possible after its completion, and I shall hope to be able to send you then the considered views of His Majesty's Government.

[Answered by No. 444.]

26TH JANUARY. Secret. Your telegram of 15th January, Secret.‡ Geneva Protocol. Following for Prime Minister from my Prime Minister:—

Begins: Ministers after careful consideration of the proposed Protocol regret to have to inform British Government that they feel themselves unable to accept the same or to recommend its acceptance by Parliament. The reasons which have led Ministers to arrive at this conclusion may without going into details be stated as follows:—

1. It seems generally admitted, and Ministers share that feeling, that the League of Nations as at present existing with America, Germany and Russia standing aloof cannot over any length of time achieve its great and primary object of ensuring peaceable world, and must, unless these great nations become members, necessarily as time goes on assume more and more the character of political alliance. To accept Protocol, Ministers feel, would be only to make it more difficult for countries at present outside the League, notably America, to become members, and would consequently contribute very materially to making it impossible for League to attain its real object(s) and so give an additional impulse to the diversion of its activity(ies) in the direction of an alliance, having as its object the maintenance of a balance of power.

2. It is quite impossible even approximately to calculate or tell in advance what are going to be the obligations and consequences direct and indirect which may accrue from an acceptance of the Protocol or what may be the many and various international complications to which it may give rise.

3. By accepting the Protocol the character of the League will be so modified that no nation being a member of it, subject to the provisions of the Protocol, can rightly be said any longer to retain its full measure of sovereign rights. This, Ministers deem a matter of very grave concern, in view more particularly of indefinite character of the obligations which are sought to be imposed and of the practical consequences it may have for the weaker nations not possessing influence derived from power to add prestige and weight to their interpretation of the obligations thus assumed.

4. Ministers feel convinced that, while public feeling in the Union may be taken as sincerely in favour of a real and genuine League of Nations, it is generally felt that the League, as it is at present, has not yet arrived at that stage, and that to have obligations of the Union under Covenant extended any further is not in the interests of this country.

5. In matters of such a grave nature as the relationship and obligation(s) of nation(s) (over against the) League professedly instituted with a view to the guardianship of the peace of the world, but under present conditions more especially the protector of the circumstances and requirements of particular nations and countries, Ministers feel they are called upon to exercise particular vigilance and to bestow particular attention upon the peculiar position and interests of South Africa, and are of the opinion that these interests demand that no international obligations should be entered into which may entail a participation and interference by the Union in matters which do not, or only remotely, concern her and whereby her real and proper interests may eventually be jeopardized.

Ministers have considered question as to making suggestions which may serve as amending proposals to the provisions of the Protocol. They find, however, that, from the very nature of the circumstances which have necessitated the drafting of the Protocol, no amendment or substitute to its provisions can (?be) expected to prove acceptable unless it carries with it an extension of obligations and responsibilities under the Covenant. As already stated, Ministers are convinced that that would be against the interests of this country and contrary to the wishes of the people.

Under these circumstances Ministers must advise that they have no suggestion(s) to offer. Ends.

(Confidential.)

SIR, Government House, Wellington, 6th January, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to you, at the instance of my Prime Minister, the accompanying memorandum dealing with the proposed Protocol for the Pacific Settlement of International Disputes.

I have, &c.,
CHARLES FERGUSON,
Governor-General.

Enclosure in No. 445.

MEMORANDUM ON THE PROTOCOL FOR PACIFIC SETTLEMENT OF INTERNATIONAL DISPUTES.

It is desired by this memorandum to define as briefly as possible the principal objections which the New Zealand Government has to the Protocol, omitting all minor precise criticisms of the language used by the draftsmen of that document.

But it is desired first to record an emphatic protest against a process under which the British Empire is hurriedly called upon to give its adhesion to momentous novel conditions expressed in a document hastily prepared and vague in expression both as regards its effect and detail.

The League of Nations in 1923 propounded a Treaty of Mutual Assistance and recommended the Nations, members of the League, to agree to that Treaty. We have on record in the Document A.35 1924 IX of the League of Nations, the printed replies of the principal Nations rejecting that Treaty, and expressing their varying grounds for the refusal.

No outline of the present novel alternative scheme had been before the Council or the Assembly of the League until Mr. Ramsay MacDonald and M. Herriot addressed the Assembly at Geneva, Mr. MacDonald speaking on the 4th and M. Herriot on the 5th September, 1924, and it appears from page 42 of that record that the Assembly on the 6th September passed resolutions directing consideration by the First and Third Committees of the questions there submitted. The First and Third Committees presented a joint report on the 1st October covering this draft Protocol, which the Assembly later adopted.

It is to a document so initiated and so prepared within that space of three weeks, involving wide expansions and grave alterations of the Covenant of the League of Nations, that Great Britain, after a general election and a complete change in its Administration, is asked to give a speedy adhesion and to invite the self-governing Dominions to join it in that act.

In the case of New Zealand, the document itself did not reach the Government until the month of December, though this Government had some knowledge of its general effect in November.

If, as has been contended by Lord Parmoor and others, the Protocol really defined no greater obligations than are already undertaken by the Nations in the Covenant itself, it might well be the case, that even in the short space of time allowed, Great Britain and the Dominions might have assented. But it is not true that the Protocol creates no new obligations. It is no mere form that we are asked to assent to, but matters of substantive, singular and almost unexampled importance.

On what ground can it be contended that there is such urgency in the proposals as to require adhesion by Great Britain in March, 1925? Is it because the League insists on holding a conference on Disarmament this year and requires the Protocol as a condition precedent to the Disarmament Conference? If so, the answer is that the Disarmament Conference may well be postponed till next year, and that the British Empire is not to be driven into a decision which its Prime Ministers cannot unitedly consider merely on the grounds that the League of Nations is in a hurry to call a conference at Geneva. And a further answer is that it is absurd to ask the signatory nations to agree now to become bound by such conditions as are expressed in the Protocol on the mere chance that Germany and Russia, for instance, will agree in a scheme of disarmament to be later propounded.

His Majesty's Government has recognized that a Conference of the Prime Ministers of the Empire is essential to ensure due consideration of the course that the Empire should take. It appears to be impossible to hold such a Conference before or during March, 1925. It would seem, therefore, that the only possible course open to His Majesty's Government is to refuse adhesion in March, and it would seem that such a refusal could not be construed as a refusal to concur in any scheme of general compulsory arbitration. The refusal would obviously be limited at present to the ground that His Majesty's Government cannot commit the Empire without due consultation, and that the date fixed allows no time for such consultation. It is earnestly hoped that His Majesty's Government will adopt that course, for New Zealand will never consent to be bound by the Protocol in its present form, and believes that the whole Empire would be endangered if the signature of Great Britain were appended to such a document, dangerous in its effect, crudely and hurriedly drafted, and capable of various interpretations.

Great Britain will always keep faith in letter and spirit with any obligations it signs. If other nations are to be similarly bound to conform to the letter and the spirit, both must be defined with far greater accuracy than has been attempted in the terms of the Protocol. But apart from the form of expression, the intention and effect of the document itself is not in accord with common sense, however much it may accord with visionary doctrines, such, for example, as may be found at the end of Lord Parmoor's speech in the verbatim record of the Debate in the Geneva Assembly.

The principal objections from the point of view of New Zealand are:—

1. The reference of matters to the Court of International Justice. So far Great Britain has never made a declaration under Article 36 of the Statute of the Court authorizing that Court to determine, without special submission, the matters defined in paragraphs A. B. C. and D. of that Article, and New Zealand never will consent to such a declaration.

But Article 3 of the Protocol binds the signatory States to accept that jurisdiction in all matters. The reference in that Article to reservations is idle and useless, as the Protocol is drafted. A reservation would have absolutely no effect in limiting the jurisdiction in matters referred under the Protocol, though it might limit the jurisdiction in matters of peaceful negotiations. Where a question of international law arises in the course of arbitrations under the Protocol, that is to say, in cases where war is threatened, the permanent Court of International Justice at the Hague is given express jurisdiction firstly, to decide whether a claim by a nation is a claim in respect of matters within its domestic jurisdiction, and, secondly, to determine all other questions of international law, and signatories are to be bound by such decision.

New Zealand's immigration laws are framed to preserve, as far as possible, British nationality in New Zealand. No foreigner may come to New Zealand to reside without having first made written application from his country of origin. Whatever the jurists at Geneva may think, the law advisers of the Crown in New Zealand believe that there is grave danger that the International Court of Justice at the Hague, consisting mainly of foreigners, might hold that the New Zealand law is contrary to the comity of Nations, and that the New Zealand system is not a question of merely domestic jurisdiction. And our law advisers believe that, if a question arose for determination under the Protocol, the Permanent Court might decide, firstly, that the right of foreigners to reside in New Zealand was not a matter exclusively within the domestic jurisdiction of New Zealand, and, secondly, that as a matter of international law we must admit them or reduce the restrictions on their admission.

But consideration of the minor interests of New Zealand in this respect is negligible as compared with admission of the Permanent Court as the deciding factor in Great Britain's belligerent rights at sea. It seems to us idle to contend, as has been contended, that, inasmuch as such questions would only effectively arise during actual war, and as the assumption is that Great Britain will only wage war with the consent of the League, therefore the point may be waived. That seems to us idle because the question would be raised by neutrals whose vessels were stopped and searched for contrabands. It is with regard to the rights of His Majesty's ships against neutrals when Great Britain is at war that difference exists between the opinions of foreign jurists and the decisions of the English Courts. And it seems obvious that the effect of adherence to the Protocol would be deliberately to accept a foregone conclusion against the exercise of privileges in war which are essential to the defence of the Empire.

2. The Protocol, it is true, partly cuts down the rights and duties of signatory nations expressed in Article 8 of the Covenant, but that reduction of obligation is objectionable. Provision is made in the Protocol for suspension of operations by nations about to go to war, and for non-mobilization, etc., and it authorizes defence against acts of aggression by a nation attacked. The definition of aggression in Article 10 is not, and obviously is not intended to be, exclusive, and it may be assumed that any attack on territorial integrity or political independence as mentioned in Article 10 of the Covenant would still be aggression under the Protocol, but there is absolutely no provision in the Protocol enabling or entitling a nation which is not itself attacked by aggression to come at once to the assistance of a friendly nation which is so attacked. Indeed the effect of the Protocol is to prevent such nations from entering upon war to aid another nation against actual attack on its territories, until such time (probably far too late for effect) as the Council, after the tedious procedure directed, is at liberty to authorize assistance. This may be intentional, but if it is intentional Great Britain will surely not consent to such a limitation to its rights and duties to France and Belgium as is expressed in Article 10 of the Covenant and subjected to such ludicrous limitation by the Protocol.

3. The object and effect of Articles 11 and 13 of the Protocol is to create for the Council of the League an entirely new power and authority in warfare between Signatories to the League. It is not true to say that those Articles merely define the effect of Article 16 of the Covenant. It does not appear necessary to emphasize this by quotation, the intention and the effect is apparent, and those Articles require drastic amendment.

4. Reference has already been made to the Document A.35 1924 IX of the League of Nations, containing a reprint of the replies received from the various Governments to the proposal for the Treaty of Mutual Assistance. The reply of His Majesty's Government is to be found on pages 15, 16 and 17 of that Document, and it is no exaggeration to say that the whole of that criticism is equally applicable to the terms and effect of the Protocol. If His Majesty's present Government agrees with that criticism of the late Government, it will find in paragraph 12 on page 17 a concise statement of the point of objection last taken in this memorandum, and it is convenient to paraphrase the further language of the succeeding paragraph 13, as summarizing New Zealand's objection to the Protocol: "For the reasons which have been enumerated, the draft" Protocol "in the eyes of His Majesty's Government" of New Zealand "holds out no serious prospect of advantage sufficient to compensate the world for the immense complication of international relations which it would create, the uncertainty of the practical effect of its clauses, and the consequent difficulty of conducting national policy."

This memorandum may well conclude with a request to be informed whether the words just quoted do not apply with even greater force to the Protocol, and with a statement that the New Zealand Government is unable to understand any necessity for creating such obligations as the Protocol invents merely for the purpose of facilitating an International Conference on disarmament at Geneva.

W. F. MASSEY,
Prime Minister.

MOST SECRET. 5th February. Following from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister:—

Begins: As a result of confidential and unofficial inquiries referred to at end of my Secret message 19th December,* Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs has gained following impressions as to attitude of United States Government towards Geneva Protocol.

In eyes of present administration Protocol contains numerous sources of trouble, and they had hoped that it would die a natural death. United States have hitherto regarded League of Nations with no more than a certain mistrust; if Protocol went through as it stands, it is no exaggeration to say that they could hardly help considering League potential enemy. This feeling is inspired by compulsory arbitration and sanctions provisions. It is not difficult to imagine that League at instance of some Central or South American Member might be brought into conflict with Monroe Doctrine. If, for instance, United States Government were compelled at any time to take measures for protection of Panama Canal, and on that account were to be arraigned before League by one of Central American States, there would undoubtedly be explosion of public opinion throughout country. Similar difficulties would arise if neutral rights of United States in matters of trade and commerce were interfered with in event of economic or armed blockade of aggressor State by League, and it would be practically impossible to institute effective blockade without such interference. In short, there will be serious risk of grave trouble with United States in future if we ratify Protocol. Baldwin. Ends.

(Minute.)

MINISTERS, after careful consideration of the proposed Protocol, regret to have to inform the British Government that they feel themselves unable to accept the same or to recommend its acceptance by Parliament. The reasons which have led Ministers to arrive at this conclusion may, without going into details, be stated as follows:—

1. It seems generally admitted, and Ministers share that feeling, that the League of Nations as at present existing, with America, Germany and Russia standing aloof, cannot over any length of time achieve its great and primary object of ensuring the peace of the world, and must, unless these great Nations become members, necessarily as time goes on assume more and more the character of political alliance. To accept the Protocol, Ministers feel, would be only to make it more difficult for the countries at present outside the League—notably America—to become members, and would consequently contribute very materially to making it impossible for the League to attain its real object, and so give an additional impulse to the diversion of its activities in the direction of an alliance having as its object the maintenance of a balance of power.

2. It is quite impossible, even approximately, to calculate or tell in advance what are going to be the obligations and consequences, direct and indirect, which may accrue from an acceptance of the Protocol, or what may be the many and various international complications to which it may give rise.

3. By accepting the Protocol the character of the League will be so modified that no nation, being a member of it subject to the provisions of the Protocol, can rightly be said any longer to retain its full measure of sovereign rights. This, Ministers deem a matter of very grave concern, in view, more particularly, of the indefinite character of the obligations which are sought to be imposed, and of the practical consequences it may have for weaker nations not possessing the influence derived from power to add prestige and weight to their interpretation of obligations thus assumed.

4. Ministers feel convinced that, while public feeling in the Union may be taken as sincerely in favour of a real and genuine League of Nations, it is generally felt that the League, as it is at present, has not yet arrived at that stage, and that to have the obligations of the Union under the Covenant extended any further is not in the interest of this country.

5. In a matter of such a grave nature as the relationship and obligations of nations over against the League professedly instituted with a view to the guardianship of the peace of the world, but under present conditions more especially the protector of circumstances and requirements of particular nations and countries, Ministers feel that they are called upon to exercise particular vigilance and to bestow particular attention upon the peculiar position and interests of South Africa, and are of opinion that these interests demand that no international obligations should be entered into which may entail a participation and interference by the Union in matters which do not, or only remotely, concern her, and whereby her real and proper interests may eventually be jeopardised.

Ministers have considered the question as to making suggestions which may serve as amending proposals to the provisions of the Protocol. They find, however, that from the very nature of the circumstances which have necessitated the drafting of the Protocol, no amendment or substitute to its provisions can be expected to prove acceptable unless it carries with it an extension of the obligations and responsibilities under the Covenant. As already stated, Ministers are convinced that that would be against the interests of this country and contrary to the wishes of the people.

Under these circumstances Ministers must advise that they have no suggestions to offer.

Report has been under examination by Committee of Imperial Defence and Cabinet, and the latter, after most careful and exhaustive inquiry, have come to the conclusion that they cannot accept the Geneva Protocol or recommend its acceptance to the other Governments of the Empire. In this conclusion they have been confirmed by the general agreement revealed in the communications so far received from the Dominion Governments and from the Government of India. We feel that in view of the forthcoming session of the Council of the League of Nations, which begins on 9th March, a definite statement can no longer be withheld, and the Foreign Secretary has been authorized by the Cabinet to make a statement, text of which will, I hope, be ready for transmission to you in a separate telegram as soon as its terms have been finally approved at meeting of Cabinet which is to be held to-morrow.

I trust that this course and the tenor of the statement will meet with your general approval. I am very sorry not to have been able to communicate with you earlier, particularly in view of impending meeting of Council, but I am sure that you will appreciate that the important questions of policy involved rendered full consideration inevitable. of the Cabinet and by Inter-departmental Committee our Government has come to conclusions which may be summarized as follows:

First, that we should continue to give whole-hearted support to the League of Nations and particularly to its work of conciliation, co-operation and publicity. Second, that we do not consider it in the interests of Canada, of the British Empire, or of the League itself to recommend to Parliament adherence to the Protocol and particularly to its rigid provisions for application of Economic and Military sanctions in every future war. Among the grounds for this conclusion is the consideration of the effect of non-participation of the United States upon attempt to enforce sanctions and particularly so in case of contiguous countries like Canada. Third, that as Canada believes firmly in submission of International disputes to joint inquiry or arbitration and has shared in certain number of undertakings in this field we would be prepared to consider acceptance of compulsory jurisdiction of Permanent Court in justiciable disputes with certain reservations and co-operation in further consideration of method of supplementing the provisions of the Covenant for settlement of non-justifiable [justiciable] issues including method of joint investigation reserving ultimate decision in domestic issues and without undertaking further obligations to enforce decisions in case of other States. Fourth, that we would be prepared to take part at any time in any general Conference on reduction of armaments which did not involve prior acceptance of the Protocol. Ends.

[Answered by No. 471.]

PART I. 5th March. Secret. Your telegram of 5th February.* Following from my Prime Minister:—

Begins: The Commonwealth Government, after having given full and most careful consideration to the Protocol for the Pacific Settlement of International Disputes, has reached the following conclusions regarding the important and far-reaching provisions that are therein contained. In the first place, my Government desires to reaffirm its adherence to the principle(s) which governed its adoption of the League of Nations Covenant and loyal observance of the League's recommendations. It believes that the League came into existence because all nations who were signatories to the Covenant realized from their experience during the War that the time had come to substitute arbitrament of reason for that of force. It cannot overlook the fact, however, that there are some very definite defects in the Covenant which arose, not because their ideals fell short, but because there still existed some mistrust and uncertainty as to the method by which the force of the League should be applied. The League as it stands is a great moral force which gives to the world some concrete expression of the ideals for which its members stand. The Protocol represents a praiseworthy attempt to go further than was found possible when the League was first established. The particular problem with which my Government has exercised itself has been whether the time is opportune to do what was not possible in 1919, and whether advantages to be derived by strengthening the machinery are not altogether disproportionate to the risk of weakening the already established moral influence of the League by serious disagreements among its members.

* No. 446.

The aim of the Protocol, which is to further the settlement of international disputes without having recourse to war, thus ensuring to the nations of the world that measure of external security which would permit them to obtain relief from the heavy burden of armaments, is one which, in principle, must commend itself to any State anxious to see strengthened the ties that bind together the members of international communities. It is also indisputable that members of the League recognizing as they do the relationship between military armaments and the danger of war, are bound to reduce national armament(s) to the lowest point consistent with national safety. The Protocol has been framed from the point of view that machinery other than that existing in the Covenant destined to provide safeguards against aggression must precede any scheme for disarmament. Relief from the burden of armaments is regarded ultimately as being dependent on the adoption of compulsory arbitration.

It is obvious that the adoption of the principle of compulsory arbitration, which is generalized so as to comprise all disputes between all countries whether members of the League or not, would completely transform the present constitution of the League. The Covenant obliges the member States to refer disputes that are not settled by diplomatic means either to arbitration, judicial settlement, or to inquiry by the Council. A limited class of disputes is regarded as being generally suitable for submission to arbitration or judicial settlement. Should the Protocol become law between member States compulsory arbitration would become the rule for the settlement of all disputes. Inquiry by the Council would tend to disappear. It is not proposed to enter into discussion on the principle of compulsory arbitration, nor to review the difficulties that may be encountered by a Government in giving effect to an award pronounced by an arbitral body on a matter which public sentiment considers to be of paramount and vital importance. The present system as laid down in the Covenant, which furnishes an alternative procedure, does appear, however, to have very evident advantages in elasticity and adaptation to the existing state of public opinion over the proposed machinery of compulsory arbitration.

There exist at the present time other very serious practical objections to the adoption of compulsory arbitration as a general system. To be effective compulsory arbitration must secure the consent of all countries between which disputes may conceivably arise. To establish a general system of compulsory arbitration to which any powerful States are not parties cannot fail to be a source of danger both for (? to) the successful carrying out of the system itself and for (? to) the international organization under which it operates. It has been a matter of grave concern always to the Commonwealth Government that certain of the foremost nations of the world have not yet become members of the League of Nations, thus accepting the international obligations which are contained in the Covenant and lending their authority for the preservation of peace, this position throwing heavier obligations on the member States that (? than) were originally contemplated when the Covenant of the League was agreed to. It is, therefore, considered that the progressive incorporation of those nations in the League should precede and not follow the assumption of greater obligation(s) that the Protocol will impose upon member States. This reason alone is considered by the Commonwealth Government as amply sufficient to render premature any endeavour at the present time to generalize the principle of compulsory arbitration.

Articles 10 and 11 of the Protocol, which are regarded as complementary to the provisions respecting compulsory arbitration, while possessing some features that could with advantage be incorporated into the Covenant, would also introduce novel, and in some respects, it is believed, undesirable, elements into the constitution of the League. These Articles accentuate very considerably the coercive provisions of the League's Charter. It is felt further that these provisions, while not actually converting the League into a super State, would tend to deflect that organization from being a powerful moral agency for the moulding of the world's opinion in the direction of peaceful and healthy international relations to being an organization for the imposition of pains and penalties.

As the foregoing observations touch the main principle(s) on which the Protocol is based, little would appear to be gained by a detailed examination of the subsidiary provisions. Several of the latter, however, may be briefly referred to.

Article 10 of the Protocol defines the circumstances in which certain presumptions of aggression arise against a State, and provides that, "in the event of hostilities having broken out, any State shall be presumed to be an aggressor unless a decision of the Council, which must be taken unanimously, shall otherwise declare (1) if it has disregarded a unanimous report of the Council, a judicial sentence or an arbitral award recognizing the dispute between it and the other belligerent State arising out of a matter which by international law is solely within the domestic jurisdiction of the latter State, nevertheless if in the last case State shall only be presumed to be an aggressor if it has not previously submitted the question to the Council or Assembly in accordance with Article 11 of the Covenant."

PART II. It does not appear that any logical reason can be advanced to justify an award declaring that a dispute arising from a matter of domestic jurisdiction should be placed on a different footing from any other arbitral award or a unanimous decision of the Council. When a State commits an act of war against another State concerning a matter which International Law declares to be one of purely domestic jurisdiction, it is obviously not in the interests of good understanding between Nations that such an act of aggression, constituting, as it does, an International crime, should be covered by some special proviso. And this is particularly so as under Article 11 of the Covenant any dispute assuming the character of a war, or a threat of war, is a matter of concern to the whole League. The proviso of Article 10(1) is, therefore, unacceptable to the Commonwealth Government.

Article 10 also provides that if the Council does not at once succeed in determining the aggressor, it shall enjoin upon the belligerents an armistice fixing the terms thereof, and any belligerent which refuses to accept armistice, or which has violated terms, shall be deemed an aggressor. To give effect to this provision, which is one of capital importance, it would be indispensable for the League to possess organic control on the spot. This would present certain difficulties in a theatre relatively near to the centre of activity; in a remote theatre it is feared that to establish which party violated the terms of an armistice (fixed at the commencement of hostilities) would present in practice exceptional, if not insuperable, difficulties, and thus be impossible of carrying out.

From above considerations it will be seen that the Commonwealth Government is of opinion that the Protocol contains principles and provisions which do not at present appear to be applicable to the present situation of International life. It is also believed that any endeavours to amend the Protocol so as to give effect to objections that have been raised would present but little practical utility, as these objections cut through the essential principles on which the whole reposes. But this does not imply that the prolonged efforts of which the Protocol is the outcome have been spent in vain. No serious attempt to evolve methods of preserving International peace can be considered as fruitless. The gradual strengthening of the Covenant in these directions where it reveals weakness should be, and doubtless is, the aim of all member States. Such a method seems to be preferable to that of recasting the whole principle on which the present constitution of the League is based, and the Commonwealth Government will gladly and sincerely co-operate along such lines.

It would, perhaps, be out of place for the Commonwealth Government, removed as far as possible from that part of the world whose conditions may have so largely determined the principle on which the Protocol has been framed, to offer any observations on the manner in which the problem of disarmament has been envisaged in that instrument. Whilst recognizing the existence of very strong feeling which prevails in European countries that no reduction of armaments can be effected without some equivalent substitute being forthcoming from other sources, it is felt that to confine the question of disarmament within the four corners of compulsory arbitration and attendant sanctions is to impose limitations which may prejudice any general agreement being arrived at and thus render the problem insoluble. The development of a spirit of mutual confidence amongst Nations will, it is believed, contribute more effectively to prepare public opinion to accept disarmament than the setting up of the most elaborate machinery for settlement of disputes. Whilst, therefore, sympathizing entirely with the spirit of the Protocol, which was designed with the object of strengthening the League, my Government sees very serious objection to the methods proposed. Apart from being distinctly unacceptable to Australia, for the reasons already given, it will have the effect of still further alienating Nations who are already hesitant about accepting the authority of the League, and will in the present state of International opinion defeat the object which the designers of the Protocol had in view. We are anxious that the authority of the League should grow, but as its authority depends mainly on the spirit which animates its members, we are opposed to what in the circumstances must be regarded as a dangerous attempt to accelerate its growth. The time may come when it will be possible to set up some machinery such as that proposed. We feel, however, that the attempt should not be made until there is no possibility of compromising the achievements that the League has already won. Ends.

5TH MARCH. Private and Personal. Have informed my Prime Minister of the contents of your telegram of 3rd March,* and your telegram of 4th March, Secret.† It may interest you to learn that Press telegrams from London regarding the discussions which are proceeding on the Geneva Protocol have had rather unfortunate effect here. Yesterday, Cape Times published message from their London correspondent containing alleged extracts from memorandum stated to have been presented to the Cabinet by Chamberlain, and which has appeared in Paris edition of the Chicago Tribune. Rumour was current later in the day that the British Government had entered into some form of security pact, and there is danger of unsympathetic atmosphere being created through suspicion that the Dominions are to be presented with fait accompli which it will be difficult for them to reject. My Prime Minister states he attaches no importance to the newspaper report, but there is danger of unenlightened public opinion taking alarm and every care should be taken to avoid this.—ATHLONE.

I desire, however, that it should be noted that the proposed statement of reasons for rejecting the Protocol is no doubt properly confined to the reasons which would affect any great power considering the subject from a general and common-sense point of view and that therefore the reasons for the rejection which are founded upon considerations specially affecting the British Empire are excluded, such, for example, as absolute requirement that our Empire should not be brought into conflict with the United States of America, and such, for another example, as our special naval position and for a further example as the Dominion Immigration Law. As the New Zealand Government was concerned more especially with excluded reasons I wish it noted that my entire concurrence in the proposed statement does not indicate that the statement sets forth all the reasons which have induced the several Governments of the Empire to refuse concurrence in the plan of the Protocol. Ends.

TELEGRAM FROM GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, FOREIGN AND POLITICAL DEPARTMENT, DATED 18TH FEBRUARY, 1925.

P. PROTOCOL for Pacific Settlement of International Disputes. Although we sympathize fully with object of Protocol we consider it to be impracticable and dangerous in its present form at any rate, viewed from the standpoint of India particularly and of the Empire as a whole. The documents we have received show that the latter aspect has been adequately presented already. We, therefore, confine our comments strictly to the former.

It is conceivable that the proposals regarding arbitration, determination of the aggressor and armistice may be effective and workable as between highly organized countries. But India deals with nations which are loosely organized and without the capacity to appreciate or work the involved procedure for delaying or preventing war. India would clearly be handicapped seriously if she were obliged to adhere strictly to rigorous obligations under the Protocol which would not, and, perhaps, could not, be fulfilled by her less civilized antagonist. A tribal belt nominally ours, but responsive, particularly in periods of tension, to Afghan intrigue, lies on the crucial portion of our frontier. Thus it would be impossible to apply to our relations with Afghanistan any such arrangements as are contemplated in the Protocol. India's peculiar position is thrown into clear relief by the Afghan interpretation of an armistice in 1919, when she held back her own army but incited our tribes, which are potentially more formidable than any Afghan army. It would hardly be possible to produce proof, satisfactory to a distant Council unversed in our frontier problems, of insidious hostility in this form. Even if such proof could be produced, it is questionable what control could be exercised by a body of men in Geneva on forces somewhere near our borders when in actual contact. With Afghanistan disregarding the League's orders in such a conflict no one but India would be there to enforce them. Clearly India would have much to risk and nothing to gain under this part of the Protocol.

In examining the question of sanctions we draw the same conclusion. India, through her geographical position and her maintenance of a standing army, is indicated as the nation which would ordinarily, under the Protocol, be called on by the League to bring pressure immediately to bear on a State in the East showing recalcitrance. But the theoretical sympathy entertained for the League by Hindu India would change to strong resentment if an attempt were made by us to place the Army of India under the control of the League of Nations. Moslem opinion in India is already prone to regard the League as a combination of Christian Powers and a potential menace to Islam. We can easily conceive circumstances in which it might be politically imprudent, and even perhaps impossible, to use India's army against a Moslem state in compliance with a call from the League. Turning to the Far East, it is even more apparent how intolerable a burden of potential obligations the Protocol would impose on India. If, owing, say, to encroachments on China, Japan were declared the aggressor, Great Britain and India would be foremost among the signatory States, and perhaps in effect the only ones, on which the Council would call, owing to their "geographical position and particular situation as regards armaments," to apply the sanctions under Article 11. From this test case it appears finally to be demonstrated that a Protocol designed primarily to meet the requirements of the European continent is inapplicable to the East.

There are conceivable circumstances in which it would be possible to use the forces of India to settle a foreign quarrel. But we doubt the justification of meeting the cost out of Indian revenues, as is apparently contemplated in the Protocol, more particularly since, at any rate in the case of countries like Persia and Afghanistan, the anticipation of recovering the cost from the defeated aggressor would be altogether visionary.

India, being faced by a loosely organized Afghanistan, would clearly not be justified in subscribing to any disarmament proposals, Russia standing out.

Prime Minister's confidential messages of 19th December§ and 15th January|| on Geneva Protocol were framed with a view to publication later if desired; but we think it would be necessary to consult other Prime Ministers before these were published in South Africa, since they might like to publish concurrently, as indeed should we. We should not have time, however, to consult other Dominions and obtain replies before to-morrow. Remaining messages on Protocol from this side since 19th December have been marked Secret, and do not seem suitable for publication. As regards messages on question of "security," we feel sure that it would not be in the public interest to publish anything at present. Discussions are of a most delicate and, as yet, of purely preliminary character, and on 5th March the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs indicated in the House of Commons (see my telegram of 6th March¶) that exchange of views between the Allied Governments regarding the German tentative suggestions had been of the slightest, and a much fuller exchange of views was necessary before anything could safely be said; it was obviously undesirable, therefore, that he should enter into any detail in public at this stage.

COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA.

SIR R. GARRAN to MR. E. J. HARDING.

(Received 20th April, 1925.)

[Answered by No. 484.]

DEAR HARDING,

Melbourne, 11th March, 1925.

I AM sorry for the delay in answering your letter of 22nd May, 1924,* relating to the registration with the League of Nations of a Convention between the Commonwealth of Australia and the Federated Malay States for the exchange of Money Orders. I have had some difficulty in ascertaining the full history of the matter.

It seems that the action was set in motion by the receipt in Australia of Colonial Office despatch of 21st August, 1923, Dominions No. 319.† This despatch enclosed a copy of a Circular despatch to the Officers Administering the Governments of the Colonies and Protectorates, the gist of which was that the Foreign Secretary had consulted the Colonial Secretary as to the necessity of the registration with the League of Nations of agreements between Colonial or Protectorate Governments and the Governments of other States for the regulation of postal and money order business; and that it was considered advisable, pending decision as to the amendment of Article 18 of the Covenant, to continue the existing practice of registering all such agreements with the League.

A copy of this despatch was forwarded by the Prime Minister's Department to the Postmaster-General, who observed that the intimation related to Colonies and Protectorates, which were presumably represented on the League by the British Government, and that Australia, being a party to the League, would not come within that category, but asked for advice whether the Commonwealth should register such agreements with the League.

The Prime Minister's Department replied that it was considered advisable that the agreements entered into subsequent to 10th January, 1921, should be registered with the League. The Postmaster-General's Department then forwarded to the Prime Minister's Department, for transmission to the Secretary of State for the Colonies, all the agreements which came within that category, namely, Money Order Agreements with Nauru, Federated Malay States and Dutch East Indies, and a Parcel Post Agreement with the Dutch East Indies.

These documents, for some reason which is not apparent, were then forwarded, not to the Secretary of State for the Colonies, but direct to the Secretary-General of the League. This method of transmission does not seem to have been the outcome of any considered decision as to the proper mode of communication, and need not, I think, be considered as a precedent.

Your letter states that the question had been raised by one of the Colonies whether Postal Conventions between parts of the Empire were to be regarded as falling within the scope of Article 18, and that the Colonial Secretary, after consultation with the Foreign Office, had replied that such agreements were not to be regarded as within Article 18.

* No. 352 in Dominions No. 93. † 40010/23: not printed; it enclosed a copy of a Circular despatch to the Colonies, the purport of which was as stated.

I am unable to find that that decision has been communicated to the Commonwealth, the only despatch on the point being that already referred to, namely, Dominions No. 319, 21st August, 1923,* which recommended provisionally the continuance of the practice of registering such documents.

MR. H. F. BATTERBEE to SIR R. GARRAN.

DEAR GARRAN,

Downing Street, 27th May, 1925.

I AM very much obliged for your letter of the 11th of March† as to registration of certain Conventions by the Commonwealth Government with the League of Nations.

I am sorry that the Colonial Office despatch of 21st August, 1923,* to which you refer, did not draw special attention to the fact that the Circular to the Colonies which it enclosed related (as indicated in paragraph 4) to agreements with foreign States only. The limitation is, however, one to which great importance is attached here, as you will see from the correspondence with the Irish Free State (regarding registration with the League of Nations of the "Articles of Agreement" of 1921) enclosed in the Secretary of State's despatches No. 396 of the 6th of November, 1924,‡ and No. 83 of the 9th of March, 1925.§ Despatches in similar terms went also to Canada, New Zealand, the Union of South Africa, Newfoundland and India, but no remarks have been received; consequently we conclude that the general feeling in the Dominions is in accord with the view of His Majesty's Government that agreements between the various parts of the Empire should not be registered with the League under Article 18 of the Covenant.

If the Commonwealth Government should decide to issue directions that, in future, no arrangements with other parts of the Empire are to be registered with the League, would it be possible to arrange for an official despatch in this sense to be sent by the Governor-General to the Secretary of State.

Perhaps I might add that the view here would be that inter-Imperial, as distinct from international arrangements affecting Nauru (and indeed "C" Mandated Territories generally) fall within the same category, i.e., that it would be preferable not to register them with the League in future.

As to the machinery by which agreements with foreign States should henceforward be registered on behalf of the Commonwealth Government, since my letter of 22nd May, 1924,|| was written the Canadian Government have appointed an advisory officer at Geneva and have let us know that, in future, they would prefer to have any agreements which they may make with foreign countries (such as the "Halibut" Treaty with the United States) registered by him. In these circumstances we are hardly in a position to send an official despatch to the Commonwealth on this subject. But perhaps you would let the Prime Minister's Department know if, and so long as, the Commonwealth Government should wish to fall in with the procedure set out in paragraph 5 of my letter of 22nd May, 1924, the Foreign Office will be happy to carry it out.

Yours sincerely,

H. F. BATTERBEE.

ago. You can let the Dominions Office know that they need anticipate no difficulties in the future in regard to the registration of any agreements we may make with any of the other parts of the Empire. I am quite agreeable to doing what they want, although my own personal opinion is that the Covenant of the League covers every agreement or treaty irrespective of between whom it is made. However, I shall see that in the future inter-Imperial agreements shall not be communicated to the League. The two cases in which treaties of this nature were communicated to the League were due, I believe, to a pure oversight and can be regarded as an accident. As to the Dominions Office request that we send an official despatch in this sense to the Secretary of State, I am averse to doing this. I think that the best thing to do will be to discuss the question at the next Imperial Conference, and I have put it down on my list in order that it may not be overlooked.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE to THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

(No. 81.)

Sir,

Downing Street, 9th March, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Your Excellency's despatch No. 462 of the 16th of December* regarding the registration of the Articles of Agreement of 6th December, 1921, under Article 18 of the Covenant of the League of Nations.

2. The terms of that Article prescribe that no treaty or international engagement "entered into hereafter by any Member of the League" shall be binding until registered. It would accordingly have been the duty of His Majesty's Government, had the Articles of Agreement been a Treaty or international engagement within the meaning of Article 18 of the Covenant, themselves to have registered the Articles of Agreement prior to the date at which the Articles were to come into operation. The fact that this action was not taken indicates that it was the view of His Majesty's Government then, as it is now, that this instrument did not fall within the terms of Article 18. A similar view has been taken by successive British Governments with regard to all instruments intended to regulate their relations with other Governments in the Empire. Both this attitude and the views expressed in Mr. Thomas's despatch of the 4th November,† and the notification to the Secretary-General of the League of Nations of the 27th November‡ are based on the fundamental principle that the relations of the British Members of the League of Nations inter se are essentially different in character from those subsisting between other States Members of the League of Nations.

3. His Majesty's Government doubt whether any advantage is to be gained by prolonging the present correspondence, and they gather from the letter addressed to the League of Nations on behalf of the Government of the Irish Free State on the 18th of December, 1924,§ that your Ministers share this feeling. They have, however, felt bound to make the observations contained in the preceding paragraph in order to remove, as far as possible, any misapprehension as to their attitude, and that of previous Governments, in regard to the scope of Article 18 of the Covenant.

4. His Majesty's Government are communicating a copy of this despatch, and of your despatch of the 16th December, to the Governments of Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, New Zealand, the Union of South Africa and India.

ARMS TRAFFIC CONVENTION.

MEMORANDUM BY MR. W. E. BECKETT (FOREIGN OFFICE).

SIR C. HURST,

THE preamble of the Arms Traffic Convention contains the following list of signatory States: "Brazil, the British Empire, Canada, the Irish Free State and India, Bulgaria. . . ." It will be seen that the component parts of the Empire have been taken out of their alphabetical order and grouped together after the British Empire. This fact and the word "and" between the Irish Free State and India, which concludes the phrase beginning with the British Empire, maintains the form of Imperial unity. Nevertheless a slight change has been made from the precedents of former conventions in that the brackets which have formerly enclosed the component parts of the British Empire and the word "with" before Canada have been omitted. The change was made in response to the urgent representations of Mr. MacWhite, the Free State delegate. His attention was called to the old formula because it appeared in the draft preamble which was presented for the approval of the General Committee of the Conference at its last meeting. In conversation with me he said that he objected to the old formula because it suggested that Canada, the Irish Free State and India did not exercise equal rights with the British Empire (Great Britain) in deciding to conclude a convention and in appointing their plenipotentiaries. He did not at all object to the form of Imperial unity being kept, but stated that nothing must be inserted which suggested that the Irish Free State and Canada were not on an equal footing with Great Britain in these matters. As the preamble was before the committee for approval that morning, he said that he would feel it his duty to make a public protest unless he received a private assurance from the British Empire Delegation that a change would be made. The change, for which he asked, was in fact that which has been made.

* No. 358 in Dominions No. 93. † No. 360 in Dominions No. 93 and No. 486. ‡ No. 357 in Dominions No. 93. § No. 486.

The Obscene Publications Convention was produced to Mr. MacWhite and his attention drawn to the fact that the old formula had been employed in that Convention to which the Irish Free State was a party and which Mr. MacWhite had himself signed. His reply to this was that neither Ireland nor Canada had been represented separately at the negotiation of the Convention but had merely signed subsequently when the Convention had been drawn up in its final form. His point was that, when Dominions took part in the negotiation of a convention, nothing should be inserted which suggested that, in negotiating, their status was inferior to that of Great Britain.

I then spoke to Dr. Riddell, the Canadian representative, about this point. Dr. Riddell has great influence over Mr. MacWhite, and the conciliatory and helpful attitude which Mr. MacWhite had consistently shown at this conference up to this moment had, I think, been partially due to the influence of Dr. Riddell. With regard, however, to the "old formula" Dr. Riddell said that, although Canada had accepted this formula in several previous conventions, and he was not instructed to object to it now, nevertheless he very much desired that the formula should be changed in the way that Mr. MacWhite desired, which he considered effectually to maintain the form of Imperial unity while not suggesting, as he thought the old formula did, an inequality between the various parts of the Empire.

After these conversations I saw Lord Onslow for a few minutes and told him that I thought that the best course would be to comply with the request of Mr. MacWhite, as I thought that the (new) formula did effectually maintain the form of Imperial unity, and Lord Onslow then instructed me to tell Mr. MacWhite and Dr. Riddell that the alteration which they desired would be made, and they both agreed that the alteration could be made by private arrangement with the Secretariat and that it was not necessary to say anything about it in the General Committee.

2. The order, namely, "Canada, the Irish Free State and India," was adopted in accordance with the verbal instructions of the Treaty Department to myself before I left for Geneva. It had nothing to do with the protest of Mr. MacWhite, nor was his protest in any way connected with the respective places of Ireland and India.

3. After the incident which is described in paragraph 1, the preamble came before the Drafting Committee, and I stated that I wished the brackets and the word "with" to be omitted from the old formula. I was asked by the French and United States representatives whether this change of form represented any change of substance and, if so, what? I replied that it did not represent any change of substance whatever. A question was then asked with reference to Article 41 of the Convention which requires the ratification of fourteen powers in order to bring the Convention into force; namely, whether the ratifications of the British Empire, Canada, Ireland and India would constitute four powers within the meaning of that article or only one, or how many? I replied that there was only one power in the British Empire, namely, His Majesty King George V, and that if he ratified the Convention first of all in respect of Canada, such ratification would constitute one power under Article 41. If he were then subsequently to ratify in respect of the Irish Free State and of India, he would still remain only one power under Article 41 and not three. The Committee stated that they would take note of what I had said.

MEMORANDUM BY SIR C. J. B. HURST (FOREIGN OFFICE).

SIR W. TYRRELL,

THE position at Geneva as regards the relationship between the Mother Country and the Dominions in all League of Nations matters has for some time been very precarious, and the changes now made in the Arms Traffic Convention render it positively dangerous for the future of Imperial unity.

If any League organ were entitled to intervene in matters between one part of the Empire and another part, the unity of the Empire would be at an end: relations between those two parts would have ceased to be internal questions of the Empire. The fact that any outside body such as the League was entitled to intervene could only be due to the fact that the two parts of the Empire were separate political units.

Consciously or unconsciously (I have never known which) the framers of the Covenant avoided this consequence by making the whole British Empire a Member of the League and making the self-governing Dominions and India separate Members. Great Britain is not a Member at all, except so far as she is a part of the Empire. The Dominions and India secure double representation in that they are Members in their own right as well as parts of the Empire. The Membership is expressed as follows in the Covenant:—

"Article I.—The original Members of the League of Nations shall be those of the Signatories which are named in the Annex to this Covenant. . ."

Annex.

Belgium.

British Empire.

Canada.

Australia.

South Africa.

New Zealand.

India.

It is upon the slender basis of the arrangement of the names in the Annex to the Covenant that our case rests for maintaining that no organ of the League shall intervene in any dispute between two parts of the Empire, because any question between two parts of the Empire must necessarily be a question between two parts of one and the same Member of the League, namely, the British Empire, and, therefore, covered by the phrase in paragraph 8 of Article 15 of the Covenant which deprives the Council of any power to make recommendations as to the settlement of disputes arising out of a matter which by international law is solely within its domestic jurisdiction. The internal affairs of a sovereign state, not affecting other sovereign states, must necessarily be matters solely within its domestic jurisdiction.

The difficulty of applying this principle in the case of a convention negotiated under the auspices of the League and in which one or more of the Dominions participates, as well as a delegation from London acting in the name of the Empire, has always been considerable, but hitherto the difficulty has been overcome by the use of appropriate phraseology in the head and tail of the convention, more particularly as regards the way in which the parties to the convention were enumerated. The formula adopted ought not merely to be capable of bearing the correct interpretation, but ought to bear it obviously when examined critically by any person who considers it. The formula adopted hitherto has, I think, complied with this latter requirement, i.e., it was impossible for anybody who examined the wording intelligently to say that it did not cover the special position which the British Empire and its Dominions must enjoy under the League Covenant. I do not think that the formula now substituted for that previously employed complies with this condition. I do not say it is not capable of bearing the correct interpretation, but our position is now reduced to depending on what appears to be a superfluous "and" and in a break in the alphabetical order of the parties. To make matters worse, in the Final Act of this Conference which enumerates the Governments participating in the Conference, the British Empire has been separated from the Dominions and the latter appear in their correct alphabetical order.

It may be that I am mistaken in thinking that the new formula is more dangerous than the old, but our position is peculiar in this respect. Never since the Covenant was framed in 1919 has any explanation been afforded to the Dominion Governments as to our interpretation of the Covenant and the deductions which we drew from the arrangement of the names in the Annex, and it is clear on reading Mr. Beckett's memorandum that the reason why the Irish objected to the formula hitherto employed was because they thought that it implied some subordination of the Irish Government to that of Great Britain and have never understood that Great Britain is not a Member of the League of Nations at all and stands in precisely the same relation to the British Empire that the Irish Free State does itself (see the passages which I have marked on pages 1 and 2). It is more than probable that the Dominions would accept with some reluctance the deductions which we hold to be the necessary consequences of the arrangement of the Powers in the Covenant, and the longer that time drifts on the more will that reluctance increase and the more justification there will be for complaints by the Dominions at the absence of any clearing up of the situation as between the Mother Country and the Dominions. It would have been far easier to secure it before the Irish Free State came in than it is now, but the new formula introduced at Geneva, coupled with the reasons which the Irish representative gave for objecting to the old formula, render it more than ever urgent that the situation should be cleared up with the Dominions.

It may be, of course, that there are compelling reasons of Imperial policy which render it necessary that the question should be allowed to drift, but I feel bound to put on record my anxieties as to the present situation in case it may not be realized by the responsible Ministers how very slender a basis our claims rest upon and how unaware of the legal basis of our claims the Dominions Governments appear to be.

I should not in the least despair of the future of the Empire even if the matter were thrashed out with the Dominion representatives and we were unable to induce them to take the same view as we do of the correct interpretation of the Covenant of the League, because I do not believe that they would object to an amendment of the Annex, introducing the words "Great Britain" at the head of the list of Dominions under the word "British Empire." The cause of the Dominion touchiness on the subject is the fact that they regard the unit which goes to Geneva in the name of the British Empire as really being Great Britain, and if it could be so arranged that the unit was in theory Great Britain as well as in fact and that it claimed no ostensible superiority over the Dominions and admitted that it stood in the same relation to the Empire as they do, I believe the Dominions would accept the situation cheerfully.

This solution would not be wholly satisfactory, because Great Britain is a very inaccurate name by which to describe the whole of the Empire minus the Dominions and India. What we should want would be some name which would accurately describe it. It might be necessary to coin a phrase.

However, my immediate purpose in writing as I have written is to place on record the dangers of the present situation so as to make sure that if no action is taken it is because there are thought to be over-riding reasons in favour of inaction.

SIR C. T. DAVIS (DOMINIONS OFFICE) to SIR C. J. B. HURST (FOREIGN OFFICE).

MY DEAR HURST,

Downing Street, 3rd December, 1925.

I RETURN the Foreign Office file containing your memorandum of the 4th of July* with regard to the position of the British Empire under Conventions negotiated under League of Nations auspices, which was referred by Mr. Chamberlain to Mr. Amery for his views.

* No. 490.

Mr. Amery has carefully considered the questions raised and I enclose a memorandum which he has asked me to send to you as embodying his views.

You will notice that at the beginning of our memorandum there is a reference to the memorandum circulated by Sir Robert Borden to the British Empire Delegation at the Paris Peace Conference with reference to the position of the Dominions in relation to the Peace Treaties. The minutes of the British Empire Delegation do not disclose why Sir Robert Borden's suggestion as to the wording of the preamble to the Treaty of Versailles was not followed in its entirety. Have you any recollection of what happened on this point?

As regards the suggestion at the end of our memorandum that steps should be taken with a view to altering the present method of setting out in the preambles of League Conventions, etc., the various parts of the Empire which are parties to the Conventions, I do not know whether you have seen a letter from the Secretary-General of the League of the 21st August (a copy of which was sent to us in Foreign Office letter of the 4th September*) stating that "the Secretariat would be very glad to consider and give effect as far as possible to any modifications which the British Government might wish to suggest in the manner in which the participation of the British Empire and its various parts in Conventions concluded under the auspices of the League of Nations is stated in the Treaty Series." If the suggestion at the end of our memorandum proves acceptable, the Secretary-General's letter might afford an opportunity for taking up the point with the League Secretariat.

By the way, the Foreign Office recently raised no objection to a proposal by the Customs that, when circulating to the representatives of Foreign countries the documents referred to in Articles 4 and 5 of the Customs Formalities Convention in accordance with Article 6 of the Convention, they should also send the same documents to the High Commissioners for the participating Dominions with a covering note "Application of the International Convention relating to the simplification of Customs formalities." (See Foreign Office letter to Customs of the 12th October.†) We have taken up this point with the Customs, and have sent a copy of the correspondence to the Foreign Office.

The Report of the Sixth Committee of the Fourth Assembly of the League of Nations (The application of the Irish Free State for membership of the League) is of some interest in connexion with the general question raised in your memorandum, and you might like to look at it again. We included it in the documents about the boundary between the Irish Free State and Northern Ireland laid before Parliament last year. Cmd. 2264 (pp. 51-3).

Yours sincerely,
C. T. DAVIS.

Enclosure in No. 491.

MEMORANDUM.

THE grouping adopted in the annex to the Covenant was probably intended to follow that adopted in the list of plenipotentiaries in the preamble to the Treaty of Peace. A copy of the memorandum circulated by Sir Robert Borden to the British Empire Delegation on the 12th March, 1919, with reference to the position of the Dominions in relation to the Peace Treaties is appended. It will be observed that it was proposed in the memorandum that, while "the usual recital of Heads of States in the preamble needs no alteration whatever, since the Dominions are adequately included in the present formal description of the King," there should be a general heading "The British Empire" with sub-headings "United Kingdom," "the Dominion of Canada," etc. The proposal to have a sub-heading "United Kingdom" was not adopted and the representatives of His Majesty's Government (whose full powers were general) signed without any such territorial limitation as was attached to the signatures of the Plenipotentiaries of the Dominions and India (whose full powers were limited to the particular territories for which they signed). Except on this point the procedure advocated in Sir Robert Borden's memorandum was followed. It will be seen from the memorandum that the objects which it was desired to secure were (1) to "give suitable recognition to the part played at the Peace Table by the British Commonwealth as a whole and at the same time record the status attained there by the Dominions" and (2) in order that "the settlements reached should be presented at once to the world in the character of universally accepted agreements so far as this is consistent with the constitution of each State represented."

The procedure was thus intended to secure the international recognition of the status of the Dominions, without any idea of impairing the essential unity of the Empire. But on the signature of the Peace Treaty and for some time afterwards there was a tendency to emphasize the international aspect at the expense of the domestic. This tendency was not confined to the Dominions. Thus, in connexion with the International Air Convention, which provided that the British Dominions were to be deemed to be States for the purposes of the Convention, questions arose whether, if Canada stood out of the Convention, as at one time seemed possible, Canadian aircraft would be debarred, as being the aircraft of a non-contracting state, from flying over parts of the British Empire which were bound by the Convention and also whether nationals of Canada would be debarred from owning aircraft registered in such other parts of the Empire. Both semi-officially and officially, the Foreign Office gave indications of a view that both questions should be answered in the affirmative. Thus in reply to a letter from the Colonial Office of the 12th May, 1921,* in which it was pointed out that the Canadian Nationals Bill might "have some bearing, in view of the position of the Dominions as 'States' under the Air Convention, on the question whether 'nationals' of one of the British 'States' can own aircraft registered in another British 'State,'" the Foreign Office replied, in a letter of the 6th June, 1921†: "As regards the position of Canada under the Air Convention, His Lordship does not see what bearing the Bill can have other than to provide an absolute definition of those persons who are exclusively entitled to own aircraft in Canada and not entitled to own them in the territory of any of the other States signatories of the Convention." The reply of the Colonial Office of the 15th September, 1921,‡ was as follows: "The last paragraph of your letter would appear to be based on the view that the British States under the Air Convention are contracting States inter se. This view is not being adopted in this country. For example, all British subjects will be entitled to own aircraft registered in the United Kingdom, and it is not proposed, in the event (which has now again become possible) of Canada having to stand out of the Convention, to regard Canadian aircraft as being debarred from flying over the British Islands under Article V." In the end Canada accepted the Convention, in common with the rest of the Empire, so that the contingency contemplated by the first question did not eventuate. As regards the second question, the Canadian legislation proceeded on the same basis as our own by regarding all British subjects as qualified to own aircraft registered in Canada.

Again the Statute establishing the Permanent Court of International Justice contained provisions (Article 4) for the drawing up of lists of candidates for election as judges of the Court "in the case of members of the League of Nations not represented in the Permanent Court of Arbitration." These provisions were adopted with the object inter alia of enabling the Dominions to set up their own national groups for the purpose of nominating their own candidates. It was thus assumed that the Dominions were Members of the League not represented in the Permanent Court of Arbitration, though in actual fact Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, while Chief Justice of Canada, was for a number of years a member of the British Section of the Court and actually sat in that capacity as a Member of the North American Fisheries Tribunal.

When the draft Conventions on Freedom of Transit were under discussion early in 1921 the question was raised, with particular reference to their possible effect on certain preferential railway arrangements in force between the Union of South Africa and Rhodesia, whether, in view of the fact that the Conventions would be agreements between the Members of the League, their provisions could be regarded as applying as between the various parts of the Empire inter se. The view was then expressed on behalf of the Colonial Office that it was vital in the interests of Imperial unity that international instruments defining the relations of the members of the League inter se should not be regarded as applying between the British members of the League, but that the ordinary and established rule that all arrangements between one part of the Empire and another are matters of domestic interest should be maintained. The Foreign Office replied in a letter of the 19th February, 1921,* that while they were ready to support this view "it is becoming increasingly difficult to persuade Foreign Governments that such a view is consistent with the separate status claimed on other occasions by the Dominions as members of the League of Nations."

* No. 48 in Dominions No. 66. † No. 50 in Dominions No. 66. ‡ No. 53 in Dominions No. 66.

Effect was given in the Transit Conventions to the view referred to in the preceding paragraph in two ways (1) by dividing each of the draft Conventions into two parts (a) a covering Convention of the ordinary type between "High Contracting Parties" containing the usual statements as to ratification, denunciation, etc. (as to the importance of this, reference may be made to the memorandum circulated by Sir Robert Borden which drew attention to the fact that "the Crown is the supreme executive in the United Kingdom and in all the Dominions"); and (b) a Statute annexed thereto containing the whole of the operative provisions with regard to the special subject matter, expressed as an agreement between "Contracting States," i.e., between the various members of the League of Nations. (2) By the insertion in the Statutes of the following provision: "It is understood that this Statute must not be interpreted as regulating in any way rights and obligations inter se of territories forming part, or placed under the protection of, the same sovereign State, whether or not these territories are individually members of the League of Nations." At the same time, in the list of contracting States which forms the heading of the Convention, the British Empire was described by the formula "the British Empire (with New Zealand and India)."

The first of the two methods mentioned in the preceding paragraph has been followed subsequently in one or two cases of Conventions negotiated under the auspices of the League, but not in others. In all cases, however, such Conventions have taken the form of Conventions between Heads of States, and the Plenipotentiaries signing on behalf of His Majesty have been set out in the preamble to the Convention in the manner adopted in the preamble to the Treaty of Versailles.

The second method also has been adopted in a number of cases, but not invariably. In the case of the Dangerous Drugs Convention negotiated in 1924 at Geneva, the clause was deliberately omitted, because the only provisions in the Convention to which it could have had any application were those describing the régime for shipments of drugs from one country to another and the insertion of the clause would have suggested that it was not the intention of His Majesty's Government to apply the system to shipments to other parts of the Empire, whereas the whole object of the system under consideration was the universal control of passage of the substances from one country to another, the political relationship between the countries not being in point at all.

The Irish Free State Government, by their action in registering with the League, under Article 18 of the Covenant the Articles of Agreement of the 6th December, 1921, raised the general question of the applicability of the Covenant and of Conventions negotiated under the auspices of the League as between the various parts of the Empire, and it became necessary then to enunciate definitely the view of His Majesty's Government that the relations of the British members of the League of Nations inter se are essentially different in character from those subsisting between other States members of the League and that neither the Covenant nor Treaties negotiated under its auspices could be regarded as regulating the relations inter se of the various parts of the Empire.

The correspondence with the Irish Free State was communicated to the other Dominion Governments and none of them has questioned the views expressed by His Majesty's Government. There is indeed a special reason why they should not do so.

In the course of the discussion of the Geneva Protocol, the Dominion Governments showed themselves most determined to maintain the principle of the exclusion from the purview of the League, of matters of domestic jurisdiction and in particular of the question of oriental immigration. It is accordingly unlikely that they would wish to adopt the view that the relations between different parts of the Empire are a proper subject for consideration by organs of the League, seeing that this renders it possible for the question of Indian immigration into, or Indian disabilities in, the Dominions to be brought before the League.

* 8450/21: not printed; its substance was as described above.

When the draft Arms Traffic Convention was under discussion it was at first thought unnecessary to raise the question of inter-Imperial trade except by proposing the insertion of a clause designed to exclude from the provisions of the Convention shipments for the armed forces of the High Contracting Parties wherever situate. The question of inter-Imperial trade was, however, directly raised at the Arms Traffic Conference by an amendment proposed by the Netherlands Delegate to the effect that the provisions of the Convention should not apply to the despatch of arms from and to territories forming part of or placed under the protection of one and the same sovereign State. After considerable discussion at the Legal Committee of the Conference, it was decided not to incorporate this amendment in the text of the Convention, but to record in the proceedings of the Conference a definite statement that the general principle underlying it "forms the basis of all international Conventions." Various alterations were also made in the text of the Convention with a view to differentiating inter-Empire trade from trade between foreign countries, e.g., the use of the expression "consignments" rather than "exports" to describe shipments from one part of the Empire to another. From this point of view the Convention marks a distinct advance and leaves the main question in a most satisfactory position. Nothing in fact could have been more welcome than to have the principle for which His Majesty's Government contended in the correspondence with the Irish Free State about the registration of the Articles of Agreement asserted in this fashion in the proceedings of an International Conference. We have the principle now laid down in terms which supply a decisive answer to all doubts that may be raised in the future. Incidentally the pronouncement of the Conference frees us from the only embarrassment which we felt in the correspondence with the Irish Free State. In that correspondence we had to bear in mind, not only that the "Barcelona" inter-Imperial Clause had not been inserted in League Conventions in every case, but also the possibility that it might be argued that the insertion of such a clause was evidence that in its absence international Conventions would apply between the various British Members of the League inter se.

Sir Cecil Hurst finds difficulty with regard to the fact (a) that in the Preamble to the Arms Traffic Convention the wording adopted is . . . "British Empire, Canada, the Irish Free State and India," whereas according to the plan adopted for Barcelona and subsequently the wording would have been "British Empire with Canada, etc."; (b) that in the preamble to the Final Act and in the list of signatories the names of the Dominions and India appear alphabetically with those of foreign countries, and the signatures are arranged accordingly.

As regards the first point, the advantage of the formula "British Empire with" has not been altogether understood, especially as, in signing Conventions where the formula has been used, the representatives of His Majesty's Government have had to declare on every occasion either that their signatures do not bind the Dominions or bind only Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

As to the second point, it is agreed that the procedure adopted for the Final Act of the Arms Traffic Conference is not desirable. But the usual grouping was observed in the Convention itself, both in the Preamble and in the list of signatures, and also in the Preamble of the Industrial Property Convention, 1925, though in the case of the latter the Dominion representatives were insistent on an alphabetical order of signatures, and the chief British delegate was unable to persuade them to agree to the usual practice.

As regards the question of an amendment to the Annex to the Covenant such as Sir C. Hurst suggests, it is necessary first to consider what would be its effect on the position of the British Empire generally in relation to the League. When the draft of the Covenant of the League of Nations was being discussed by the British Empire Delegation in Paris (26th Minutes) it was pointed out that the wording of the draft "the Council shall consist of representatives of the United States of America, of the British Empire, of France, of Italy, and of Japan, together with representatives of four other States which are members of the League" would render the Dominions ineligible for election to the Council since the Dominions could not be regarded as States "other" than the British Empire, and it was, therefore, agreed that the words "States which are" should be omitted and that the words "Member of the League" should be used throughout the Covenant instead of the word "State." (The actual wording of Article 4 of the Covenant in its final form was "the Council shall consist of representatives of the principal allied and associated powers together with representatives of four other members of the League.") But even this alteration of the wording was not considered sufficient to safeguard the position of the Dominions and an assurance, dated the 6th May, 1919, was obtained from M. Clemenceau, Mr. Wilson and Mr. Lloyd George in the following terms: "The question having been raised as to the meaning of Article 4 of the League of Nations Covenant we have been requested by Sir Robert Borden to state whether we concur in his view that, upon the true construction of the first and second paragraphs of that Article, representatives of the self-governing Dominions of the British Empire may be selected or named as members of the Council. We have no hesitation in expressing our entire concurrence in this view. If there were any doubt it would be entirely removed by the fact that the Articles of the Covenant are not subject to a narrow or technical construction."

It follows from the wording of Article 4 of the Covenant and the preamble to the Treaty of Versailles that at present the British representative on the Council is the representative of "the British Empire." Two interpretations of this position have been expressed. In 1920 on the occasion of the first meeting of the Council of the League, the Canadian Government* drew attention to the fact that they had not been consulted as to the selection of the representative of the British Empire on the Council and expressed the opinion that this appointment should not be made until the various Governments of the Empire had been consulted. On the other hand, Mr. Hughes and General Smuts† had expressed the view that the "British Empire" in this connexion meant only the United Kingdom and a somewhat similar view was expressed later on behalf of the Canadian Government in the Canadian Parliament on the occasion of the debate on the Canadian National Bill.‡ Lord Milner regarded this question as an insoluble problem and accordingly no reply was returned to the Canadian Government.

In actual fact the British representative is at present appointed by His Majesty's Government and this carries with it the corollary that it is sufficient if he takes his instructions from His Majesty's Government and speaks only in their name. As the questions coming before the Council for the most part relate only to European affairs, this arrangement has obvious advantages. At the same time, if occasion demands a pronouncement of the views of the other Governments of the Empire as well as those of His Majesty's Government, the fact that the British representative is the representative of the British Empire and not merely of Great Britain, renders it possible for him to speak on behalf of those Governments also, though he cannot, of course, do this (still less commit them) without their express authority. His position in this respect is in fact somewhat analogous to that occupied in the ordinary conduct of foreign relations by the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, who similarly cannot speak on behalf of the Dominions without their consent.

As regards the position at the Assembly where the Dominions are separately represented it should be noted that at a Meeting of the British Empire Delegations at the recent Assembly on the 23rd September, Mr. Amery stated that the representatives at Assemblies at Geneva who appeared in the name "British Empire" were representatives of Great Britain and the Dependencies, and laid no claim to represent the Dominions and India which were represented separately.

Lastly, it should be observed that in connexion with the Nauru mandate, which is entrusted to the "British Empire," the Sixth Committee of the Third Assembly in 1922 put on record that "The British Empire (the unit responsible for the Nauru mandate) consists of Great Britain together with a number of territories all owing a common allegiance but distinct in their respective powers of government, and the mandatory authority of the British Empire can therefore only be exercised by some one or more of the several governments of the territories composing the Empire. If, for the statement in the Report (i.e., the Report of the Permanent Mandates Commission at its Session of August, 1922) that the British Empire "had transferred the responsibility for the administration of the Island of Nauru to Great Britain, Australia and New Zealand," there were substituted a statement that "The British Empire had provided for the administration of the Island of Nauru by Great Britain, Australia and New Zealand" the position would be defined with greater precision and exactitude."

* See Enclosure in No. 25 in Dominions No. 76. † See Nos. 5 and 3 in Dominions No. 76.

If the Covenant were amended so that the British Empire would no longer be a single Member of the League but could only be regarded as the sum of seven distinct Members, it would seem to follow that the representative of the British Empire on the Council would, on every occasion, have to be appointed as a result of consultation between the Governments of all those Members and receive his instructions on all matters coming before the Council from all of them. Such a procedure, however desirable in theory, would involve considerable complication, and is not likely under present conditions to meet with support from the Dominion Governments.

It may be added that:—

(1) The suggested amendment could presumably only be effected by the adoption of the usual procedure followed in the case of amendments to the Covenant. This would involve discussion in the Assembly of the League of questions of the relations of the various parts of the Empire, which it is our object to avoid.

(2) The adoption of the suggestion would still leave unsolved the question which arose with the United States whether, in the event of a dispute between a foreign Power and one part of the Empire being brought before the Assembly under Article 15 of the Covenant, the votes of the other parts of the Empire could be given in support of the part of the Empire immediately affected.

In all the circumstances, it would seem preferable, instead of raising with the Dominions the question of amending the Annex to the Covenant referred to in Sir Cecil Hurst's minute, to consider what would be the most satisfactory method of setting out in the preambles to League Conventions, in the lists of signatures, and in any other documents where the question arises, the various parts of the Empire which are parties to the Conventions. It is suggested that the best course would be to retain the general title "British Empire" with sub-titles "Great Britain" (or Great Britain and Northern Ireland) "Canada . . ." which would appear to be consistent with the description of the "British Empire" in the Report of the Sixth Committee of the 1922 Assembly above quoted and at the same time not inconsistent with the actual facts as to the representation of the British Empire at the Council and Assembly as explained above. It is true that the wording suggested would leave out not only the Colonies not possessing responsible Government, Protectorates and Territories mandated to this country, but also Newfoundland and Southern Rhodesia, which are self-governing, but it is not thought that any difficulty would arise in practice as it is the invariable procedure to insert in Conventions of the kind now in question an Article dealing with the position in relation to the Convention of Colonies, oversea possessions, protectorates, etc., and the position of the territories referred to will always be made clear in this connexion. Moreover, it may be observed that according to the present wording the sub-titles "Australia," "South Africa," and "New Zealand" cover the territories respectively mandated to these Dominions and, in the case of Australia, Papua and Norfolk Island also. The same, of course, is true with regard to foreign countries having oversea possessions.

APPENDIX.

BRITISH EMPIRE DELEGATION. THE DOMINIONS AS PARTIES AND SIGNATORIES TO THE VARIOUS PEACE TREATIES.

Memorandum circulated by Sir Robert Borden on behalf of the Dominion Prime Ministers.

(1) THE Dominion Prime Ministers, after careful consideration, have reached the conclusion that all the treaties and conventions resulting from the Peace Conference should be so drafted as to enable the Dominions to become Parties and Signatories thereto. This procedure will give suitable recognition to the part played at the Peace Table by the British Commonwealth as a whole and will at the same time record the status attained there by the Dominions.

(2) The procedure is in consonance with the principles of constitutional government that obtain throughout the Empire. The Crown is the supreme executive in the United Kingdom and in all the Dominions, but it acts on the advice of different Ministries within different constitutional units; and under Resolution IX of the Imperial War Conference, 1917, the organization of the Empire is to be based upon equality of nationhood.

(3) Having regard to the high objects of the Peace Conference, it is also desirable that the settlements reached should be presented at once to the world in the character of universally accepted agreements, so far as this is consistent with the constitution of each State represented. This object would not be achieved if the practice heretofore followed of merely inserting in the body of the convention an express reservation providing for the adhesion of the Dominions were adopted in these treaties; and the Dominions would not wish to give even the appearance of weakening this character of the peace.

(4) On the constitutional point, it is assumed that each treaty or convention will include clauses providing for ratification similar to those in the Hague Convention of 1907. Such clauses will, under the procedure proposed, have the effect of reserving to the Dominion Governments and legislatures the same power of review as is provided in the case of other contracting parties.

(5) It is conceived that this proposal can be carried out with but slight alterations of previous treaty forms. Thus:—

(a) The usual recital of Heads of States in the Preamble needs no alteration whatever, since the Dominions are adequately included in the present formal description of the King, namely, "His Majesty the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas, Emperor of India."

(b) The recital in the Preamble of the names of the Plenipotentiaries appointed by the High Contracting Parties for the purpose of concluding the treaty would include the names of the Dominion Plenipotentiaries immediately after the names of the Plenipotentiaries appointed by the United Kingdom. Under the general heading "The British Empire" the sub-headings "the United Kingdom," "the Dominion of Canada," "The Commonwealth of Australia," "the Union of South Africa," etc., would be used as headings to distinguish the various plenipotentiaries.

(c) It would then follow that the Dominion Plenipotentiaries would sign according to the same scheme.

(6) The Dominion Prime Ministers consider, therefore, that it should be made an instruction to the British member of the Drafting Commission of the Peace Conference that all treaties should be drawn according to the above proposal.

FROM a conversation between Mr. Chamberlain and the German Ambassador 30th January, it appears unlikely that anything will come in the near future of the German proposal for a Security Pact recently put forward in very vague terms in the Press and elsewhere. It was agreed that it was of little practical use to discuss a pact between Germany and France until the attitude of His Majesty's Government towards French security had been defined and the fate of the Geneva Protocol settled. Mr. Chamberlain, however, assured the German Ambassador that he welcomed the evidence which the German suggestion had afforded that the German Government appreciated the reality of French fears and were spontaneously considering means of allaying them. Mr. Chamberlain also suggested that Germany, by joining the League, would give a significant indication of her desire for this and of her readiness to accept the existing constitution of Europe. He could not understand Germany's refusal of the offer of a seat on the Council of the League of Nations merely on the ground that she could not accept the obligations of Article 16 of the Covenant. Please inform your Prime Minister.—AMERY.

5TH MARCH. Secret. My telegram of 4th February* stated that it appeared unlikely that anything would come in the near future of the German proposal for a Security Pact recently put forward in very vague terms in the Press and elsewhere. That proposal has, however, in the last few days been repeated to Paris, Brussels and Rome, as well as to ourselves, in the form of a definite declaration of Germany's willingness to enter into a Pact to guarantee the existing boundary line between Germany on the one side and France and Belgium on the other. It is reported in the French Press that M. Herriot dealt with the question at length in the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee on the 27th February, and stated that the moment did not seem far distant when Germany would make proposals which the French Government could only accept within the strict limits of the Treaty of Versailles. French Press comment is suspicious and the attitude of the French and Belgium Governments is not as yet clearly defined, but there are some indications that responsible men begin to realize how materially the general peace of Europe could be fortified, and their own security enhanced, if they could enter into a formal and mutual pact with Germany for maintaining their common frontier inviolable against aggression from any quarter. Italy is, of course, less directly interested but the German overture seems to be thought worthy of serious consideration in Rome. Mr. Chamberlain will be seeing M. Herriot in Paris on his way to Geneva and will then endeavour to ascertain more precisely how far the French Government are prepared to take the matter up seriously.

The possibility of a solution of the problem of security in Europe being found on the lines of such a mutual pact is hinted at in the concluding section of the proposed statement to be made to the League of Nations with reference to the Geneva Protocol.

Please inform your Prime Minister.—AMERY.

6TH MARCH. My telegram of 5th March, Secret.† Copies of debate in House of Commons last night will be sent by mail as soon as possible. In connexion with German proposals for Security Pact Foreign Secretary said that exchange of views between Allied Governments had so far been of the slightest, and that it was necessary for a much more complete exchange of views and a much closer examination of the purport and the possibility of the German proposals to take place before he could usefully or safely add anything more on the subject. Foreign Secretary intimated, however, that His Majesty's Government attach the highest importance to German proposals and mean to give them their most serious consideration in hope that in this voluntary movement of the German Government there may be found a passage which will lead us away from the unhappy past to a better and more friendly future. If such a consummation could be reached by and with our help, and if our help were required to bring it into being, he was sure that that help as well as good will of this country would not be lacking. Foreign Secretary quoted recent speech by Lord Grey emphasizing importance of British co-operation in the work of pacifying Europe and saying that it was for British public opinion to recognize that the one thing it could do to help European situation was to make some firm offer to promote European security in which British Empire could join. Foreign Secretary said that whilst it was far too early for him to have formed in his own mind, much less to express, any idea of the shape which our co-operation should take it was in spirit of Lord Grey's words that His Majesty's Government would approach whole consideration of subject.

Later on in this speech Foreign Secretary said that it was not in a spirit of indifference to Europe and its misfortunates that we had exercised, when it rested with us alone in the United Kingdom, our mission and our influence in the world, nor was it in that spirit of selfish and, at the same time, short-sighted isolation that we should exercise them now when we speak in consultation with the free self-governing Dominions of a great Empire.

Foreign Secretary added that his object when at Paris to-day and at Geneva next week would be, not to open negotiations for any particular agreement nor to propound any plan, but to exchange views and gather information.

Please inform your Prime Minister.—AMERY.

8TH MARCH. Secret. My telegram 5th March, Secret.* Following summary of facts connected with recent German overtures has been prepared in explanation of statements on subject in Foreign Secretary's speech House of Commons 5th March. Please communicate to your Prime Minister explaining that it is for most part extracted from Foreign Office prints, included amongst papers sent by mail to Dominions from 4th February onwards.

Begins: On the 20th January, 1925, the Permanent Head of the German Foreign Office handed to Lord D'Abernon a memorandum on the question of security. It was strictly confidential and had not even been discussed by the new German Cabinet.

The memorandum began by saying that, as the questions of disarmament and the evacuation of the Cologne zone, then under discussion, were frequently considered in France from the standpoint of security, it would probably be easier, and the German Government were prepared, to find a solution for them by combining them with an agreement of a general nature, the object of which would be to secure peace between Germany and France.

The memorandum then suggested as examples of arrangements that might be come to:—

1. A mutual undertaking not to go to war, e.g., the Powers interested in the Rhine, above all England, France, Italy and Germany, would enter into a solemn obligation for a lengthy period (to be eventually defined more specifically) vis-à-vis the United States of America, as trustee, not to wage war against a contracting State.

* No. 498.

2. A comprehensive Arbitration Treaty between the same States providing for the peaceful settlement of juridical and political conflicts. Analogous arbitration treaties to be concluded by Germany with all other States as well.

3. A Rhineland Pact.—(a) Guaranteeing the existing territorial status of the Rhine, e.g., the interested States would bind themselves reciprocally to observe the inviolability of the existing territorial status on the Rhine, to guarantee both jointly and individually the fulfilment of this obligation and to regard any action running counter to the obligation as affecting them jointly and individually.

(b) Guaranteeing the fulfilment of the obligation to demilitarize the Rhineland, which Germany had undertaken in Articles 42 and 43 of the Treaty of Versailles.

The above examples were not held to exhaust the possibilities, but were given by way of illustration.

Schubert emphasized this in handing the memorandum to Lord D'Abernon. The German Government, he said, were prepared to discuss and negotiate any combination of proposals which would bring about a real feeling of security and pacification, and were anxious to move rapidly in the matter.

A few days later Schubert explained to Lord D'Abernon that the arbitration treaties which Germany had in mind as models were the German-Swiss Treaty of 3rd December, 1921, and the German-Swedish Treaty of 29th August, 1924. Under these treaties all disputes of whatsoever nature which are impossible of settlement within a reasonable time through diplomatic channels are submitted either to tribunals of arbitration or of conciliation. Legal questions are submitted to an arbitral tribunal which makes an award definitely binding upon the parties. Political questions are submitted to a conciliation board which does not make a definitive binding award, but the parties are pledged to declare within a limited period of time whether they accept the conciliation proposals. Schubert emphasized the fact that Germany's readiness to sign arbitration treaties extended to all Powers. It would include notably those Powers whose frontiers touched Germany on the east.

On 30th January Mr. Chamberlain discussed the German memorandum of 20th January with the German Ambassador. He first explained that he could not receive confidential proposals from the German Government unless he was at liberty to mention them to the French Government. While refusing to commit himself to the principle of the proposal, Mr. Chamberlain said that he did not exclude the idea at the proper time of an agreement between Germany and France or Germany and the Allies giving a mutual guarantee of the situation established by the peace treaties on their common frontiers. Finally, he indicated that the best evidence of a desire for peace and of a readiness to accept the existing constitution of Europe would be for Germany to join the League of Nations.

On the same day Mr. Chamberlain informed the French Ambassador of the German overtures and his reply to them. He pointed out particularly that the German Government appeared to be willing to consider some sort of arrangement on the east as well as on the west of Germany.

The next move by the German Government was to communicate secretly to Herriot 9th February a memorandum which only differed from that submitted to His Majesty's Government in that there was no suggestion that an agreement on the security question should be combined with the solution of the questions of disarmament and the evacuation of Cologne, and a sentence was added to the effect that the proposed Security Pact might be so drafted that it could prepare the way for, or be absorbed by, a world convention to include all States on the lines of the Geneva Protocol.

In subsequent verbal discussions the German Ambassador intimated that Germany was prepared to consider the conclusion of arbitration treaties not only with the Powers interested in the Rhine, but with Poland and Czechoslovakia also; and while the eastern frontier could not be guaranteed in the same manner as that of the west, a way out might be found by reference to Article 19 of the Covenant of the League of Nations, thus obviating all idea of a solution by force.

Herriot's reply to the German memorandum was not unsympathetic, but was non-committal.

The German proposals were discussed by Mr. Chamberlain with the French and Belgian Ambassadors on 24th and 26th of February respectively. To both Ambassadors he laid stress on the significance of Germany's apparent willingness to come to a settlement in the east as well as in the west, and on the importance of taking whatever steps were possible to link up Germany with the Western European Powers and preventing her from forming an anti-Western bloc with Russia.

The French Ambassador, while indicating that Herriot attached great importance to the German proposals, expressed the view that he would have to proceed cautiously since French public opinion in general was not yet prepared for any sort of pact with Germany. De Fleuriau thought it of great consequence that an arrangement should first be made between France, Belgium and Great Britain.

Germany's attitude towards the eastern frontier was reported about this time to have been defined by Stresemann to the French Ambassador at Berlin as follows:—Germany recognizes the utility of Poland as a buffer state and is not in principle hostile to Polish autonomy. She cannot regard the Polish frontier as satisfactory or as a permanent solution. She is, however, ready to undertake a solemn engagement not to endeavour to alter the present frontier by force of arms. Ends.

SECRET. With reference to my telegram of 8th March,* the following is brief summary of the conversations on 6th and 7th March between Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs and M. Herriot in Paris.

Mr. Chamberlain informed M. Herriot that in accordance with decisions of British Cabinet there could be no question of a limited Anglo-French or Anglo-Franco-Belgian pact for which general support of British public opinion could not possibly be secured. On the other hand Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs suggested that German proposals seemed to offer hope of a solution in which His Majesty's Government might eventually co-operate, and he begged Herriot seriously to study these proposals.

M. Herriot was very upset at hearing this, and he spoke at some length about the uneasiness which had been created in France by Germany's bad faith and emphasized several points which were in the way of an agreement with Germany. Most important of these points were:—

- (a) there could be no question respecting, and Germany should not question, occupation of the Rhineland for full period of fifteen years laid down in the Treaty of Versailles;
- (b) the insecurity of Poland on her eastern frontier;
- (c) absence of any provision respecting southern frontier of Germany;
- (d) determination of Italy and France to prevent uniting of Austria to Germany.

M. Herriot also mentioned desirability of inclusion of Holland in any arrangement made, and commented on the omission in the German proposals of any mention of the Belgian frontier.

* No. 500.

Additional evidence of the intention of France to link together the questions of security and evacuation of Cologne was afforded by this conversation of M. Herriot's. Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs therefore took the opportunity again to point out the dangers in this course to which His Majesty's Government were strongly opposed.

M. Herriot threw out a hint that it might be possible to negotiate two separate pacts:—

- (a) With British, French and Belgians,
- (b) the other to include Germany as well, but he was informed that such an arrangement did not commend itself to His Majesty's Government.

The general feeling in Paris is to distrust German proposals as being too indefinite. The best way to remove this distrust will be for Germany at once to join the League of Nations unconditionally. Germany will also have to dispel the French anxiety in regard to southern frontier and to make her pledge not to attempt to alter her Eastern frontiers by resort to war as definite and as binding as her pledge regarding frontiers of the Rhine.

His Majesty's Ambassador at Berlin has been instructed to convey to German Government a hint in this sense, and to make it clear to them that there is a risk that the opportunity of achieving a settlement of the utmost importance for Europe and the world will be lost unless they are sincerely willing to seize the opportunity which we have helped to create for them.

Please inform your Prime Minister.—AMERY.

SECRET. My telegram 12th March.* British Ambassador, Berlin, telegraphed 13th March that in discussions with members of the German Government he found readiness to co-operate in measures of general pacification and full recognition of British Government's services to that end.

The essential basis of German proposals was twofold:—

- (1) Final acceptance of the French and Belgian frontiers as laid down in the Versailles Treaty.
- (2) Arbitration in all cases of conflict on the lines of Arbitration Treaties already negotiated; e.g., German-Swiss German-Swedish, with the possibility of extending the scope of such Treaties to embrace all possible causes of conflict.

As regards Rhineland occupation, Germany would not demand a modification of Articles 428 to 432 of the Treaty but would not abandon any right conferred by these Articles.

As regards Austria, British Ambassador thought discussion would be difficult. There was no present idea of any political agreement with Austria, but it would be difficult to obtain assurances from Germany going beyond the Treaty.

As regards Holland, Germany would not object to Dutch participation in a pact.

As regards the Polish frontier, German Chancellor in private conversation said he was anxious not to impair the settlement of the German-French frontier danger by linking up with it another less essential settlement, regarding which a similar permanence could not now be reached. He argued that to adopt exactly identical conditions for the Polish as for the French frontier would diminish the authority of the French agreement; but Germany did propose that disputes with Poland should be submitted to arbitration.

The Ambassador telegraphed 15th March that he gathered from unofficial information that the answer from the Council of the League to the German note of December, regarding the question of Germany's admission to the League (which has been published in Press) had made a favourable impression. Even official German circles considered that the German points had in the main been met. A careful legal examination would be made before any reply was sent, especially on the question of the transport of foreign troops through Germany. He thought that, provided the development of discussions regarding a pact proceeded satisfactorily, the entry of Germany into the League of Nations might be regarded as assured.

20TH MARCH. Secret. My telegram 17th March.* On 15th March Mr. Chamberlain telegraphed to the British Ambassador in Berlin from Geneva pointing out that he should not push his conversations with the German Government too hard until the Paris conversations could take effect. For his guidance Mr. Chamberlain said that he clearly recognized that Germany could not give up all desire to alter her eastern frontiers. She must realize, however, that no French Government could make a Western pact without a simultaneous, though not necessarily identical, provision for the East. Germany should be careful to avoid spoiling her case by pressing it unduly. She should proceed gradually by giving Poland the necessary guarantees, by entering and establishing her position in the League, and by showing a willingness to co-operate in its work in a friendly and conciliatory spirit. If she could abstain from provocative acts over Danzig, etc., the obviously unsatisfactory nature of the existing arrangement would in time take its effect upon the minds of members of the League. She could always fall back upon Article 19 of the Covenant, and second paragraph of Part VIII of Clemenceau's explanatory letter of 16th June, 1919 (Cmd. 258). All this must take some years, but precipitate action would be fatal to Germany's hopes.

In conversation with Lord D'Abernon, the German Secretary of State, referring to the Polish frontier, made it clear that the only kind of arbitration that Germany had in mind was that envisaged in the Arbitration Treaties she had already negotiated with Switzerland, Finland and Sweden. These Treaties provided for two kinds of arbitration:—

- (1) on legal questions with binding force;
- (2) political questions by conciliatory awards without binding force.

The frontier question obviously came in the latter category, but Germany would, if desired, be willing to exclude it altogether from any Arbitration Treaty with Poland although not regarding this as advisable.

Lord D'Abernon urged strongly the necessity for Germany taking steps to mollify Polish opinion. The German Secretary of State replied that Germany had no desire to precipitate the Polish question and would be willing to let it rest until events provided a more favourable opportunity.

* No. 502

The impression on the Belgian Press of a pact to include Germany appears to be that they would, if necessary, accept this somewhat distasteful notion in order to obtain the signature of Great Britain which they regard as essential.

The Italians on the whole appear to be ready to support the British view. They regard the German proposals as a useful basis of discussion.

As regards the French, Herriot told Mr. Chamberlain on 16th March in Paris that the simultaneous rejection of the Protocol and of any idea of a separate pact with France and Belgium had greatly disturbed his colleagues and the French public. He indicated, however, that he was prepared seriously to examine the German proposals in the light of the British suggestions. The conversation further revealed agreement on the point that the entry of Germany into the League of Nations was an essential though not a preliminary condition of any negotiations with Germany in regard to a pact.

Mr. Chamberlain's impression of the statement on the Geneva Protocol made by him to the League of Nations Council was that, because of its decisive character and its ruthless exposition of the British objections to the Protocol without the tempering effect of any loosely expressed sentimentalism, it undoubtedly had considerable effect upon those present. The 5th section, however, did much to restore confidence, and the hope of the threatened nations would now appear to be centred upon the fulfilment of the policy foreshadowed therein. Generally their feeling is that the participation of Great Britain is essential to any agreement designed to maintain peace.

21ST MARCH. Secret. Following from Prime Minister for [your Prime Minister] [President of Executive Council]:—

Begins: Cabinet have now fully considered the situation arising out of the Foreign Secretary's visits to Paris and Geneva and have discussed the line which he is to take in the debate in Parliament on 24th March. So far as the Geneva Protocol is concerned, Mr. Chamberlain will supplement the statement he made at Geneva transmitted in Colonial Secretary's telegram of 4th March.* In particular he will indicate that the adoption of the Protocol would not have satisfied Continental States in regard to security.

Nothing was made clearer to Mr. Chamberlain than that there can be no prospect of permanent peace in Europe until some acceptable solution of security problem has been found.

On a full review of the whole situation we are now convinced that the recent proposals of the German Government offer the most hopeful basis for a lasting settlement, and, as you will have gathered from the most recent telegrams, indications so far as we can judge are, that, given time, M. Herriot may be able to induce his Government and public opinion in France to accept this plan. It is, however, certain that a settlement cannot be reached without our co-operation to the extent of entering into some arrangement providing for a mutual guarantee of security of the frontiers between Germany on the one hand and Belgium and France on the other, to which Great Britain, France, Belgium and Germany would all be parties. We cannot avoid belief that, if we refused to enter into such an arrangement, and reverted to a policy of isolation, inevitable result would be an aggravation of the existing unrest on the Continent of Europe which might eventually culminate in a fresh war.

* No. 455.

We do not contemplate any extension or diminution of the existing provisions of the Peace settlement affecting Germany's eastern and southern frontiers.

Cabinet have authorized the Foreign Secretary to make a statement on the above lines in Parliament on Tuesday next, when he will emphasize that in our view the peace of the world depends on the part which Great Britain is prepared to play in this matter.

We will telegraph to you summary of Foreign Secretary's speech, but we wished you to know in advance outline of what he will say. He and I propose to explain position to High Commissioners personally on Monday.

FOLLOWING from Prime Minister for [your Prime Minister] [President of the Executive Council]:—

Begins: As promised in my message of 21st March* a summary of Foreign Secretary's speech on security question in House of Commons last night is being telegraphed. In winding up debate I said that we should throughout keep in the closest possible touch with the Dominions and that I hoped myself—though I did not know whether my hopes would be justified—that when we got into closer touch the issues might be comparatively so simple that it might be possible to conduct negotiations by cable as there were great difficulties in having a Conference in the immediate future.

I added that I hoped that the Dominion representatives who were appointed to attend the League of Nations Assembly next September would be able to come over to this country at a sufficient length of time before the Assembly opens to enable us to communicate together and try to arrange that we shall go together united to Geneva when the time comes.

I trust that the suggestion for a discussion before the Assembly will prove convenient so far as representatives of your Government are concerned. We can of course arrange details later.

SECRET. My telegram 6th May.* Conversations regarding Security Pact entered new phase 14th May with the communication to His Majesty's Government by the French Government of the French draft reply to the German proposals of 9th February. The draft note, of which copies have been sent by mail, may be briefly summarized as follows:—It begins in a conciliatory fashion by stating that the French Government have carefully examined the German proposals which they regard as an indication of pacific intentions. It then stipulates (a) that the entry of Germany into the League of Nations under the conditions specified by the letter of the Council of the League of Nations dated 13th March, 1925, is an essential condition to any pact; (b) in effect, that no agreements regarding security must be made which could weaken or lead to revision of the Peace Treaties, more particularly of the occupation clauses of the Treaty of Versailles and the Rhineland Agreement; (c) that Belgium should be a party to any pact proposed.

Note then summarizes German proposals and recognizes value of a solemn repudiation of all idea of war, side by side with a renewed affirmation of the principles inscribed in the Treaty of Versailles.

Referring to the German suggestion of their willingness to conclude arbitration treaties guaranteeing a peaceful settlement of legal and political disputes, French Government state that they regard such treaties as the natural complement to a Rhineland pact. This they appear to modify, however, by a somewhat obscure phrase which seems to suggest that such arbitration should not be applicable in the case of non-observance of the "treaties and agreements contemplated in the present note."

The remainder of the draft note is mainly devoted to the development of the theory of arbitration treaties in such a way as to include, under the same joint and several guarantees as the Western pact, similar treaties between Germany and her eastern neighbours; all these agreements to be brought into a single general convention registered with, and placed under the auspices of the League of Nations. A suggestion is made that France would welcome participation of the United States in these arrangements. Draft note ends with a request that Germany should define her views on the points raised.

It would seem that the latter part of this draft note envisages a wider application of the principle of compulsory arbitration than His Majesty's Government have hitherto been prepared to admit, besides tending to involve His Majesty's Government in additional commitments on the eastern frontiers of Germany which they have declared their inability to undertake. But the meaning of this and other passages in the draft is far from clear. It is for instance not clear whether the French intend draft note to be an expression of their views alone, or whether they intend it to be a communication from them acting in concert with or on behalf of the other Allies.

Conversations are now proceeding between the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs and the French Ambassador to clear up the many obscurities in the draft note.

Cabinet have deferred consideration of the question until the necessary explanations have been obtained. Lord D'Abernon takes favourable view of effect which terms of the draft would have in Germany.

Please inform your Prime Minister.—AMERY.

SECRET. 6th June. My telegram of 29th May.* Security. The French reply to the despatch addressed to Paris on 28th May was communicated to His Majesty's Government by the French Ambassador on 5th June. It is in the form of a despatch from Briand to French Ambassador, London. It welcomes the tone of our despatch and accepts the idea that the proposed reply to Germany shall be an expression of the views common to the Allies. It recognizes that the widespread character of the Empire makes it necessary for His Majesty's Government to limit their undertakings in Europe. On the other hand the position of France does not allow the French Government to concern themselves solely with their own security. They consider that any attempt to alter by force the situation created by the Treaties of Peace would constitute a danger to peace to which France could not remain indifferent. It is, therefore, essential that the proposed Rhineland pact shall not take away their own liberty themselves to go to the assistance of States to whom they judge it necessary to grant their guarantee. They understand His Majesty's Government to be in agreement with this view and they think it necessary to have it clearly stated in the reply to Germany in order to avoid misunderstanding. With this object they propose the following amendments in the British draft:—

Paragraph 2 of Section IV is amended so as to make it clear that the arbitration treaty contemplated would leave room for coercive action, not only where such action is undertaken in conformity with treaties in force between parties, but also in the case of failure to observe a treaty guaranteed by the parties or by any one of them. (Apparent danger of this amendment is in effect removed by end of paragraph 3 of same section and its mention of League machinery.)

In Section V the old paragraph 4 of the original French draft (which was omitted in our draft) is restored in an amended form which leaves it open to the signatories of the proposed Rhineland pacts to guarantee or not as they please the proposed arbitration treaties between Germany and her neighbours who are not signatories of the Rhineland pact.

The only other alterations of substance proposed by the French Government are the following:—

(1) To paragraph 3 of Section V is added the phrase "nothing in the treaties contemplated in the present note can affect these rights and obligations." In consequence of this addition to paragraph 3 of Section V the French Government consider that Section VI of our draft becomes unnecessary and propose its omission. Section VII of our draft would thus become Section VI.

(2) They propose the addition to paragraph 2 of Section VII of our draft of the following phrase:—"These agreements, in conformity with the Covenant, ought to be registered with the League of Nations and placed under its auspices."

Certain other amendments are proposed, but these are purely textual. Full text of amendments now proposed is being telegraphed separately.

In conclusion, French note dwells on the advantage of the early despatch of the reply to the German Government, whose difficulties arising from German public opinion and Russian influences the French Government do not fail to appreciate.

His Majesty's Government are in favour of accepting all the amendments proposed provided that French agree to retain Section VI in our draft to which great importance is attached owing to its very specific invocation of the League. It is proposed in the letter by which our acceptance is conveyed to make it quite clear to French Government that His Majesty's Government consider that right of France to cross Rhineland would only be recognized in event of violation by Germany of her treaty engagements.

* No. 508.

In other words French right in such circumstances to cross Rhineland would merely be specific application of general rule applicable to all signatories that this Pact must not be used as a screen behind which to violate other international obligations.

10TH JUNE. Secret. My telegram of 6th June.* Security. Foreign Secretary handed to Briand at Geneva, 8th June, note stating that His Majesty's Government accepted further French amendments to draft note to Germany with exception that they desired that Section VI of their Counterdraft (see my telegram of 29th May†) should be retained on ground that latter is widely drawn so as to safeguard all rights and obligations under the Covenant whereas words which French Government desired to insert in Section V (see my telegram of 7th June‡) are restricted to rights and obligations of Allied States.

Point referred to in concluding sentence of my telegram of 6th June* is dealt with in note to Briand as follows:—

Begins: "French Government are right in assuming that His Majesty's Government recognize that the proposed Rhineland pact cannot operate as a barrier to prevent France from taking action in conformity with such guarantees as she may have given to arbitration treaties between Germany and Germany's neighbours, and they therefore concur in Section IV of the proposed reply as at present drafted. His Majesty's Government, in fact, regard this proposition as self-evident and as applicable equally to all States signatory of the proposed pact. It is one to which, if rightly understood, there should be no difficulty in obtaining the ready assent of any of the parties concerned, for it is the particular application of the general theory which, in the interests of all the parties, must be at the base of the mutual settlement now in contemplation. It would clearly be inequitable that the proposed Rhineland Pact should in any circumstances operate in favour of any signatory Power which subsequently broke the treaty obligations into which it had entered. The Pact and its cognate agreements must necessarily be so drafted that, on the one hand, they will give the fullest possible security to all the Powers concerned so long as they abide by their treaty undertakings, and that, on the other hand, they cannot be invoked by a guilty Power to protect it from the consequences of a wilful breach of its treaty obligations. Ends.

on the final terms of the French reply to the German Pact proposals. Expected that the French Government will send the reply to Berlin in a few days.

A one-sided statement of the proposals was sent out from Geneva by the French Havas Agency 8th June, and caused some misapprehension here. Following reply to a private notice question was therefore made by the Prime Minister in the House of Commons this afternoon:—

Begins: "I can fully understand the desire of the House to have the earliest opportunity of discussing this question and I have already undertaken to make a statement on the return of the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. Meantime I would ask the House to exercise patience in the full assurance that no Security Pact has yet been signed or will be concluded without the House being given an opportunity for full discussion.

Meantime, in view of certain misapprehensions which have arisen in the public mind, I think it well to say that the position up to date is that the British and French Governments, after careful examination of the German proposals to the French Government of the 9th February, have reached complete agreement on certain basic principles to which any such settlement must conform, and to which there is every reason to anticipate the adhesion of Belgium and Italy.

It is understood that these views will be communicated by the French Government to the German Government, and if the German Government see their way to share them the way will then be open for the actual negotiation of a pact to be negotiated between the Allied Powers interested in the Rhineland and Germany on a footing of equality. The settlement contemplated is of strictly bi-lateral character and is not one-sided as may possibly have been inferred from certain reports that have appeared. The view of both the British and French Governments is that the settlement must be such that it will give the fullest possible security to all the signatory Powers so long as they abide by their treaty obligations, and that on the other hand it cannot be invoked by any guilty Power to protect it from the consequences of a wilful breach of its treaty obligations.

I would only add that, as soon as the French Government's reply has been despatched to Berlin, I propose, subject to the concurrence of the French Government, to communicate its text to Parliament." Ends.

A further mis-statement in the Havas report was to the effect that the Allies have agreed that the admission of Germany to the League of Nations cannot take place before the proposed Security Pact shall have been signed by her. This is exactly the opposite of what has been agreed, namely, that the proposed settlement cannot enter into force until Germany has entered the League. It is, in fact, essential for the completely effective operation of the settlement that it should be under the auspices of the League of Nations, and that all the parties should be bound by the general obligations and should enjoy the general rights attaching to membership of the League.

The chief points on which the final version of the French reply differs from that communicated by French Ambassador on 5th June (see my telegram of 7th June†) are:—

1. The second sentence of second paragraph of Section IV has been redrafted in a clearer manner.
2. In paragraph 3 of Section V the phrase "nothing in the treaties contemplated in the present note can affect these rights and obligations" has at our suggestion been omitted.
3. Section VI of the British counter-draft has been restored at our request (see my telegram of 10th June‡).

22ND JUNE. Your telegram 20th June.* Following for your Prime Minister:—

Begins: White Paper containing the correspondence as to Security Pact published here last week is being sent by mail and should reach you about middle of next week. We think it would be of advantage if you could arrange to have whole of this White Paper republished in Canada on its arrival. In the meantime it seems to us that it might be better to publish the leading documents verbatim in Canada rather than the various telegrams sent during the last few weeks from which persons unfamiliar with subject might find it rather difficult to gather present position.

If you agree, I would suggest that you should publish at once (a) the original memorandum communicated by German Ambassador in Paris to President of Council on 9th February, and (b) Note from French Government to German Government of 16th June.

I am having texts of both these documents coded for transmission immediately in event of this procedure meeting your views. Documents in question are respectively the first and last in the White Paper, intervening documents being concerned with communications between French and British Governments regarding terms of French reply gist of which you have had by telegraph.

24TH JUNE. Canadian Government have telegraphed that question of immediate publication in Canada of correspondence relating to Security Pact has been raised in Dominion Parliament. Reply has been sent suggesting that it would be of advantage to arrange for White Paper containing diplomatic correspondence published here last week (see my telegram 17th June†), of which copies are being sent to Dominions by mail, to be republished in Canada on its arrival, and that meanwhile best course would be to lay before Canadian Parliament verbatim two leading documents, viz:—

(a) Original Memorandum communicated by German Ambassador in Paris to President of Council on 9th February, and (b) Note from French Government to German Government 16th June. These are respectively first and last documents in White Paper issued here.

Canadian Government are adopting this procedure and I have telegraphed text of documents accordingly.

Position of Canada is, of course, different from that of Australia, New Zealand and Union of South Africa, since White Paper issued here cannot reach them for some weeks.

In view of importance of subject, would your Ministers wish me to telegraph to you full text of two documents mentioned with a view to laying them before Parliament forthwith.

Publication of certain of recent telegrams (subject to minor omissions and alterations) might also be practicable if desired with a view to showing, in conjunction with two leading documents, full import of correspondence included in White Book issued here.

I will telegraph necessary details on this aspect of question if your Ministers think that as complete publication as circumstances permit is advisable.—AMERY.

25TH JUNE. Debate in House of Commons last night on Security Pact being sent by mail. It seems hardly necessary in view of full Press report to telegraph summary from here. In course of his opening speech and reply to points raised in debate Foreign Secretary made it clear:—

(1) That what the House had to discuss was not a Treaty, since there is no Treaty or draft of Treaty in existence, but merely preliminary statement of principles and of what the countries concerned feel it would be possible for them to undertake and in what direction they think they can make an advance.

(2) That no obligations will be undertaken on behalf of this country except subject to the approval and ratification of Parliament.

(3) That Dominions have been kept fully informed of policy of His Majesty's Government, but that, with exception of New Zealand which has expressed its complete confidence in policy of His Majesty's Government and its readiness to leave decision in their hands, they have not yet declared themselves.

(4) That no Dominion can be committed except by its own Government acting with consent of its own Parliament.

- (1) German Memorandum 9th February.
- (2) French Interim Reply 20th February.
- (3) Despatch from His Majesty's Ambassador, Paris, 13th May.
- (4) Memorandum from Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs to French Ambassador 19th May.
- (5) French reply to (4).
- (6) Despatch to His Majesty's Ambassador, Paris, 28th May.
- (7) Despatch from Briand to French Ambassador, London, 4th June.
- (8) Note from Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs to Briand 8th June.
- (9) French reply to German Government 16th June.

Text of documents (1), (2), (3), (4), (5), (7), (8) and (9) with headings being telegraphed separately. Text of enclosure (dated 12th May) in document (3) was quoted in full in my second telegram 29th May† (i.e., that beginning "My telegram of to-day, Security Pact") and consists of passage from "as they have informed" to end of Part II.

Text of document (6) was quoted in full in my first telegram 29th May‡ (i.e., that beginning "My telegram 23rd May, Security Pact"). Despatch is headed "Foreign Office, 28th May, 1925," begins "My Lord," and concludes "I am, etc., Austen Chamberlain." Its enclosure comprises two parallel columns headed respectively "Draft reply to the German Memorandum" and "Suggested Alternative Draft." First column contains original French draft (enclosure to document (3)), second column contains original French draft with amendments described in Part III of my second telegram 29th May,† i.e., those amendments set out after words "Modifications proposed by His Majesty's Government are as follows." Document (7), as will be seen from postscript to it, contained two enclosures. Of these it would seem necessary only to publish the French modifications to the British amendments. 3RD JULY. Secret. Security Question. Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs recently gave instructions for preparation of a document designed to show how, in the view of His Majesty's Government, principles set out in the White Paper might be embodied in a formal instrument.

Tentative draft has now been completed and was considered by Cabinet to-day. It was decided that it would be advisable that Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs should communicate text to French Ambassador to-morrow, not as a text to which His Majesty's Government are necessarily committed, but as a concrete suggestion to facilitate negotiations.

As His Majesty's Government are most anxious that your Ministers should be in possession of text at once, I am telegraphing the draft separately to-day.*

4TH JULY. Secret. My telegram 3rd July.* Security. Following are explanatory comments referred to in last sentence:—

Begins: Article 1 is in effect a general declaration of the purpose of the whole treaty.

Article 2. The solemn obligation not to resort to war is restricted to France, Germany and Belgium. Our rôle will be solely that of guarantor.

Article 3. One of the objects of this Article is to make it clear that the Council of the League has a locus standi to intervene if a violation of Articles 42 and 43 of the Treaty of Versailles is alleged. The French Government have been disposed to maintain that Article 44 means that any violation by Germany of Articles 42 and 43 results automatically in the creation of a state of belligerency. It is therefore useful to make it clear that the League of Nations would be entitled to intervene.

Article 5. This Article gives France all she would have been entitled to claim if the Guarantee Treaty of 1919 between herself and Great Britain (Cmd. 221) had come into force, but it recognizes the part to be played by the Council of the League in that the Council's notification is a condition precedent to the guarantee becoming operative.

Article 6. The treaties of arbitration to be guaranteed by us should constitute separate instruments, but they are an integral part of the scheme, and it is therefore contemplated in Article 11 that they must be concluded before the ratification of the Treaty of Mutual Guarantee.

Article 8 is based on the principle laid down in Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs' note to Briand 8th June (No. 8 in White Book), that, though the proposed agreement must give the fullest possible security to all the Powers concerned so long as they abide by the treaty undertakings, they must not on the other hand be such that they can be invoked by a guilty Power to protect it from the consequences of a wilful breach of its treaty obligations. The first sentence of the Article is intended to cover the case of a German-Polish arbitration treaty, guaranteed by France. The second sentence is particularly intended to cover the rights of the Allies under the reparation clauses of the Treaty of Versailles and the Dawes Plan and under the occupation clauses in Part XIV, Section 1, of the Treaty of Versailles and the Rhineland Agreement (Cmd. 222). It does not of course affect the position under paragraph 18 of Annex II to Part VIII of the Treaty of Versailles. His Majesty's Government have never admitted and still do not admit that the Allies enjoy any right under that paragraph to occupy German territory in excess of that specified in Part XIV, Section 1, of the Treaty.

Article 10 is a reproduction of Article 3 of the Guarantee Treaty of 1919 between Great Britain and France. It is put forward as an alternative to a time-limit.

Article 12 has been inserted in accordance with statement by Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs in House of Commons, 24th June (see (4) in my telegram 25th June†). Wording is based on that of Article 5 Guarantee Treaty of 1919. Ends.

31ST JULY. Secret. Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs sent a despatch to the British representative in Paris 27th July for communication to Briand containing his considered observations on the German note. The despatch may be summarized as follows:—

The outstanding feature of the German Note is its studied caution due no doubt to the political circumstances in which it was prepared. Careful examination of it shows on the whole a closer approximation of views than might have been expected. Thus, Germany accepts in principle the Allied stipulation that the entry of Germany into the League of Nations is an essential condition to the Pact. She also accepts the view that the new settlement must not modify existing Treaties and she states in particular that its conclusion is not dependent on the modification of the provisions in force concerning the military occupation of German territory.

As regards arbitration treaties, though the German Government do not accept the French proposals, they do not reject them, but put forward criticisms and ask for further elucidations.

It is true that in some cases the observations of the German Government call for express reservations on the part of the Allies, but it should not be difficult to formulate these without impairing the progress of the negotiations.

As regards the next step, it is considered that the sooner the discussions can be transferred from vague general principles to personal conversations over a concrete text the better.

As regards the reply to the German Note, it is considered that the circumstances of special difficulty in which it was written should be taken into account.

* No. 505. † 31212/25: not printed; it dealt with the attitude to be adopted at the Assembly of the League on the questions of Arbitration, Security and Disarmament.

Attention should be concentrated, not upon details of the Note, but upon its opening and closing passages which display a spirit which the Allies might welcome and reciprocate. A brief reference will then be necessary to the German remarks on—

- (1) relation of the new settlement to the Peace Treaties;
- (2) the occupation of the Rhineland;
- (3) the entry of Germany into the League.

As regards (1) it would seem best to state the position frankly—that is, the new settlement cannot impair the authority of the Peace Treaties or the rights which either Germany or the Allies possess under these Treaties. If Germany joins the League she will be entitled to the benefits of Article 19 of the Covenant.

As regards (2) it might be repeated that the new settlement cannot in itself "affect the provisions of the Treaty relative to the occupation of the Rhineland nor the execution of the conditions laid down in relation thereto in the Rhineland Agreement." The assurance already given by the Allies of their determination scrupulously to observe on their part their obligations in this matter might also be repeated.

As regards (3) it should be repeated that Germany's entry into the League is an essential condition of the new settlement and that the conditions of entry are determined by the Covenant and have already been stated by the Council of the League.

As regards the scope and character of the Arbitration Treaties, it is more difficult to suggest a reply, but it is felt that this question might well be left until the drafting stage is reached.

As regards coercive action, His Majesty's Government consider that rights arising out of the Treaties cannot themselves be subject to arbitration. The question of fact, however, whether or not circumstances exist which would bring these rights into play appears to be one which might properly be submitted for impartial decision. It is suggested that the reply should end with an expression of hope that it will close the formal correspondence and with a proposal that an attempt be made to draft the actual terms of the proposed treaties.

Summary of despatch ends. Copy of it has been communicated to Belgian Government.

His Majesty's representative in Paris discussed these observations on 28th July with Briand, who promised to send his considered reply through the French Ambassador.

The most favourable construction possible has naturally been put upon the German Note in this despatch to Paris. At the same time disappointment is felt by His Majesty's Government at the nature of the Note. It is considered that the German Government had it in their power to send a note which would have led immediately to personal conversations, whereas in fact, by raising points of detail and by its modified acceptance of the basic stipulations of the French Note, it has postponed those conversations and perhaps made further written correspondence inevitable.

The position now is that the French will probably draft a reply to the German Note and will, as before, show it to His Majesty's Government before it is despatched, and it seems likely that M. Briand will himself come to London early next week.

Please inform your Prime Minister.—AMERY.

13TH AUGUST. Secret. My telegram, 10th August.† The conversations between Briand and Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs on 11th and 12th August resulted in complete agreement on text of the French draft reply to the last German Note.

Various minor modifications suggested by Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs were accepted by Briand.

It will be observed that tone of reply, text of which is being telegraphed separately, is conciliatory. It is hoped that exchange of notes will now end, and personal conversations will begin. The French Government propose to show the draft reply to the other Allies as was done before. It will then be handed to the German Government by the French Ambassador in Berlin, and a suggestion will follow for a meeting of the German, French, British and Belgian Legal Advisers to discuss text of the draft Treaty.

Agreement was also reached upon the text of the Draft Treaty, subject to Cabinet approval, as a basis for discussion with Germany. Separate telegram regarding this will follow. Please inform your Prime Minister.—AMERY.

17TH AUGUST. Secret. Following for your Prime Minister from Prime Minister:—

Begins: The discussions which have taken place with the French Government since the communication to them of the original British draft of a Treaty of Mutual Guarantee have mainly been concerned with two points:—

(a) The nature of the action which should follow a violation by Germany of Articles 42 and 43 of the Treaty of Versailles;

(b) the operation of the guarantees to be given by His Majesty's Government.

* 34592/25: not printed; it dealt with the terms of the draft Treaty. † 31477/25: not printed; it described the modifications in the draft Treaty proposed by M. Briand, and stated that they would be discussed by him and the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs on the 11th August.

The position from which His Majesty's Government started in their original draft of a Treaty of Mutual Guarantee was that France and Belgium on the one side and Germany on the other should undertake not to go to war with each other except in two cases:—

- (i) In resistance to invasion or attack;
- (ii) when acting with the authorization of the League.

Under the original British draft, all allegations that Articles 42 and 43 of the Treaty of Versailles had been violated would have had to be referred to the Council of the League of Nations, and France could only have acted when the Council had decided that a violation had in fact taken place. Equally the British guarantee in all cases, including that of a violation of Articles 42 and 43, would only have come into operation after a decision by the Council.

The French at first took their stand on the rights conferred upon them by Article 44, Treaty of Versailles, which declares any breach of Articles 42 and 43, however trivial, to be a hostile act which each of the Allies has the right to answer by war. To admit the intervention of the League in such a case—even where the breach was purely technical—was, they argued, to consent to a restriction of existing treaty rights. Apart from that, appeal to the League would involve delay, which might be prolonged indefinitely if even a single nation represented on the Council of the League were prevented by partiality for Germany or, what is more probable, by fear of Germany, from joining in the decision of the majority. France's security, therefore, could not be ensured unless instant action was permissible in reply to a violation of the demilitarized zone. The French accordingly wished to provide for a third case where war on Germany would be legitimate without the obligation of prior reference to the League, namely, the case of a hostile act within the meaning of Article 44 of the Treaty of Versailles. They also wished the British guarantee to become immediately operative (i.e., without the need for a prior decision of the League) in this, as in other cases.

His Majesty's Government could not for a moment accept the contention that every hostile act as defined by Article 44, however trivial or however slight the danger it involved, should automatically justify resort to arms and bring their guarantee into action. But they recognized that there were cases in which, as in 1914, safety would be a matter of days or even hours and that provision must be made for these cases. The problem which His Majesty's Government therefore set themselves to solve was to distinguish between those infractions of the articles dealing with the demilitarized zone which, constituting an immediate and urgent danger, must at once be repelled by force, and those others which, whether in themselves trivial or grave, allowed time for reference to the League. The conclusion to which His Majesty's Government came was broadly that force should only be used to repel force.

Happily when the matter was discussed with Briand he showed himself fully alive to the necessity of distinguishing between flagrant violations and purely technical infractions of the demilitarized Rhineland zone, and he readily appreciated the fact that Great Britain could not be expected to give a guarantee which might involve her against her will in war as the result of a trivial incident. His object was to make sure of the support of Great Britain in serious circumstances, and he supported the idea that provision should be made for consultation between the parties concerned to decide whether the particular violation of Articles 42 and 43 constitute a menace of war.

This suggestion has been worked upon and the result is contained in Article 4(3) of the latest version of the draft treaty, terms of which have already been telegraphed to you by Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs 15th August.* Under that Article every allegation that a breach of treaty has occurred must be referred to the Council of the League of Nations and a decision by the Council on the facts will normally be necessary before the guarantee comes into play. The guarantee will only operate prior to such a decision if the contracting parties other than the one against whom the allegation is made are agreed that the violation constitutes an unprovoked act of aggression and that by reason of the outbreak of hostilities or the assembly of armed forces in the demilitarized zone immediate action is necessary.

Thus, while France can regard our immediate help as a practical certainty in the only case of genuine need, Great Britain retains complete freedom of decision.

It will be noted, too, that Article 2 draft Treaty constitutes an important restriction of the extreme claim at first made by France with regard to her own right of action under Articles 42-44 Treaty of Versailles. Whereas she at first insisted that she could not forgo the right given to her by Article 44, in case of any violation by Germany of Articles 42 or 43, to wage war on Germany at once, Article 2, as now drafted, limits that right to the case where the violation is flagrant and constitutes an unprovoked act of aggression, and where, by reason of the assembly of armed forces in the demilitarized zone, immediate action is necessary.

As is natural, the discussions with France have been mainly conducted in terms of French security, but every provision is bilateral and it is clearly understood that the proposed treaty will give equal guarantees to Germany. The German point of view will receive detailed consideration as soon as the German Government have definitely agreed to enter into conversations. Both Briand and Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs insisted that there must be no semblance of any kind of dictating to Germany an agreed document. Briand indeed went out of his way to make it clear that he considered this point of vital importance. It is, therefore, of the utmost consequence that strict secrecy should be observed about this part of the recent conversations until we can secure a meeting with the Germans. Ends.

17TH AUGUST. Secret. Following for your Prime Minister from Prime Minister:—

Begins: My message of to-day.* We have reason to believe that terms of communiqué issued here at close of Briand-Chamberlain conversations have given satisfaction in Berlin where it is thought that they will facilitate course of German Government. Briand showed himself extremely reasonable and genuinely anxious for the success of the negotiations. Wherever we can trace his influence it is being used to promote peaceful atmosphere notably in Eastern Europe. The omens therefore are propitious and we hope for early meeting with German representatives. Ends.

22ND AUGUST. Secret. Security Pact. My telegram 17th August.* A telegram has been sent to His Majesty's representative in Berlin informing him that subsequent to the meeting with Briand on 12th August it was agreed that when the French Note was handed to the German Government a definite suggestion should be conveyed that if Germany were willing, a meeting between the British, French, Belgian and German Legal Advisers should be held in London as soon as possible in order to prepare the way for a meeting between Foreign Ministers. His Majesty's representative was instructed to support his French colleague in making this proposal which will also be made by the Belgian Ambassador.

It is intended by this meeting to give the German Legal Adviser an opportunity to seek and receive explanations of the views of the Allied Governments in regard to the form which the proposed Treaty should take. His Majesty's representative was instructed to emphasize that the German Legal Adviser will be at liberty to make any suggestions he may desire and that he will not be asked to commit his Government in any way or to discuss anything but legal issues. It is hoped in this way to enable the German Foreign Minister to meet the other three Foreign Ministers with a full knowledge of their proposals. No specific date will be suggested as to the eventual meeting of Ministers, but the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs is anxious that it should take place as soon as possible.

It is probable that the reply to Germany will be handed to the German Government on the 24th instant and published a few days later.

15TH SEPTEMBER. Secret. My telegram 9th September.† Security Pact. Conversation was held at Geneva on 9th September between Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, Briand, Vandeveld and Scialoja, the last named preserving the attitude of an observer. Briand said that he thought the results of the Jurists' conversations were satisfactory, and in some ways even constituted an improvement on the original draft. He recognized that the eastern frontiers formed the great stumbling block, but suggested that the difficulty about the French guarantee might perhaps be overcome by putting the eastern treaties under the guarantee of the League with France acting in some way as the agent of the League for enforcing them. He had suggested this idea to the Polish Foreign Minister, who was not altogether unfavourable to it. Vandeveld approved and said it would certainly be acceptable to Benes. Briand dwelt forcibly on the dangers involved to Europe if the possibility of war in Eastern Europe is not excluded.

The proposed meeting of Ministers was discussed and the question of the relation of Poland and Czechoslovakia to it was raised. They did not expect to be present at conversations on the Western Pact, but asked for simultaneous but separate conversations in the same place because of their public opinion. It must not appear that the other Powers had decided their fate without consulting them, in which case they would have to accept submissively the decision or appear to be the cause of failure of the whole plan. Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs proposed that a commencement should be made with the Western Pact which might serve as a model, or at least a starting point for discussions on the more thorny subject of the eastern frontiers. Then perhaps the representatives of Poland and Czechoslovakia might be invited to join in a day or so after the first meeting. This suggestion was approved by Briand and Vandeveld.

French Ambassador in Berlin is handing to the German Government to-day note of which text is being telegraphed separately. The British Chargé d'Affaires in Berlin will simultaneously give a similar invitation to the German Government on behalf of His Majesty's Government.

SECRET. 15th September. My telegram of to-day.* Security Pact. Following is translation of French note:—

Begins: When communicating the note of 24th August to Stresemann, the French Ambassador, acting on instructions, informed the Minister for Foreign Affairs that the French Government, in agreement with their Allies, considered that, if the note referred to were favourably received by the German Government, it would be of advantage to accelerate the conclusion of the negotiations by a meeting of legal experts and ultimately by a meeting of the Ministers for Foreign Affairs of the States concerned.

After the conversations which have just taken place between the Jurists in London it appears to the French Government and to their Allies that it is to the common interest of the nations concerned that the negotiations should not be spun out and that the time has come to fix a date for the meeting of the suggested conference.

For this purpose the end of September or at latest the first days of October would be a convenient time. The conference might take place in neutral territory, preferably in Switzerland, in a locality to be fixed later by agreement between the Governments.

The French Government and their Allies earnestly hope that these proposals will meet with the approval of the German Government and that the latter will shortly be in a position to communicate to them their assent.

28TH SEPTEMBER. Secret. My telegram 26th September.* The German Ambassador handed to Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs 26th September a brief note accepting the invitation to the Conference of Ministers on Security in Switzerland, and suggesting 5th October as the date. At the same time he made a separate verbal declaration of which he left a copy defining the attitude of the German Government on the subject of war responsibility, and asserting the desirability of a settlement of the questions of Cologne and disarmament before Germany enters the League, and the Security Pact is concluded.

Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs told the German Ambassador that he considered the introduction of the question of war guilt at this stage to be an act of provocative folly. Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs afterwards saw the French Ambassador and said that he hoped the German declaration would not be allowed to alter the plan for the Conference, and that it would be possible for the Allies to accept the date, adding that they did not think it necessary to make any observations on the accompanying declaration.

The German Government made similar communications in Paris, Brussels and Rome.

The French Government are endeavouring to dissuade the German Government from their avowed intention of publishing the contents of the verbal declarations, and no reference to them is being made in the Press at present.

Sir,

By instruction of my Government I have the honour to inform Your Excellency of the following:—

They also trust that the final settlement of the problems under discussion will be expedited by a meeting of the members of the Governments of the States concerned, and they therefore, in accordance with their note of the 27th August last, agree to the proposal that this meeting should take place immediately. They suggest the 5th October as the date for the meeting planned to take place in Switzerland.

Following is text of reply:—

Begins:

Your Excellency,

His Majesty's Government have received with pleasure the acceptance by the Government of the Reich of the proposal for a conference on the 5th October at Locarno. His Majesty's Government note with satisfaction that the acceptance is given without reserve.

In reply to the declaration which Your Excellency made to me at the same time, I have the honour to take note of the assurance of Your Excellency that the questions therein raised do not constitute conditions preliminary to a meeting of Foreign Ministers.

These questions have, in fact, no relation to the negotiations for a Security Pact and have formed no part of the preliminary exchange of views.

As regards that part of the declaration which deals with Germany's entry into the League of Nations, His Majesty's Government note with satisfaction that the German Government raise no objection to this essential condition of any mutual pact. The question of Germany's responsibility for the war is not raised by the proposed pact, and His Majesty's Government are at a loss to know why the German Government have thought proper to raise it at this moment. His Majesty's Government are obliged to observe that the negotiation of a security pact cannot modify the Treaty of Versailles or alter their judgment of the past.

As regards the evacuation of the Cologne zone, I have the honour to repeat that the date of that evacuation depends solely on the fulfilment of Germany's disarmament obligations and that His Majesty's Government will welcome the performance of those obligations as permitting the Allies at once to evacuate the northern zone. I have the honour to be, with the highest consideration,

Your Excellency's obedient servant,

(For the Secretary of State),

VICTOR WELLESLEY.

30TH SEPTEMBER. Secret. My telegram 28th September.* Security Pact. Following is translation of German Ambassador's verbal declaration:—

* No. 547.

Begins: At the time when the Ministers of the Powers concerned are about to meet for important conversations on the subject of the consolidation of peace between their countries, the German Government consider it necessary to acquaint the British Government in all candour with their attitude in two matters which are most closely connected with the objects of those conversations.

In the preceding correspondence the Allied Governments have made the conclusion of a Security Pact conditional upon the entry of Germany into the League of Nations. The German Government have not contested the linking up of the two problems, but find themselves thereby confronted by the necessity of reverting to a point which, in connexion with the League of Nations question, they have already in their memorandum of September, 1924, mentioned to the Governments represented on the League Council. They repeat the declaration made in that memorandum to the effect that the eventual entry of Germany into the League of Nations is not to be understood as a recognition of the allegation made to establish their obligations, and which implies a moral charge on the German people and is made to establish Germany's international obligations. They are of opinion that the public notification in this sense issued by the then German Government on the 29th August, 1924, assists the object of an understanding and sincere reconciliation between nations, and for their own part they identify themselves with this proclamation with the express desire of creating the condition of mutual esteem and true equality of rights which is the prior condition for the success of the confidential conversations now contemplated.

Further, the understanding and conciliation, which are the object sought, would be prejudiced if, before the entry of Germany into the League of Nations and before the conclusion of the Security Pact, the elimination of a dispute which still separates Germany from the Allies were not achieved. That dispute is the evacuation of the Northern Rhenish zone and the final settlement of the disarmament question. As long as the present situation continues, namely, the prolongation of the occupation of a large tract of German territory, which is felt by the German nation to be unjust, faith in peaceful development, upon which depends the efficacy of the contemplated international agreements, cannot be established.

The German Government trust that the British Government will take these statements in the same spirit of loyalty in which they are made, and that they will recognize in them the honest determination to smooth the way for the realization of the great work of peace now to be commenced. Ends.

6TH OCTOBER. Secret. My telegram 5th October.* The first meeting of the Locarno Conference took place 5th October as arranged. After the opening speeches, with Mr. Chamberlain in the chair, the meeting resolved itself into a "Round Table" conference with no formal chairmanship, and it was agreed that the character of the "conversations" should be maintained throughout.

* 45072/25: not printed; it described a conversation between His Majesty's Ambassador at Berlin and the German Chancellor on the situation.

By common consent preliminary discussions of a general character were avoided and the Draft Pact, as it left the Jurists on 4th September (see my telegram 9th September*), was taken as the basis of discussion. Mr. Chamberlain reports that the proceedings opened in a most striking atmosphere of helpful good-will. Briand and Luther particularly emphasized their determination, not only to bring the Pact to a successful conclusion, but also to eliminate once and for all the division of Europe into rival camps of victor and vanquished.

Articles 3, 5, 9 and 10 were agreed to without comment by all delegations. The Preamble and Articles 7 and 11 were, at the request of Germany, referred back to the Jurists for—it was understood—purely technical reasons.

On Article 1 Germany proposed certain drafting alteration which will be referred to the Jurists. Belgium suggested purely verbal alterations to Article 2 which will cause no difficulty.

Article 4 (3). Germany proposed two amendments, about one of which Briand expressed some doubt; their meaning, however, was not clear and they will be examined later.

Article 6 contains the real difficulty ahead of the Conference, namely, French guarantee of the German-Polish Arbitration Treaty. This, the German Delegation declared themselves absolutely unable to accept.

Article 8. Germany wished notification to Council dependent on request of one party only. This caused some difficulty, but Mr. Chamberlain considered their arguments were not without weight and that they had considerable influence on the Conference. Finally, the Belgians and Italians made alternative suggestions which have been referred to the Jurists.

Mr. Chamberlain reports that the German Chancellor seemed to show just the qualities which, joined to Briand's, were needed for success. He adds, however, that they will be tested when the bigger questions arise and it will be rash for the present to presume too much upon the very satisfactory character of the opening discussions.

7TH OCTOBER. Secret. My telegram 6th October.† At meeting of Locarno Conference 6th October, Mr. Chamberlain was tacitly accepted as acting as President though there was no official President.

Belgian delegate drew attention to article in Italian newspaper based upon knowledge which went beyond information vouchsafed by official communiqué issued after session on previous day. The Conference took note of his complaint, and the Italian delegate said that the leakage which he much regretted would be investigated.

Mr. Chamberlain reminded the Conference of the pledge of strict secrecy, pointing out that any breach of the pledge would mar the frankness of discussion.

He proposed that Conference should hear objections of Germany to Article 6 of Draft Treaty. A long interchange of views followed, and an argument between French and German delegates, though conducted with excellent temper, did not disclose any basis for agreement. Each side was trying to secure a suggestion from the other and was unwilling to commit itself. This, however, was to be expected, and a personal meeting has been arranged between French and German delegates to-morrow, which it is hoped may bring about a solution.

* 45232/25: not printed; it described the proceedings of the meeting of Jurists.

The discussion closed by a definition from Mr. Chamberlain of attitude of British Government towards question of eastern frontier, as to which a further telegram will be sent.

9TH OCTOBER. Secret. My telegram of 7th October.* Mr. Chamberlain telegraphs from Locarno that on the 8th October he had a long conversation with the German Foreign Minister. The conversation was principally important on account of the indication it gave that the Germans now regard Article 16 of the League of Nations Covenant as the only serious obstacle to the conclusion of the Pact. The Germans took it for granted that the remaining difficulties regarding disarmament can be solved, and that the evacuation of Cologne will follow, but their objection to Article 16 appeared uncompromising.

Stresemann finally made a suggestion indicating that the difficulty regarding Article 16 might possibly be got over by an interpretation rather than a modification of that Article. This suggestion is to be further explored by the legal advisers of the French, British and German delegations.

12TH OCTOBER. Secret. My telegram of 9th October.† Mr. Chamberlain telegraphs that on the 10th October the Conference had a short meeting which was rendered notable by the definite request of the Italian delegate that the preamble of the Pact should be amended to include Italy. The Pact thus definitely takes the form of a five power agreement. There was nothing sudden or dramatic in the Italian decision which had been foreshadowed by the Italian delegate at the beginning of the Conference.

A second reading was given at the meeting to the Articles of the Pact on the basis of amendments submitted by the Jurists. Definite text was adopted on majority of points, the remainder being reserved for a later discussion. The amendments submitted by the Jurists may be summarized as follows:—

Preamble. Articles 1 and 3, small verbal alterations.

Article 4, small verbal alterations in Clauses 1 and 2. The amendment of Clause 3, Article 4, so as to leave the contracting parties less discretion in deciding whether a flagrant violation had taken place.

In Article 5, small verbal alterations.

In Article 8, amendment to satisfy the Germans in the sense that "one or other" of the contracting parties could request the Council to consider whether the treaty was still necessary. Other amendments to make Council's decision by two-thirds instead of simple majority, and keep treaty in force for year after decision by Council that treaty was no longer necessary. The two most important of the questions left before the Conference are, firstly, German objections to the application to Germany, upon her entry into the League, of Article 16 of the Covenant. Secondly, question arising out of Article 6, regarding nature of guarantee to be given to the eastern arbitration treaties.

Article 6 of the treaty and also Article 7 were, according to another telegram from Mr. Chamberlain, chief subjects of discussion between him and German and French delegates during the trip on Lake Maggiore on the afternoon of 10th October which has been announced in the Press.

14TH OCTOBER. Secret. My telegram of 12th October.* Mr. Chamberlain reports from Locarno that at a meeting of the Conference on 12th October the German delegation accepted the declaration outlined in following paragraph as safeguarding their position under Article 16 of the Covenant in such a way as to make it possible for Germany to enter the League.

The declaration, in order to meet German susceptibilities, is not for the moment being disclosed at Locarno. After registering the fact that the Allies are not qualified to speak on behalf of the League of Nations, it says, that in consequence of the discussions which have already taken place in the Assembly and in the committees of the League of Nations, and after the explanations which have been exchanged between them, the Allies have no hesitation in giving to the German delegates the interpretation which for their part they put upon Article 16. According to that interpretation, obligations placed by Article 16 upon members of the League of Nations should be understood in the sense that each of the member nations of the League is bound to collaborate loyally and effectively for the maintenance of the Covenant and to withstand all acts of aggression in such a manner as shall be compatible with their military strength and with their geographical position.

Mr. Chamberlain further reports that the Germans made great play of their special position, pointing out that, whereas they are disarmed, other members of the League are not disarmed. The Allies consequently agreed that upon the signature of the Pact they would make, as a final act of the Conference, a formal declaration to the effect that the security of Europe had been sufficiently assured to permit of the practical application of Article 8 of the Covenant of the League of Nations.

* No. 553.

The question of the guarantee of the eastern arbitration treaties is now, Mr. Chamberlain points out, the only question which remains outstanding. It is being dealt with for the present by means of informal conversations among those concerned. Mr. Chamberlain understands that neither the Belgian nor French delegates expect especial difficulty regarding the arbitration treaties which they propose to conclude with Germany. The Czechoslovak delegate is also optimistic. The situation regarding the Polish-German arbitration treaty is not yet clear.

Mr. Chamberlain considers that the prospects are favourable for agreement by the end of the week.

15TH OCTOBER. Secret. My telegram of 14th October.* Mr. Chamberlain reports from Locarno that at a meeting on 13th October the amended draft text of Pact was accepted by all, subject only to the reserve of final consent by Briand until he had consulted the Polish and Czechoslovakian Foreign Ministers regarding France's eastern commitments. Briand's final consent is expected to-day, when it is also anticipated that the Franco-German and Belgian-German Arbitration Treaties will be ready for submission to the Conference. The German-Polish and German-Czech Arbitration Treaties, with regard to which there appears to be some slight anxiety, will then only be outstanding.

As regards question of signature, though all other delegations are prepared to sign, the German delegation are obliged to return to Berlin to obtain full powers. It has been arranged therefore, that the Pact shall be initialled only in Locarno and signed later in London.

Mr. Chamberlain reports that if the Polish negotiations proceed satisfactorily it should be possible to initial the Pact on 16th October.

In order to avoid the difficulty of four equally valid texts in different languages, it was agreed to accept French as authoritative text.

approved the draft of the Pact. After the Pact had been disposed of, the Czech and Polish Ministers for Foreign Affairs joined the Conference to hear the discussion where it concerned their own negotiations with Germany over the eastern arbitration treaties. The French Jurist explained the principles underlying the French and Belgian draft Arbitration Treaties and the conference concurred in their terms. The Czech and Polish Ministers for Foreign Affairs both stated that generally speaking they were ready to adopt the same text, but that the political aspect of certain portions still remained to be settled. They hoped, however, that settlement would be reached so that their treaties might be presented to the Conference at its meeting on 16th October.

Mr. Chamberlain in consequence considers that everything is practically settled and that it is reasonably certain that, unless an unforeseen hitch occurs, the Pact and its ancillary treaties will all be initialled on 16th October, when a date will be fixed for their signature in London. English translation of text as finally approved (see last paragraph of my telegram of 15th October*) which has been prepared in advance of official translation will be telegraphed separately.

Please inform your Prime Minister.—AMERY.

17TH OCTOBER. Secret. My telegram of 16th October.† Mr. Chamberlain reports that on the evening of 15th October the German delegation, who had previously raised various questions such as Cologne, on which they wanted pledges before they could guarantee the ratification of the Pact, made final attempt to extract eleventh hour concessions. Briand met them most generously with a general assurance regarding Allied intentions in the questions of Cologne and the Rhineland, and the German delegation then raised the question of the League scheme of military investigation under Article 213 of the Treaty of Versailles and its relationship to Article 1, paragraph 2, of the Covenant. Briand, Vandervelde and Mr. Chamberlain all pointed out the enormity of presenting in this way an entirely fresh and unsuspected condition. Mr. Chamberlain eventually convinced the Germans that the difficulty was imaginary; the danger of a rupture was thus averted. It seems that the German Chancellor was actuated by fears of Parliamentary difficulties at home.

The text of the Pact and subsidiary documents were initialled on the evening of 16th October and date for signature was fixed for 1st December in London.

Mr. Chamberlain intends to call on French Prime Minister on his way through Paris on 18th October.

Please inform your Prime Minister.—AMERY.

18TH NOVEMBER. Confidential. Following from Prime Minister for [To all except Irish Free State: your Prime Minister.] [To Irish Free State only: President of the Executive Council.]

Begins: As you are aware Article 9 of the Treaty of Mutual Guarantee which was initialled at Locarno and which it is hoped will be signed on 1st December provides that the Treaty shall impose no obligation upon any of the British Dominions or upon India unless the Government of such Dominion or of India signifies its acceptance thereof.

So far as this country is concerned, Parliament is being given an immediate opportunity of discussing the Treaty and, assuming that Parliament gives its approval and that the other signatories also are prepared to ratify the Treaty, we propose to advise His Majesty to ratify.

As regards the Dominions, we have been proceeding on assumption that no obligation under Article 9 of the Treaty would in any event be undertaken by any Dominion Government unless the whole position had been laid before its Parliament and the approval of Parliament obtained. It has also seemed to us that, before arriving at any final judgment, Dominion Governments would desire the fullest possible information as to the situation created by the Treaty in relation to the whole field of foreign policy and defence.

It would appear to follow that there should be a general examination of the whole situation, and we suggest that such examination could best be deferred until there has been an opportunity of personal discussion between Ministers here and representatives of the Dominions and India such as would be afforded by the next Imperial Conference as to the date of which we hope to be able to make proposals in the near future.

My telegram of 18th November.* Locarno Treaty. Following is substance of what Foreign Secretary said in relation to position of Dominions:—

Begins: After expressing regret that it is impossible for representatives of all parts of the Empire to take part in all our discussions of international affairs he intimated that it was desire of His Majesty's Government before the scheme of the Locarno Pact took shape to get into conference with the Governments of the Dominions and India prior to embarking upon any negotiations, but this proved impossible. All that was possible was to inform Dominions of every stage of the proceedings and this was done to fullest extent practicable. Their liberty and freedom of action was safeguarded specifically by Article 9 of the Treaty. It was recognized that only their own Governments acting with the approval of their Parliaments can undertake on their behalf the obligations which His Majesty's Government ask the Imperial Parliament to undertake to-day. It is hoped to discuss the matter with them whenever the next Imperial Conference meets and that that Conference may not be too long delayed. We do not think it possible to discuss questions of such importance and covering so wide a field by despatch or telegraph. It appears to us that personal consultation is necessary on question of so wide a character. Ends.

19TH NOVEMBER. Following is extract from the Prime Minister's speech at the opening of the Exhibition at Dunedin, 17th November:—

Begins: The Security Pact recently concluded at Locarno has amplified a great advance towards a solution of the International situation in Europe, and it is to be earnestly hoped that as a result peace amongst Nations will be assured for many years to come. As far as this Dominion is concerned the Pact will be submitted in due course for ratification by our own Parliament; but we have already intimated to His Majesty's Government that the New Zealand Government has been satisfied to leave the negotiations in their hands and that we will fall in behind them in whatever course seems to them necessary to ensure peace amongst the Nations of Western Europe.

Ratification by the New Zealand Parliament is necessary because the Dominions are expressly exempted by the terms of the Pact from its obligations unless they elect to ratify it. Those obligations only exceed the Covenant of the League to which New Zealand is a signatory by guarantee to Germany against attack by France—a negligible addition to our existing Covenant to come to the aid of France, Belgium and Italy against attacks by Germany, but if our responsibilities were materially increased by the Pact
I do not believe that any true New Zealander would desire to sever our country from the credit of the great achievement in the Locarno negotiations. Ends.

SECRET and Personal. Your telegram of 10th December.* Locarno Treaties. We greatly appreciate congratulations of New Zealand Government and readiness of your Prime Minister to associate himself with our action and to invite New Zealand Parliament to share obligations already accepted by Parliament here. You will, however, see from Prime Minister's message of 18th November† that our view hitherto has been that it would be preferable to await a general examination of whole international situation at an Imperial Conference before Dominion Governments generally reach a final decision. Reason of course is that we are hopeful that as the result of such an examination it may be possible to announce at any rate general approval of principles to which Pact gives expression, and we think that it would be preferable from point of view of Empire policy if any Dominions which saw their way formally to participate were to do so after such announcement rather than before. We therefore incline to the opinion that course suggested in Allen's recent telegram of 2nd December‡ to your Prime Minister of which he has shown me a copy is most suitable in the meantime. On the other hand we recognize that in view of definite pronouncement made by your Prime Minister on the 17th November§ at opening of Dunedin Exhibition it may be awkward for him to change his attitude now. Terms of your telegram of the 10th December* which was presumably drafted after your Prime Minister had received High Commissioner's message seem to suggest this. Please let me know how you view position and whether you think that your Prime Minister would be embarrassed if we were to suggest that reference to New Zealand Parliament should be deferred until after Imperial Conference.—AMERY.

1. New Zealand Parliament in the ordinary course will assemble next June and proposal for ratification would have been submitted then as already announced.

2. If the Imperial Conference meets during the latter half of 1926, effect of your proposal to defer action would be that ratification would not be possible until after June, 1927, or should the Imperial Conference meet in 1927 the matter could not be dealt with by Parliament until perhaps the following year.

3. Prime Minister is inclined to think that New Zealand having decided its policy prompt action on our part might strengthen the general position rather than otherwise, but he has no personal feeling on the question and if His Majesty's Government consider uniformity of action is more likely to be achieved by course indicated in your telegram under reply, then he is quite willing to fall in with their wishes.

You will doubtless recall that under date of 18th February last I addressed a note to your predecessor, the Right Honourable J. Ramsay MacDonald, with regard to the proposed Anglo-American treaties affecting the former German territories in Central Africa now administered by His Majesty's Government under mandate on behalf of the League of Nations, and submitted a form of preamble which, it was hoped, would satisfy the desires of His Majesty's Government; and that on 29th July last Mr. Villiers, for the Secretary of State, replied that His Majesty's Government would prefer to postpone their final answer to the note until a more advanced stage had been reached in the negotiations of the Treaty relating to the British Mandate in Palestine.

Inasmuch as our two Governments have now practically come to an agreement concerning the terms of the Palestine Mandate, I have the honour to inquire whether a more definite answer may now be given to the proposals contained in my note above referred to.

The preamble suggested in your note of the 18th February last is acceptable to His Majesty's Government, subject to the substitution in the case of the Cameroons and Togoland of the word "protectorate" for "colony," the former being the designation given to those territories by the German Government at the time of the outbreak of the War.

UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE to THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

(Sent 3.45 p.m. 14th January, 1925.)

14TH JANUARY. Private and Personal. Before considering official reply to your Confidential telegram 1st December,* United States of America and "C" Mandates, I should be glad if you could take the opportunity to discuss the matter personally with General Hertzog, and bring before him the following considerations.

Present correspondence had its origin in decision of Council of League of Nations in June, 1921, that principal Allied Powers should be asked to negotiate direct with United States Government on issues involved in notification from latter Government in connexion with "A" and "B" Mandates to effect that they could not accept any decision come to without their approval, as territories in question had been ceded to Allied and Associated Powers. United States Government formulated their views in memorandum 24th August, 1921, of which copy enclosed Secretary of State's despatch 1st September, 1921, Dominions Treaty 30, Confidential.† This memorandum described position taken by United States Government in relation to disposal of Mandated Territories generally, and then proceeded to set out their wishes in regard to all three forms of Mandate. In their replies,‡ His Majesty's Government indicated extent to which they could meet wishes of United States

* No. 395 in Dominions No. 93. † No. 159 in Dominions No. 81. ‡ Nos. 186 and 187 in Dominions No. 87.

Government in connexion with "B" Mandates and Palestine Mandate. As regards "C" Mandates action was limited to communication of memorandum to Dominion Governments concerned.

United States Government having in meantime concluded agreement with Japan as to Japanese Mandated Territories (see Secretary of State's despatch, 21st February, 1922, Dominions 58*) returned to question of "C" Mandates in memorandum submitted by United States Ambassador 26th July, 1922,† which was communicated to Governments of Mandatory Dominions for consideration in Secretary of State's despatch 18th August, 1922, Confidential.‡

New Zealand Government suggested§ that, as memorandum raised questions affecting other Dominion Mandatories, points raised should be left in abeyance until they had been considered by Imperial Conference. Similar view was expressed|| by Commonwealth Government. Matter was accordingly considered by Imperial Conference Committee and further developments were as set out in my predecessor's despatch 6th September, Confidential.¶

It will be seen that, while correspondence with United States Government as to "C" Mandates formed part of general correspondence with them as to position in all Mandated Territories, His Majesty's Government endeavoured as far as possible to keep correspondence as to "C" Mandates separate from that as to "A" and "B" Mandates, and to dissociate decision as regards "C" Mandates from that with regard to "B" Mandates.

General principle underlying representations of United States in regard to all the former German Colonies is that by Article 119, Treaty of Versailles, these territories were ceded to Principal Allied and Associated Powers, and that accordingly there could be no disposition of the territories without their consent. From this point of view matter affects other parts of Empire as well as Mandatories of particular territories. For this reason Canadian Government were kept informed of discussions with United States Government and were represented at Imperial Conference Committee.

Apart from this general consideration, since any decision as to rights of United States and its nationals in one of the "C" Mandated Territories cannot fail to affect position of Governments responsible for other "C" Mandated Territories, any negotiations on subject of South-West Africa would, as indicated in comments of Commonwealth and New Zealand Governments referred to above, be of interest to them, and would be also of interest to His Majesty's Government as one of partners in Nauru Mandate. Hence principles laid down in Part I, paragraph 1 (b) of Resolution on Negotiation, etc., of Treaties passed at Imperial Conference, 1923, as regards participation of other Governments, would be applicable in regard to negotiations instituted by Union Government, and also in regard to any similar negotiations which might be instituted by Commonwealth Government or New Zealand Government.

In any case it is very doubtful whether United States Government would welcome, after more than three years since correspondence started, suggestions for opening of entirely new channel for purpose of future discussion of subject so far as it affects South-West Africa or other "C" Mandated Territories.

For above reasons we feel that it would be best, if possible, to complete present correspondence through channel hitherto adopted, i.e., United States Ambassador in London, and we hope that on further consideration General Hertzog may agree. We, of course, appreciate necessity for explaining that any decision notified to United States Government as regards territories mandated to a particular Dominion is that of the Dominion Government, and draft note enclosed in despatch 6th September,¶ was worded with intention of making this clear.—AMERY.

If the chain of argument in this telegram read in conjunction with previous correspondence referred to therein is not quite clear in any point please let me know and I will send further explanation. I have not in my telegram made any reference to your Private and Personal telegram as I presume that General Hertzog will not have seen latter.

I propose to send you to-morrow a private and personal telegram‡ regarding extension of Extradition Treaties which you may like to show to General Hertzog.—

22ND JANUARY. Private and Personal. Your telegram of 14th January Private and Personal.† Negotiations with the United States of America regarding "C" Mandates. At the time of the receipt of your telegram I was absent from Pretoria and with the prospect of some delay before I could see my Prime Minister. I therefore decided to send him a copy of your telegram under reference with a covering letter in which I pointed out the unwisdom of attempting to force the independent status of the Dominions on Foreign Powers, especially the United States of America who were inclined to be sensitive on the point, and suggested that it would be better to trust to the educating process of time. I discussed the matter fully with my Secretary and informed Prime Minister that he could consult Alexander, who was fully aware of my point of view.

On receipt of the letter, Prime Minister sent for Alexander and said that he fully sympathized with the difficulty of the British Government, but the Dominions status must be recognized by Foreign Powers and the Union would accept no derogation from it. Alexander assured him of the British Government's acceptance of this view, but pointed out the difficulty of getting Foreign Powers to see the peculiar position of the Dominions in the Empire. Hertzog said that he saw this, and subject to the agreement of his colleagues he was prepared to allow the negotiations regarding "C" Mandates to continue in the present channel as suggested by you. He has now confirmed this by a private note to me and an official minute is to follow in a few days. I made no reference in my letter to the question of extradition treaties referred to in your telegram Private and Personal of the 15th January‡ but authorised Alexander to show the Prime Minister your telegram if necessary.

Prime Minister made no mention of it and Alexander thought it wiser not to bring the matter up as it was desirable to keep the issue as clear as possible and not introduce complications. I should be glad to learn what further steps you would like me to take in regard to the extradition question.

I will send you a copy of my letter to Hertzog and his reply by next mail.—

Enclosure in No. 584.

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 14th March, 1925.

HIS Majesty's Government have been in consultation with the Governments of the self-governing Dominions in the matter of the wishes of the Government of the United States of America in regard to the treatment of United States nationals and goods in the territories administered under the British "C" mandates.

2. As the United States Government were assured in the notes from the Marquess Curzon of Kedleston to Mr. Harvey of the 22nd and 29th December, 1921, dealing with Palestine and with the territories in Africa administered under "B" mandates, His Majesty's Government had never desired to deprive the United States of the fruits of a victory to which they had so generously contributed, and were willing to meet the wishes of the United States as regards the treatment of their nationals in those territories subject to the obligations imposed upon them by their existing treaty engagements. In this spirit His Majesty's Government entered upon the negotiation of treaties to regulate the position of the United States in the territories in question and have, as you are aware, concluded such treaties in terms satisfactory to your Government.

3. The contents of Mr. Harvey's several notes, the last of which was dated the 25th October, 1923, dealing with the territories administered under "C" mandates have been carefully examined with the object of determining how far it is possible to adopt in these territories a procedure similar to that followed in the case of the territories referred to in the preceding paragraph. This examination had led both His Majesty's Government and the Governments of the Dominions to the conclusion that it will not be possible to treat the "C" mandated territories on the same footing as those administered under the "A" and "B" mandates for the following reasons.

4. The terms of the different types of mandate vary fundamentally, and this variation has its basis in the terms of the Treaty of Versailles. It is true that the United States have not ratified that treaty, but that does not alter the fact that, as between Germany and those Powers which have ratified it, those provisions are binding. Under Article 119 of the treaty Germany renounced "in favour of the Principal Allied and Associated Powers all her rights and titles over her overseas possessions." Under Article 22 those possessions situated in South West Africa and the Southern Pacific were assigned to the mandatory with provision for their administration "under the laws of the mandatory as integral portions of its territory." This provision was incorporated in the terms of the "C" mandates which, as your Government are aware, have been approved and confirmed by the Council of the League of Nations.

5. The Government of the United States will remember that the plenipotentiaries representing the Commonwealth of Australia, New Zealand and the Union of South Africa refrained from pressing the question of the annexation of these particular territories at the earnest request of the United States Government or President at the time, but only on the express understanding that, in return for accepting, instead, mandates over these territories, they would be free to administer them as integral parts of the mandatory dominions. It is impossible now to admit any departure from this express understanding.

6. Apart from these considerations, the Governments of the Dominions would be unable, for reasons of a practical and physical nature, to comply in full with some of the claims advanced by the United States Government. With the object nevertheless of testifying to their friendly sentiments towards the United States, they are willing that an assurance should be given, embodied, if desired, in the form of a binding engagement, that so long as the terms of the mandates remain unaltered, United States nationals and goods will be treated in all respects on a footing equal to that enjoyed by the nationals and goods of any state member of the League of Nations, with the exception of those within the British Empire, subject only to the proviso that this shall not involve the violation of any existing treaty engagements towards third parties.

29TH MAY. Private and Personal. I have learned from a private source that my Ministers find themselves in a dilemma through having overlooked the full extent of their commitments when they agreed to the terms of the note to the United States Chargé d'Affaires regarding "C" Mandated territory(ies) a copy of which accompanied your despatch of 17th April, Confidential (2).‡

You will remember that there was some difficulty in persuading Ministers to conduct negotiations with the United States of America through the medium of the Foreign Office and it must be recognized that their final acquiescence was a considerable concession from their point of view. It is, therefore, particularly unfortunate that they should find themselves in an embarrassing position in this connexion.

Difficulties have arisen over the new Customs Tariff which as you are aware is an outstanding feature of the Government's legislative programme this session and which has been specially designed to give the Union the power of bargaining with other countries and obtaining special treatment for its products. Offer to the United States of America of most-favoured-nation treatment in South-West Africa made in paragraph 6 of the Foreign Office note very largely nullifies this and certainly deprives the Union of any bargaining power with the United States of America on which I believe that considerable hopes have been built. South-West Africa of course is treated as an integral part of the Union for customs purposes and though it would be possible to exclude it this would be undesirable both for administrative and for political reasons.

It was only on receipt of your Confidential despatch above referred to that the full significance of paragraph 6 of the Foreign Office note was realized and it has caused no little consternation. From my knowledge of my Prime Minister I feel perfectly confident that he will not seek to evade his responsibility but at the same time there is undoubtedly a danger when the fact becomes known that the section which is opposed to British connexion will endeavour to make use of the blunder as an example of the difficulties which arise from entrusting foreign negotiations to the British Government. For this reason and because I believe that a helpful attitude will be appreciated I should be particularly grateful for your advice as to whether you consider anything can be done to assist my Prime Minister out of the difficulty with which he is now faced.

It is possible that representations may be made to you in London by the Union High Commissioner but this communication is made to you on my own responsibility and I need hardly add that I am most anxious that my action should remain private.—ATHLONE.

MEMORANDUM.

THE position is that in paragraph 6 of the note to the United States Ambassador of the 14th March an offer was made to give an assurance to the United States Government that, so long as the terms of the "C" Mandates remain unaltered, United States nationals and goods will in South-West Africa be treated in all respects on a footing equal to that enjoyed by the nationals and goods of any State Member of the League, except those within the British Empire, provided that this will not involve the violation of any existing treaty engagements towards third parties. The proviso was inserted as a precaution of a general character but no such existing treaty engagements are in fact known. The offer is accordingly one of general most-favoured-nation treatment of United States goods in South-West Africa.

The practice which has obtained in the Empire for many years past has been to interpret "most-favoured-nation" treatment in Treaties with foreign countries in an unconditional sense, viz., as meaning that any country entitled to most-favoured-nation treatment in another can, without granting any compensation to the second country, claim the benefits of any concessions granted by that country to a third, even if the grant of those concessions by the second country to the third has been in return for special compensation. The presumption is accordingly that the United States Government have interpreted the offer made in the note of the 14th March in the sense set out above and this presumption is strengthened by the fact that the United States Government have recently changed their own practice in this respect. The traditional interpretation placed by the United States Government upon the term "most-favoured-nation treatment" was that, in cases where special concessions are granted by one country to another in return for a certain compensation, the benefit of the special concessions cannot be claimed by a third country under Treaty provisions granting most-favoured-nation treatment except in return for similar compensation. Recently, however, the United States Government have shown a disposition to conclude Treaties providing in terms for unconditional most-favoured-nation treatment, though this, it is understood, does not affect their interpretation of pre-existing Treaties. The annexed prints with regard to the exchange of notes between the United States and Brazil on the subject of commercial relations and the possibility of negotiations for a new Commercial Treaty between Great Britain and the United States show the altered attitude of the United States Government. It will be seen that in a letter to the Press on the former point the State Department of the United States observed, "This Government explained to the Government of Brazil that its policy henceforth would be to seek from Brazil, as from other countries, treatment for United States goods as favourable as might be accorded by Brazil to the products of any third country," and "Initial steps have recently been taken looking towards the negotiation of new Treaties of amity, commerce and consular rights with the five countries of central America, in each of which it is the purpose of this Government to incorporate a provision for unconditional most-favoured-nation treatment in customs matters, should such a provision be found to be agreeable to the Government of the other interested country." It will also be seen that in May, 1924, Mr. Hughes informed Sir E. Howard, in reply to an inquiry whether the United States were prepared to waive their former interpretation of the most-favoured-nation clause which laid it down that the benefits of the clause could only be claimed by countries which gave something in return for them, that by an unconditional most-favoured-nation clause he certainly implied that most-favoured-nation treatment would be accorded without any conditions of this kind being attached.

It may also be mentioned that the United States Tariff Act of 1922 contains a section (No. 317) whereby "the President when he finds that the public interest will be served thereby shall by proclamation specify and declare new or additional duties as hereinafter provided upon articles wholly or in part of the growth or product of any foreign country whenever he shall find as a fact that such country—

Imposes, directly or indirectly, upon the disposition in or transportation in transit through or re-exportation from such country of any article, wholly or in part the growth or product of the United States, any unreasonable charge, exaction, regulation, or limitation which is not equally enforced upon the like articles of every foreign country;

Discriminates in fact against the commerce of the United States, directly or indirectly, by law or administrative regulation or practice, by or in respect to any customs, tonnage or port duty, fee, charge, exaction, classification, regulation, condition, restriction, or prohibition, in such manner as to place the commerce of the United States at a disadvantage compared with the commerce of any foreign country."

In considering the effect which the offer to the United States, if it stands, might have in relation to the policy of the Union Government of endeavouring to negotiate special tariff arrangements with foreign countries, it is desirable to examine the existing Treaty position of the Union. At present there are Treaties with a number of countries, guaranteeing most-favoured-nation treatment, which apply to the Union or parts thereof (though not to South-West Africa) either as a result of accession or because they apply to His Majesty's Dominions generally. These are the Treaties with the Argentine (1825), Colombia (1866), Denmark (1660-1670), Italy (1883), Norway (1826), Paraguay (1884), Persia (1903), Sweden (1826), Switzerland (1855), and Venezuela (1825). There is also an arrangement with Spain whereby, in return for the rates of duty in the second column of the Spanish Customs Tariff, Spanish goods are granted most-favoured-nation treatment in the Union and South-West Africa.

From most of the above Treaties it is possible for the Union to withdraw separately by giving twelve months' notice, while the arrangement with Spain is terminable at six months' notice. In the case of the Treaties with the Argentine, Italy and Venezuela, however, it has been found impossible to secure the assent of the foreign country concerned to a provision rendering separate termination in respect of the Dominions possible, and the only method by which the Union could free itself from the obligation to grant most-favoured-nation treatment to these countries (apart from termination of the Treaties as a whole by His Majesty) would be by negotiating new Treaties to replace the Treaties in question as between the Union and the countries concerned.

If the Union were to negotiate with a foreign country a special tariff arrangement, the United States would not be able to claim the benefit of the special concessions granted to the foreign country in question, so far as United States goods imported into the Union itself were concerned, though these benefits could be claimed by all the countries entitled to most-favoured-nation treatment in the Union.

As regards the position of South-West Africa, which at present has the same customs tariff as the Union, two possible cases have to be considered:

(1) The arrangement with the foreign country might be such that the benefits of any special concessions granted would apply to goods reaching South-West Africa by any route including ports in the Union. In this case the United States might have ground for protest if United States goods imported into the Union and eventually reaching South-West Africa were in fact charged higher duties than those charged on goods from the foreign country in question reaching South-West Africa in a similar manner.

(2) The arrangement might be such that goods entering South-West Africa would only receive the benefit of the special concessions if imported through ports in South-West Africa. In this case United States goods could only claim the same concessions if imported through those ports.

In the circumstances, it is difficult to see any solution of the present difficulty which would free the hands of the Union Government in their customs policy, short of at least a partial withdrawal of the undertaking given to the United States Government. His Majesty's Government could not themselves recommend any such withdrawal, to which, indeed, they see serious objections. If, however, the Union Government on consideration feel such a step to be imperative, the course which in the view of His Majesty's Government would involve the least risk of difficulty with the United States Government would be to intimate to them, through the same channel as the undertaking itself was conveyed, that on further consideration it has occurred to the Union Government that the absence of a customs barrier between the Union and South-West Africa might render it difficult to carry out any arrangement on the lines of that set out in the Note of the 14th March* in respect of South-West Africa, without raising questions connected with the treatment of United States goods in the Union generally. This latter question could of course be dealt with should general negotiations between the Union Government and the United States Government take place as to commercial relations between the Union and the United States in pursuance of the policy outlined during the present session of the Union Parliament of negotiating special tariff arrangements with foreign countries, but in the meantime the Union Government think it right to make it clear that the offer in the Note of the 14th March* must not be construed as extending most-favoured-nation treatment to United States goods entering Union ports generally on the ground that it is impossible to say that the ultimate destination of such goods may not be South-West Africa.

EXTRACT FROM THE REPORT OF THE PERMANENT MANDATES
COMMISSION ON THE WORK OF ITS SIXTH SESSION (A.14. 1925, VI).

Geneva, 10th July, 1925.

II.—EXTENSION OF SPECIAL INTERNATIONAL CONVENTIONS TO MANDATED TERRITORIES.

IN accordance with the decision adopted by the Council on 8th June, 1925, the Permanent Mandates Commission considered the replies of the Mandatory Powers to the question submitted to them regarding the possibility of extending special international treaties and conventions to mandated territories.

The Commission would suggest that the Council might:

1. Recommend that the mandatory Powers, and also all States, whether Members or not of the League of Nations, which have concluded special treaties or conventions with the mandatory Powers, should agree to extend the benefits of such treaties or conventions to mandated territories if possible and expedient and if the provisions of these international agreements are consistent with the stipulations of the Covenant and the mandate;

2. Request the mandatory Powers, subject to the above reservations, to insert in any special treaties or conventions they may conclude hereafter a clause providing for their application to mandated territories;

3. Request the mandatory Powers to indicate in their annual reports the reasons and circumstances which have prevented the application to mandated territories of the special treaties or conventions which they may have concluded with other Powers during the period under review.

DOMINIONS OFFICE to FOREIGN OFFICE.

SIR,

Downing Street, 29th August, 1925.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Amery to request you to inform Mr. Secretary Chamberlain that he observes that page 2 of the Report on the work of the Sixth Session of the Permanent Mandates Commission (A.14. 1925, VI), copies of which have been received in this Office, contains observations on the questions of (1) Loans, Advances and Investments of Public and Private Capital in Mandated Territories, and (2) the extension of Special International Conventions to Mandated Territories.

2. The draft resolution as regards (1) proposed by the Commission seems satisfactory. As regards (2), a memorandum is enclosed for Mr. Chamberlain's information.

3. Before the Council of the League of Nations comes to a decision on either question, it will be desirable to ascertain the views of the Governments of the Mandatory Dominions, who have not yet received their copies of the Report and are, therefore, unaware of the Commission's recommendations, but Mr. Amery is not taking any action to this end at present as he assumes that, at its forthcoming Session, the Council will merely refer the Report to the Assembly and that a final decision will be postponed until a later Session.

4. If it appears likely that there will be any detailed discussion of these questions, either at the forthcoming Session of the Council or at the Assembly, the best course would appear to be to consult the representatives of the Mandatory Dominions who will be present in Geneva.

5. A copy of this letter is being sent to the Board of Trade.

I am, &c.,

C. T. DAVIS.

Enclosure in No. 592.

GENERALLY speaking, the suggestions of the Permanent Mandates Commission as to the extension of special international conventions to Mandated Territories are satisfactory so far as His Majesty's Government are concerned, though some modification in the wording may be desirable. It would appear from the previous discussions that the conventions which the Commission has mainly in mind are commercial treaties and extradition treaties.

The first suggestion of the Commission is that the Council might recommend that the Mandatory Powers and all States which have concluded special treaties or conventions with them should agree to extend the benefits of such treaties or conventions to Mandated Territories, if possible and expedient and if their provisions are consistent with the Covenant and the Mandate.

The Commission refers only to the benefits of existing treaties, but presumably foreign powers would not be prepared to extend to British Mandated Territories the benefits of such treaties unless the Mandated Territories accepted also the obligations under those treaties, i.e., what is contemplated would be accession of Mandated Territories to existing treaties.

In the letter to the League of Nations of the 29th April, 1924, His Majesty's Government have stated that, in the case of existing treaties which contain no provision for extension to Mandated Territories, they will be satisfied to take up the question of such extension with the particular foreign power concerned in any individual case where action appears desirable. This appears as far as it is necessary or desirable to go. The Mandates Commission has probably not realized the extent to which the application to Colonies and Protectorates of existing Commercial Treaties between His Majesty and foreign powers varies from treaty to treaty. Some treaties apply only to the United Kingdom and not to any of the Colonies or Protectorates; others apply to all Colonies but contain no provision for extension to Protectorates; others again applied, in the first instance, only to the United Kingdom, but were capable of extension to any Colony or Protectorate under an accession clause and have in fact been extended to various specific Colonies and Protectorates, the list of which varies in the case of each treaty. There seems no necessity for the extension to A and B Mandated Territories generally of treaties which do not apply to Colonies or Protectorates where conditions are similar and possibly contain no provision for such extension, especially as in most cases the Mandated Territories would gain little practical advantage from accession. It must be noted in this connexion that the mere extension of a general Commercial Treaty between this country and a foreign power to a Mandated Territory would not, in the absence of a special arrangement, entitle the natives of the territory to enjoy the personal privileges conferred by the treaty on British subjects generally, the position in this respect being the same as that which obtains in the case of Protectorates.

As regards the C Mandated Territories, the only Mandatory Dominion which specifically expressed its views on the point was the Commonwealth of Australia, which stated that it was considered that each particular case should be dealt with as it arises, but it is to be presumed that on general grounds the Mandatory Dominions would not welcome a suggestion that all existing Commercial Treaties which apply to them should be extended to their Mandated Territories. It will be remembered that there are numerous treaties concluded by His Majesty's Government which applied to the self-governing Dominions, either because they were concluded for His Majesty's Dominions generally or as a result of accession. As a result of the discussions at the Imperial Conference of 1911, the foreign countries concerned were approached with a view to provision being made for the separate termination of such treaties in respect of the Dominions. Most of the countries concerned agreed to such a provision, but a few did not. In all cases where it was found possible to secure such a provision, the Commonwealth of Australia has withdrawn separately from the treaties, and the Commonwealth only continues bound by the treaties with those countries which did not agree to provision for separate termination, of which the most notable are the Argentine Republic, Italy and Venezuela. New Zealand and the Union of South Africa, however, have not yet availed themselves of the right of separate withdrawal and consequently continue bound by a number of general Commercial Treaties with foreign countries.

It is also necessary to consider the converse case, i.e., extension to foreign Mandated Territories of treaties with the foreign mandatory power concerned which are binding upon this country or other parts of the Empire. This aspect of the matter does not particularly concern Australia, New Zealand, or the Union, as they are not parties to any general Commercial Treaties with France, Belgium or Japan, except the Additional Articles to the 1826 Treaty with France which apply to New Zealand and the Union. Canada and Newfoundland acceded to the Anglo-Japanese Treaty of 1911 and the question of their extending the benefits of this Treaty to Japanese Mandated Territories will shortly arise in connexion with the question of their accession to the recently signed Supplementary Commercial Convention with Japan. Canada also has her own treaties with Belgium and France; the former applies to Belgian Mandated Territories; the latter applies to French "Colonies, Possessions and Protectorates" but does not specify French Mandated Territories. The Irish Free State is, of course, bound by the existing Commercial Treaties with France, Belgium and Japan which apply to Great Britain.

Presumably, under the wording suggested by the Mandates Commission, it would be possible for His Majesty's Government and the Dominion Governments to decline to take up the question of the extension of existing Commercial Treaties to British Mandated Territories generally and to decline to extend the benefits of existing treaties to foreign Mandated Territories on the ground that such action was not "expedient" but it might be more satisfactory if the words "if possible and expedient" were altered to "if circumstances render such extension necessary or desirable."

No special difficulty arises on this point in connexion with Extradition Treaties, as it is already proposed to take up with the foreign countries concerned the possibility of extending existing Extradition Treaties to British Mandated Territories.

The second suggestion of the Commission is that in any special treaties or conventions hereafter concluded a clause should be inserted providing for their application to Mandated Territories.

It is already the practice to insert in general commercial treaties and in extradition treaties negotiated by His Majesty's Government provision for their extension to Mandated Territories if desired. It does not, of course, follow that all such treaties would be extended to all A and B Mandated Territories or that, if a Mandatory Dominion acceded to such a treaty for itself, it would also accede for its Mandated Territory. The suggestion of the Commission, however, seems satisfactory so long as (i) the expression "a clause providing for their application to Mandated Territories" is interpreted as meaning "a clause providing for the possibility of their application to Mandated Territories" and (ii) it is understood that the special treaties or conventions referred to are only those of importance, i.e., generally speaking, general Commercial Treaties and Extradition Treaties, and not the variety of treaty engagements on subjects of minor importance (e.g., the treatment of commercial travellers' samples or the exchange of information regarding lunatics) which His Majesty's Government are constantly entering into with foreign countries; the normal practice is to confine such arrangements to the United Kingdom and to leave it to the foreign Government concerned to raise the question of extension to other parts of the Empire, and it would be an unnecessary complication to have to insert in each case a provision for extension to Mandated Territories.

The third suggestion is that the mandatory powers should indicate in their annual reports the reasons which have prevented the application to Mandated Territories of treaties concluded during the period under review. It is not clear why it should be incumbent on the mandatory to give reasons and, if any reference to the matter in the annual report is necessary, it should suffice to state merely which such conventions have and which have not been applied to the Territory. If, however, foreign states attach importance to this part of the Commission's suggestions, there seems no reason for His Majesty's Government to press opposition to it. Presumably, it would be accepted as a sufficient reason for the non-application of a convention to a Mandated Territory that no advantage was seen in its application to the territory.

RESOLUTION ADOPTED BY THE COUNCIL OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS ON THE 15TH SEPTEMBER, 1925.

II.—EXTENSION OF SPECIAL INTERNATIONAL CONVENTIONS TO MANDATED TERRITORIES.

THE COUNCIL:

(1) Recommends that the mandatory Powers, and also all States, whether Members or not of the League of Nations, which have concluded special treaties or conventions with the mandatory Powers, should agree to extend the benefits of such treaties or conventions to mandated territories, if circumstances render such extension possible and expedient and if the provisions of these international agreements are consistent with the stipulations of the Covenant and the mandate;

(2) Requests the mandatory Powers, subject to the above reservations, to insert in any special treaties or conventions they may conclude hereafter a clause providing for the possibility of their application to mandated territories;

(3) Requests the mandatory Powers to indicate in their annual reports, if possible and expedient, the reasons and circumstances which have prevented the application to mandated territories of the special treaties or conventions which they may have concluded with other Powers during the period under review.

(4) Instructs the Secretary-General to bring this resolution to the attention of the mandatory Powers and all States Members of the League.

(3) Position of Mandated Territories in relation to Commercial Treaties.

WITH reference to the Duke of Devonshire's despatch No. [46*] [26†] [31†] of the 23rd of January, 1924, I have the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, for the information of your Ministers, the accompanying copy of a note from the Greek Minister regarding the application of commercial treaties to mandated territories, together with a copy of the note sent in reply.

SIR,

At the request of my Government, I have the honour to inquire whether the relations between Great Britain and foreign countries established by the existing commercial treaties and conventions also apply to the territories placed under a British mandate.

The Greek Government are desirous of ascertaining this point in order to know if Greece enjoys de facto in mandated territory the same privileges, exemptions from duties, and rights in general as are granted to her in the United Kingdom under the existing treaties.

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 19th January, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to communicate to you the following observations in reply to your note of the 3rd ultimo inquiring whether the relations between Great Britain and foreign countries established by existing commercial treaties apply also to territories administered by His Majesty's Government under mandate on behalf of the League of Nations.

2. In the opinion of His Majesty's Government the territorial application of commercial treaties with foreign Powers is settled in each case by the terms of the treaty itself; and in order to render it possible for such treaties to be applied to territories not forming part of His Majesty's Dominions (i.e., Protectorates and Mandated Territories) it is, therefore, necessary for the treaties to contain a special provision to that effect. Hence the existing commercial treaties with Greece are not regarded as applying to mandated territories, though it will be recollected that the mandates for Palestine, the Tanganyika Territory, Togoland and the Cameroons contain provisions according certain rights in commercial matters to the nationals of all States Members of the League of Nations. In the case of commercial treaties negotiated since the War it has been the practice to include provisions enabling their stipulations to be made applicable to any territory in respect of which a mandate on behalf of the League of Nations has been accepted by His Majesty, and in the event of a new treaty being negotiated with Greece His Majesty's Government would propose that such a provision should be inserted in it.

I have, &c.,

MINUTE No. 215.

Prime Minister's Office, 11th March, 1925.

MINISTERS have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of His Excellency the Governor-General's Minute No. 74/153 of 17th February, 1925, on the subject of the application of commercial treaties to mandated territories.

Ministers assume that the reference to mandates towards the end of the Foreign Office communication of 19th January, 1925, to the Greek Minister in London was, from its context, only intended to be a reference to "A" and "B" mandates and not a reference to any mandate accepted by His Majesty on behalf of a Dominion Government such as the mandate held by the Union Government for South-West Africa, and Ministers suggest that any such treaty should clearly indicate that the stipulations thereunder are not applicable to territories held under a "C" mandate, the mandatory whereof would negotiate its own treaty.

20TH MAY. Your despatch 13th March No. 91.* Reference to Mandated territories in last sentence of Foreign Office note of 19th January† to Greek Minister was made in general terms on account of provision which has been inserted in all recent Commercial Treaties negotiated on behalf of His Majesty's Government (see e.g., Articles 31 and 32 of Treaty with Germany) to effect that stipulations of such treaties do not apply to any mandated territory unless notice of accession given. Provision in question was designed primarily for use in case of "A" and "B" mandated territories, but is capable of application also in case of "C" mandated territories if so desired by any of Dominion Governments concerned. It had been contemplated, however, that in event of accession of a territory administered by a Dominion Government under mandate to any such Treaty being found desirable, form of notice would make it clear that initiative rested with Dominion Government concerned. In the light of recent correspondence relating to Extradition Treaties ending with your telegram 28th April‡ His Majesty's Government would be quite ready to amend relevant clause in future commercial treaties by adoption of same formula as that proposed for extradition treaties, see my telegram 14th April.§ If your Ministers concur His Majesty's Government will take steps accordingly. Please telegraph reply as several treaties now under negotiation where question arises.—AMERY.

1ST JUNE. Your telegram of 20th May.|| Applicability of Commercial Treaties between His Majesty's Government in London and foreign countries to "C" mandated territories. Ministers regret that they are unable to accede to suggestion that such a commercial treaty should be capable of application to a mandated territory for which the Union Government hold the Mandate, even though words are inserted therein that accession to the treaty should take place on the initiative only of the Union Government as Mandatory.

Ministers feel that this suggestion hardly meets the position indicated in their Minute No. 215 of 11th March last (my despatch of 13th March No. 91*) and that there is no real analogy between a commercial treaty and a treaty for extradition of fugitive criminals. They consider that in the latter case His Majesty enters into a treaty with a foreign Government for all His Dominions and that it is obviously a matter of convenience that when such a treaty is applied on a Dominion Government's initiative to the Dominion itself it should be capable of application on like initiative to a territory for which that Dominion Government holds a Mandate. And in the commercial treaty His Majesty presumably negotiates only for Great Britain and for such of His Possessions as do not enjoy responsible government. Inasmuch therefore as a Dominion Government would itself negotiate a commercial treaty with a foreign government and would in doing so have regard to special economic conditions of Dominion it would have to consider in each case whether it should negotiate also for application of that treaty to any territory for which it held a Mandate.

* No. 595. † Enclosure 2 in No. 594. ‡ No. 606. § No. 605. || No. 596.

For these reasons Ministers state that they must press for insertion of words in any commercial treaty negotiated by His Majesty's Government making clear that its conditions are not applicable to Dominion of the Union of South Africa or to territories in South-West Africa for which the Union Government holds Mandate.—ATHLONE.

TELEGRAM.

14TH NOVEMBER. Your telegram 1st of June.* His Majesty's Government agree that application of commercial treaties which they negotiate is now usually limited in manner described in your telegram and that right of Dominion Governments to negotiate direct with Foreign Governments extends also to mandated territories.

Accession clause in commercial treaties negotiated by His Majesty's Government is, however, designed to make it clear that geographical application of treaty is limited in first instance to this country and to foreign country concerned. This position is well understood by Foreign Governments and it is also appreciated that accession on behalf of a Dominion would only be arranged at express desire of Dominion Government concerned.

Moreover existence of clause in question has not hindered in any way initiation or progress of negotiations between a Dominion Government and a Foreign Government for conclusion of a separate commercial convention in cases where such negotiations have been thought desirable.

In the light of views expressed by your Ministers His Majesty's Government would not wish to carry further suggestion at end of my telegram of 20th May,† but they feel that it would be difficult to insert in text of commercial treaties negotiated by themselves provision on lines suggested by your Ministers. Such provision could hardly be confined in terms to Union and South-West Africa, while if it related to Dominions generally and territories mandated to them it could only be made if other Dominions agreed. Moreover, if, as is usual, treaty contained stipulation whereby oversea parts of Empire secure most-favoured-nation treatment in foreign country concerned without accession so long as in fact they grant similar treatment to that country, exclusion of Dominions from such stipulation might in any particular case operate to detriment of one or more Dominions. In connexion with this aspect of matter your Ministers may like to know that legislation was passed by Canadian Parliament last session setting out that it was desirable that Canada should have benefit of latter part of Article 23 of Anglo-Finnish Treaty and authorizing grant of most-favoured-nation treatment to Finnish goods accordingly. Further with regard to Treaty with Spain negotiated by His Majesty's Government in 1922, though it was not possible to include stipulation referred to above as to most-favoured-nation treatment, it was found desirable after consultation to conclude arrangements of analogous kind extending to certain Dominions and also to mandated territories.—AMERY.

Territories, I should prefer to await result of discussion with General Hertzog referred to in my telegram of yesterday Private and Personal* United States of America and "C" Mandates. Meanwhile, since extradition question may also come up in your conversation with General Hertzog, it may be convenient to give you outline of reply which I have in mind.

Extradition Acts 1870 to 1906 do not apply to any territories outside His Majesty's Dominions. Where an Extradition Treaty is concluded applying to Protectorates, effect is given to Treaty in those Protectorates not by Order in Council under Extradition Acts but by Proclamation or similar instrument under local legislation corresponding to those Acts, and we had assumed that similar course would be followed in case of any mandated territories to which extradition treaties might be made applicable.

Reason for inquiry in my telegram 2nd December† was as follows:—There are existing extradition treaties with over thirty countries in connexion with which question of extension to mandated territories arises. We thought that, if Union Government were desirous that extradition arrangements applying under these treaties as between Union itself and foreign countries should also apply as between South-West Africa and those countries, most convenient method of giving effect to their decision would be that general negotiations referred to in my telegram of 2nd December‡ should cover South-West Africa.—SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES.

CONFIDENTIAL. 17th March. Your Confidential telegram of 28th February,* extension of extradition treaties to mandated territories. Ministers are aware that the second paragraph of Article XVIII of the draft Treaty with the United States of America contemplates such procedure, but are advised that reference in that Article to "Two preceding Articles" still offers a certain danger of misconstruction. Whilst in the case of the United States Treaty there would be no objection to His Majesty's Ambassador at Washington giving notice on behalf of the Union Government of their desire that the treaty should be extended to South-West Africa, insertion in paragraph 2 of Article XVIII after the words "His Britannic Majesty" of the words "whether for Great Britain or for one of the self-governing Dominions aforesaid" would establish the position of the Dominion without doubt. In case of the United States treaty insertion of such words would also draw the attention of the United States Government to a fact it appears not to have appreciated hitherto. Ministers add that if formula above is open to objection they would accept any alternative having the same effect whether as regards the United States or any other treaty.—ATHLONE.

(c) in any formal extensions of existing treaties as contemplated in my telegram 2nd December* negotiations for which it is gathered your Ministers now agree it would be advisable to commence.

As regards form of words suggested by your Ministers, while His Majesty's Government agree in their general tenor, there is difficulty that, except in case of New Guinea, Western Samoa and South-West Africa, formal mandates do not specify part of Empire by which mandate is to be exercised and, further, that in case of Iraq although mandate was accepted by His Majesty no specific provision has been made for its exercise, position being regulated by Treaty of Alliance, see my despatch 9th February, Dominions 46.†

In the circumstances most convenient wording would seem to be to insert in paragraph in question after "His Britannic Majesty" words "including the territories in respect of which mandates are being exercised on behalf of His Britannic Majesty by the Government of Commonwealth of Australia, the Government of Dominion of New Zealand, and the Government of Union of South Africa" (see wording of second paragraph Preamble to mandates in question). The Commonwealth Government is of the opinion that it is desirable that the second paragraph of Article 18 of the draft should be amended by inserting after the words "mandated territories" the words "in the same manner as if they were possessions of His Britannic Majesty."

It is also thought advisable that the corresponding article in all future Treaties should be similarly expressed.

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 11th August, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Your Excellency's despatch Confidential (2) of the 1st April,* in which it was suggested that the second paragraph of Article 18 of the draft Extradition Treaty with the United States and the corresponding Article of future similar Treaties should be amended by inserting after the words "mandated territories" the words "in the same manner as if they were possessions of His Britannic Majesty."

2. His Majesty's Government appreciate the desire of your Ministers that there should be no doubt that any extension of the Treaty to the mandated territory of New Guinea would be in the same manner as if the territory were a possession of His Majesty, and they recognize that the addition suggested would bring the wording of the second paragraph of the Article into conformity with that of the first paragraph which relates to the application of the Treaty to certain specified British Protectorates. They fear, however, that the suggested addition might give rise to difficulty in the event of any Treaty containing such a provision being extended to certain British Protected States and to territories administered by His Majesty's Government under mandate.

3. Under the first paragraph of Article 17 of the draft Treaty with the United States and the corresponding Article of other Treaties, the requisition for the surrender of a fugitive criminal who has taken refuge in any of His Majesty's self-governing Dominions, Colonies or Possessions is to be addressed to the Governor-General, Governor, or chief authority of the Dominion, Colony or Possession by the chief Consular Officer of the foreign country concerned in the Dominion, Colony or Possession. If this provision were extended without qualification to certain British Protected States (e.g., Tonga and Sarawak), difficulty would arise in determining who was the "chief officer" for the purposes of this paragraph, since there is no authority in these States corresponding precisely to the Governor or High Commissioner in a Colony or Protectorate. Again, the mandated territories of Togoland and the Cameroons are administered as integral parts of the neighbouring Colonies of the Gold Coast and Nigeria respectively and the "chief officer" for the purposes of the first paragraph of Article 17 would be the Governor of the Colony in question. There may also be cases in which there is no Consular Officer of the foreign country concerned actually stationed in the territory to which the Treaty is extended and in such cases it will be necessary to specify who is the appropriate Consular Officer for the purposes of the Article.

4. In the circumstances His Majesty's Government would suggest that it would be preferable not to alter the wording of the second paragraph of Article 18 but to deal with the whole question of the application of Article 17 to any of the territories, to which the Treaty may be extended under the second paragraph of Article 18, in the exchange of notes by which the extension is effected. They hope that your Ministers will concur in this view.

25TH AUGUST. Secret. My despatch 30th of December, 1924, Dominions 599, Confidential.* Question of resumption of diplomatic relations with Mexico has for some time been under discussion. Main difficulty in the past has been refusal of Mexican Government to agree to any form of arbitration for settlement of claims of general character as distinct from those arising from revolutionary causes, but there now seems every prospect of agreement on following lines:—(1) Diplomatic relations to be resumed without further formalities. (2) His Majesty's Government will accept invitation extended by Mexican Government in 1921 to submit for settlement to a Mixed Commission claims of British subjects arising from revolutionary disturbances in Mexico and will proceed to enter into a convention which will define necessary procedure. (3) As regards claims of British subjects of a more general nature, it will be agreed that these shall be dealt with through diplomatic channel along lines of mutual conciliation and that claims not settled by diplomatic discussion within period of one year, to be prolonged by mutual consent if necessary to eighteen months, from date of presentation of first claim, shall be submitted for settlement to a Mixed Claims Commission or, if the two Governments cannot agree on constitution of such Commission, to the Permanent Court of International Justice. Necessary Convention to settle details of such arbitration to be signed later.

Contemplated that agreement as to claims on above lines should be embodied in exchange of notes terms of which are under discussion with Mexican Government. Mexican Government are anxious for settlement before Congress opens 1st September.

In course of discussions Mexican Government intimated that, if agreement reached, Mexican Consular Officers in His Majesty's Dominions would return to their posts.

Please inform your Prime Minister.—AMERY.

SIR,

Mexico, 7th September, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to enclose herewith copies of the notes exchanged between the Mexican Minister for Foreign Affairs and myself placing on record the agreement reached regarding the arrangements for dealing with the claims of British subjects against the Mexican Government. A translation of the Mexican note is also enclosed herewith.

I have, &c.,

NORMAN KING.

* No. 613. † First despatch only printed.

MR. KING TO GENERAL SAENZ.

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

Mexico, 31st August, 1925.

HIS Britannic Majesty's Government and the Mexican Government having now resumed diplomatic relations, I have the honour to inform your Excellency that His Majesty's Government accept the invitation extended by the Mexican Government on the 11th July, 1921, to Great Britain, with other nations, to submit for settlement to a mixed commission claims of British subjects arising from revolutionary disturbances in the Republic of Mexico and will proceed to enter into a convention with the Mexican Government which will define the necessary procedure.

With regard to claims of British subjects of a more general nature, that is to say, any claims not arising from revolutionary causes, I have the honour to record as follows the understanding of His Majesty's Government as to the procedure which is to be followed:—

His Majesty's Government and the Mexican Government agree that such claims shall be dealt with through the diplomatic channel along lines of mutual conciliation, and they further agree that such claims of a general nature as have not been settled by diplomatic discussion within a period of one year, to be prolonged by mutual consent, if necessary, to eighteen months, from the date of the presentation of the first claim, shall be submitted for settlement to a mixed claims commission, or, if the two Governments are not able to agree on the constitution of such a commission, to the Permanent Court of Arbitration at The Hague. The necessary convention to settle details of such arbitration shall be signed before the expiration of the above-mentioned period of one year, or eighteen months, as the case may be.

The present note on behalf of His Majesty's Government and Your Excellency's reply on behalf of the Mexican Government will accordingly be regarded as placing on record the agreement reached by our respective Governments in the matter.

I am further instructed to convey to Your Excellency an expression of the satisfaction with which His Majesty's Government regard the conclusion of the present understanding, and of their hope that, under the above-mentioned procedure, all outstanding questions may be speedily settled.

I avail, &c.,

NORMAN KING.

GENERAL SAENZ TO MR. KING.

(Translation.)

M. LE CHARGÉ D'AFFAIRES,

Mexico, 31st August, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to reply to your note of to-day's date.

My Government take note that the British Government accept the invitation made to them by Mexico—as also to the other interested nations—to submit to a mixed commission the claims which British subjects may have arising out of revolutionary disturbances which occurred in the Mexican Republic, and also take note that they are ready to sign a convention which shall determine the necessary procedure for that purpose. In this respect I have pleasure in notifying to the British Government, through your intermediary, that my Government are equally well disposed to negotiate and to carry out the aforesaid convention.

It is also gratifying to me to declare that my Government share the view of His Britannic Majesty's Government regarding the claims of a more general nature, that is to say, regarding those claims of British subjects which do not arise from revolutionary causes. The Mexican Government are willing that such claims should be treated through diplomatic channels, in a spirit of mutual conciliation, and further, agree that if these claims should not be settled by means of diplomatic discussion, to be conducted within a period of one year—which may be prolonged by mutual consent, if necessary, up to eighteen months, counting from the date on which the first claim is presented—they be submitted to a mixed commission, or, if both Governments should be unable to come to an agreement for the constitution of such commission, to the Permanent Court of Arbitration of The Hague. It is understood that the convention required for the arrangement of the details of such arbitrations shall be signed before the expiration of the aforesaid periods of one year, or eighteen months, as the case may be.

Lastly, the Mexican Government accept that this their note, and the note of His Britannic Majesty's Government which gives rise to it, be regarded, by mutual consent, as a proof of the understanding arrived at by the two Governments in this matter.

The Mexican Government desire to express to His Majesty's Government, through my intermediary, the appreciation with which they receive the satisfaction expressed by His Majesty's Government, in regard to the present agreement, and in turn record the pleasure they feel at having reached it, thus demonstrating, once again, the good intentions by which they have always been actuated, and the desire they have to continue treating with England all matters within the sphere of the law of nations and of goodwill in order to strengthen daily the relations now so happily resumed.

I avail, &c.,

AARON SAENZ.

16TH NOVEMBER. Confidential. My telegram 28th August.* Draft Convention between His Majesty the King and Mexican President for settlement of claims in respect of losses suffered by British interests during revolutionary period in Mexico has been prepared with a view to submission to Mexican Government. Draft is based on similar conventions concluded with Mexico by United States of America and France. Following is summary of operative provisions:—

Begins: Article One. Claims referred to in Article Three are to be submitted to commission of three members, one appointed by His Majesty, one by Mexican President and third, who is to preside, to be selected by mutual agreement between His Majesty's Government and Mexican Government. If two Governments cannot agree within two months of exchange of ratifications of Convention, third member to be designated by President of Permanent Administrative Council of Permanent Court of Arbitration at The Hague, to whom request is to be made by the two Governments within one month or, after expiration of that period, by one of the two Governments. Third member is to be neither British nor Mexican nor national of a country having claims against Mexico identical with those dealt with in Convention. In case of death, absence or incapacity of any member or in event of any member omitting or ceasing to act same procedure to be followed in filling vacancy as was followed in appointing him.

Article Two. Commissioners to meet at Mexico City within six months after exchange of ratifications and each member to make solemn declaration before entering on his duties. Commission may fix time and place of subsequent meetings as may be convenient subject to special instructions of the two Governments.

Article Three reads: "The Commission shall examine and decide all claims against Mexico, as defined in the following paragraph, arising from losses or damages suffered by British subjects, whether corporations, companies, associations, partnerships or individuals in respect of either their persons or properties during the revolutions and disturbed conditions which existed in Mexico for the period from the 20th November, 1910, to the 31st May, 1920, inclusive, including losses or damages suffered by such British subjects by reason of losses or damages suffered by any corporation, company, association or partnership in which such British subjects have or have had a substantial and bonâ fide interest, provided an allotment to the British claimant by the corporation, company, association or partnership of his proportion of the loss or damage is presented by the claimant to the commission, and provided that such claims have been communicated to His Britannic Majesty's Government for presentation to the Mexican Government or are so communicated within the time hereinafter specified.

The claims to be so dealt with are those which are due to action by one or any of the following forces:—

1. By forces of a Government de jure or de facto;
2. By revolutionary forces as a result of the triumph of whose cause Governments de facto or de jure have been established, or by revolutionary forces opposed to them;
3. By forces arising from the dispersal of the forces mentioned in the next preceding paragraph up to the time when the Government de jure established itself as a result of a particular revolution;
4. By federal forces that were disbanded; and
5. By mutinies or mobs, or insurrectionary forces other than those referred to under sub-divisions 2, 3 and 4 above, or by bandits, provided in any case it be established that the appropriate authorities omitted to take reasonable measures to suppress such forces of insurrectionists, mobs or bandits, or failed to punish them or were negligent and might have prevented the damage arising or were in fault in other respects.

The Commission shall also examine and decide all claims in respect of losses or damages arising from acts by the civil authorities, provided that such acts are due to the revolutionary events or disturbances during the above-mentioned period, and provided that the acts were executed by one of the forces mentioned under Nos. 1, 2 and 3 of the present article."

Article Four. Commission may establish rules of proceedings by majority decision. Each of the two Governments may nominate agent and counsel with authority to present arguments for or against any claim, to produce documents, and to examine witnesses. Decision of majority of members of Commission is to be decision of Commission. Proceedings to be conducted and recorded in English and Spanish.

Article Five. In order that Commission may keep accurate records and minutes each of the two Governments may appoint a secretary and other necessary assistants. Commission may also appoint any necessary officials.

Article Six. Mexican Government agree that Commission shall not disallow or reject any claim by application of general principle of international law that legal remedies must be exhausted as condition precedent to validity or allowance of any claim.

Article Seven. Every claim to be filed with Commission within nine months from first meeting unless reasons for delay satisfactory to majority of Commissioners shall be established, and in any such case period for filing claim may be extended by not more than six months. Commission to decide within two years from first meeting all claims filed. Commission to submit reports on work to each of the two Governments every four months and to decide any claim within six months after conclusion of hearing.

Article Eight. High Contracting Parties agree to consider proceedings and decisions of Commission as final.

Article Nine. Total amount awarded to claimants to be paid in gold coin or equivalent by Mexican Government to His Majesty's Government.

Article Ten. Each of the two Governments to pay its own commissioner and secretaries and bear its own expenses. Expenses of Commission including salary of third commissioner to be defrayed in equal proportions by the two Governments.

Article Eleven. In case of divergence between English and Spanish texts of Convention former to prevail.

Article Twelve. Ratification Article. Ends.

Should your Ministers desire to offer any observations on provisions of Convention His Majesty's Government would be glad to receive them at earliest possible date since it is desired that Convention should be signed as soon as possible in order that it may be considered by Mexican Congress before it rises at end of December.

Copies of draft Convention follow by mail.

CONFIDENTIAL. My telegram 16th November,* Mexican Claims Convention. Mexican Government have now put forward counter-draft which they claim follows more closely form of conventions concluded with other countries, e.g., France and United States of America. Draft differs in certain respects from British draft, most important variation being in Article 3, which, as regards claims of companies, etc., in which British nationals are interested, provides that claim can only be dealt with where interest of the injured party exceeds 50 per cent. of total capital of company. Article 2 states that compensation afforded as result of findings of commission will be made by Mexican Government as Act of Grace.

Article 4 provides for final decision by President when there is no majority.

Article 6 provides that in determining compensation for damage to property account shall be taken of value declared by interested parties for fiscal purposes. Article 11 provides that Spanish text shall be accepted as authentic.

His Majesty's Government attach special importance to ratification during present session of Mexican Senate, as Senate does not meet again until September next. His Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires has therefore been instructed that while he should press as far as possible for acceptance of British version of Article 3 he should if necessary concede chief Mexican desiderata as outlined above provided Mexican Government agree to accept the British draft modified on those lines.—AMERY.

2. As regards paragraph 2 of your despatch, it was recommended in Part I, paragraph 3, of the Resolution, that the existing practice in connexion with the ratification of treaties should be maintained. This practice is to quote in the Instrument of Ratification the full text of the Convention which is being ratified, and as a general rule the terms of the Convention itself will indicate clearly whether the obligations under it apply in respect of the whole Empire or, if not, in respect of which parts (vide Part I, paragraph 2 (a) of the Imperial Conference Resolution). A third class of case is possible, viz., that where the obligations in relation to foreign countries under a multilateral Convention may be made applicable either in respect of the whole Empire or in respect of some parts and not of others. Under present conditions, this chiefly occurs in connexion with Conventions negotiated under the

CERTIFIED COPY OF A MINUTE OF A MEETING OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL, APPROVED BY THE DEPUTY OF HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL ON THE 20TH AUGUST, 1925.

(P.C. 1323.)

THE Committee of the Privy Council have had before them a Report, dated 31st July, 1925, from the Right Honourable W. L. Mackenzie King, Secretary of State for External Affairs, submitting a copy of the Convention between Canada and the Netherlands for the improvement and extension of their commercial relations, signed at Ottawa on the 11th July, 1924.

The Minister observes that the Convention has been approved by an Act of the Canadian Parliament passed at the last Session, and also by the "States-General" at the Hague, and an inquiry has now been received from the Consul-General of the Netherlands regarding the steps to be taken for the exchange of ratifications of the Convention.

The Committee, on the recommendation of the Secretary of State for External Affairs, advise that Your Excellency may be pleased to forward a certified copy of the Convention to the Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs, with the request that His Majesty be humbly moved to ratify the Convention and that the instrument of ratification be forwarded to Your Excellency to be exchanged in due course against the ratification of the Queen of the Netherlands.

OPIUM CONVENTIONS, 1925.

No. 647.

MEMORANDUM BY MR. MALKIN OF THE FOREIGN OFFICE.

SIR E. CROWE,

THERE was one incident during the Opium Conference at Geneva which I think it desirable to place on record, at the risk of some prolixity, in case any question about it should subsequently arise.

As you are aware, some, though not all, of the conventions negotiated under the auspices of the League of Nations contain a provision to the effect that the convention in question is not to be interpreted as regulating the rights and obligations inter se of the various parts of the British Empire. The history of this article and the cases in which it has or has not been inserted are stated as follows in a memorandum* which the Colonial Office have just sent us in connexion with the registration of the Irish "treaty" by the Free State Government:—

"Early in 1921 the question arose in connexion with the League of Nations Conference on Transit and Communications at Barcelona how best to indicate in technical Conventions of the kind negotiated at that Conference that the internal relations between different parts of the British Empire were not to be regarded as regulated by the terms of the Conventions. After a good deal of discussion, the question was settled by the insertion of the following clause in the Conventions relating to Freedom of Transit (Treaty Series 27 of 1923) and the régime of Navigable Waterways (Treaty Series 29 of 1923):—

It is understood that this Statute must not be interpreted as regulating in any way rights and obligations inter se of territories forming part or placed under the protection of the same sovereign State whether or not these territories are individually Members of the League of Nations.

The same Article appears in the Customs Formalities Convention negotiated at Geneva in October and November, 1923, and in the Conventions relating to railways, maritime ports, electric power, and hydraulic power negotiated at the Conference on Transit and Communications held at Geneva in the autumn of 1923.

The insertion of the same or a similar Article has been considered in connexion with other Conventions (e.g., that on Workmen's Compensation negotiated at the International Labour Conference, 1924) but on the occasion of the latter Convention it was thought unnecessary to insist on the Article, and it does not appear in other Conventions such as that on the Traffic in Women and Children (Treaty Series 26 of 1923) and on Obscene Publications. The main question to be considered in each case is whether the Convention simply contains provisions of an administrative character, or whether it may lead to arbitration or judicial decisions, e.g., a reference to the Permanent Court of International Justice."

* No. 363 in Dominions No. 93.

When the draft articles prepared by the committees of the Opium Conference came up before the drafting committee to be turned into a convention, I had of course to consider whether the article referred to above should be inserted in the convention or not, and I formed the definite opinion that it was both unnecessary and undesirable that it should. The only provisions in the convention to which the article in question could have any application are those prescribing that shipments from one country to another of the substances to which the convention applies must be covered by certain documents issued by the importing and exporting countries—what is called colloquially the "import certificate system." These provisions are certainly, in the words of the Colonial Office memorandum, "simply of an administrative character," and they are really a reproduction of the system which already exists in this country. This system is, I understand, at present applied, not only to shipments of the substances concerned between this country and the self-governing Dominions, but also to shipments to the Colonies, and this is certainly as it should be, for the whole object of the system is to control the passage of the substances from one country to another and the political relationship between the countries concerned is not in point at all. In any case it is certainly the intention of our authorities that the provisions in question should in fact be applied as between this country and the different parts of the Empire. If, therefore, the article in question were inserted in the convention, its only effect would have been to entitle us to do something which we had no intention of doing, and to produce an entirely erroneous impression as to our intentions. This would, in the circumstances of the conference, have been most undesirable, for the British Delegation took the lead in pressing for the adoption of the provisions in question, and if when this had been obtained the conference got the impression that we did not intend to apply these provisions as between the different parts of the British Empire there would certainly have been a storm, and the acceptance of the provisions might have been seriously jeopardized. I accordingly decided, after consulting Sir Malcolm Delevingne, not to attempt to get the article in question into the convention. I may add that the presence at the conference of Mr. MacWhite, the permanent Irish Free State representative at Geneva, who is, of course, thoroughly familiar with the controversy about the Irish "treaty," rendered it impossible to discuss the point with all the Dominion representatives and get their concurrence in the course proposed. Incidentally, this difficulty will continue until the general question of the position of the Dominions who are Members of the League of Nations has been further elucidated by inter-Imperial agreement, for at present it is practically impossible to reach agreement on such points by holding a meeting of the British Empire Delegation at any Geneva conference, and most undesirable to have a discussion on such points in open conference.

When the drafting committee were preparing the so-called "Protocol articles," which figure at the end of every convention, the Japanese delegate, Mr. Sugimura, who raises the question of the position of the British Empire at every conference which he attends, asked me privately whether we were proposing to ask for the insertion of the article in question. I told him not and explained why, and he appeared quite satisfied. When, however, the "Protocol articles" were being considered by the plenary conference, he rose and said that he desired to place it on record that the omission of the article was intentional, and asked that his statement might be recorded in the Minutes. It seemed to me that if after this statement (which in itself we had no reason to quarrel with) nothing was said from our side, it might create a misleading impression, and might even be made the basis of a suggestion in future that we had abandoned the principle which the article in question represents. There was no time for anything beyond a very hurried consultation with Sir Malcolm Delevingne, for the Japanese delegate had not told me beforehand that he was going to raise the point; it was just at the end of the meeting and I had to leave Geneva the same evening. I therefore rose and confirmed the statement that the omission of the article in question was deliberate, and added that my Japanese colleague was as familiar as I was with the reasons which made the article in question necessary in certain conventions (a statement to which he indicated assent), and that the reason why we did not ask for its insertion in the present convention was that the only provisions to which it could have any application were those to which I have referred above, and that in our view at any rate those provisions ought to be complied with in relation to shipments of the substances in question between different parts of the British Empire, and that, therefore, to have inserted the article would have given an impression of our intentions which was precisely the opposite of the truth. The Japanese delegate thanked me for this statement, with which he declared himself quite satisfied, and the subject then dropped. I may add that at the moment when the point was raised none of the Dominion representatives were in their places (which in the case of the Irish representative may have been rather a good thing) but the Canadian representative, who came in while I was speaking, expressed afterwards his full agreement with the line I had taken.

I think, therefore, that the principle which we wish to maintain has been amply safeguarded so far at any rate as the inherent difficulties of the situation ever allow this to be done. The point arises in some form or other at nearly every Geneva conference, and one difficulty is that it is by no means certain that the views of all the Dominions on the point are the same as ours.

21ST MAY. My telegram 7th January.* As your Ministers will be aware, work of Opium Conferences finally resulted in adoption of Agreement supplementary to Opium Convention 23rd January, 1912, and of Convention relating to Dangerous Drugs, with Protocols in both cases. Copies were forwarded by Secretary-General, League of Nations, to Members of League in letters C.L. 21 (a) 10th March, and C.L. 22, 11th March. Subject to concurrence of Government of India, proposed that Agreement supplementary to Opium Convention with protocol which apply only to Far Eastern territories should be ratified by His Majesty subject to any necessary exceptions as regards territories under His Majesty's protection.

Further proposed that Drugs Convention with protocol should be ratified on behalf of this country. Governments of Newfoundland, Southern Rhodesia, and Colonies not possessing responsible Government, and Protectorates are being consulted as to whether any excluding declaration under Article XXXIX desired in their case. It would be convenient to His Majesty's Government to learn before instrument of ratification prepared whether Dominion Members of League desire that Drugs Convention and protocol should also be ratified on their behalf. SIR, Downing Street, 23rd May, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to invite reference to the Agreement and Convention resulting from the work of the Opium Conferences recently held at Geneva copies of which were forwarded by the Secretary-General of the League of Nations to the Members of the League in his letters C.L. 21 (a), 1925, V of the 10th March, and C.L. 22, 1925, V of the 11th March respectively.

2. Subject to the concurrence of the Government of India, it is proposed that the Agreement supplementary to the International Opium Convention of the 23rd January, 1912, with the Protocol thereto (which apply only to Far Eastern territories) should be ratified by His Majesty the King, subject to any necessary exceptions as regards territories under His Majesty's protection.

3. It is further proposed that the Convention relating to Dangerous Drugs with the Protocol thereto should be ratified on behalf of this country, and the Governments of Newfoundland, Southern Rhodesia, and the Colonies not possessing responsible Government, and Protectorates are being consulted as to whether any excluding declaration under Article XXXIX of the Convention is desired in their case.

4. It would be convenient to His Majesty's Government to learn, before the instrument of ratification of the Drugs Convention and Protocol is prepared, whether Your Excellency's Ministers would desire that these instruments should also be ratified on behalf of the Irish Free State.

5. A similar inquiry has been made of the other Dominion Members of the League by telegraph.

the work of the recent International Conferences at Geneva on the Traffic in Opium and Dangerous Drugs, viz. :—

(i) An agreement supplementary to the International Opium Convention of the 23rd January, 1912, with a Protocol thereto (C. 82. M. 41);

(ii) A Convention relating to Dangerous Drugs with a Protocol thereto (C. 88. M. 44).

2. Subject to the concurrence of the Government of India, it is proposed that the supplementary agreement with the Protocol thereto (which apply only to Far Eastern territories) should be ratified by His Majesty the King, subject to any necessary exceptions as regards territories under His Majesty's protection.

3. It is further proposed that the Convention relating to Dangerous Drugs with the Protocol thereto should be ratified on behalf of this country. It will be seen that under Article XXXIX of the Convention any State signing the Convention may declare, at the moment of ratification, that its acceptance does not include any or all of its Colonies, overseas possessions, protectorates, or overseas territories under its Sovereignty or authority. I should be glad to learn whether your Ministers would desire that a declaration in this sense should be made in respect of [Newfoundland] [Southern Rhodesia] at the time of deposit of His Majesty's ratification of the Convention and Protocol. In this connexion I would invite attention to paragraph 1 of the Final Act of the Conference (page 23 of C. 88. M. 44).

Article nine is of nature of exception to or relaxation of general provisions for prohibition of sale of drug to unauthorized persons which appear in 1912 Convention and are re-enacted in Article seven, new Convention, and stock-owners and ranchers who are granted permits under Notice 368 would be regarded as authorized persons for purposes of Article seven.

As regards second point, requirement of quarterly statistics under Article 22 forms essential part of scheme for establishment of Permanent Central Board (see pages 37, 39 and 40, Report of Opium Conferences, enclosed in my despatch 27th July, 270*) and was agreed upon by Conference only after considerable negotiation and discussion. It would therefore be embarrassing if it were now found necessary to exclude from provisions of this Article any part of Empire to which Convention as a whole was being applied, and in the circumstances it is hoped that your Ministers will not press suggestion.—AMERY.

(No. 560.)

SIR,

British Legation, Warsaw, 8th December, 1924.

WITH reference to my telegram No. 113 of the 28th November, I have the honour to report that the bill empowering the Polish Government, in certain cases, to increase the existing customs duties by 100 per cent. and to charge customs duties on goods the import of which is, at present, free, has now become law.

I beg to enclose a translation of the law as published in the Journal of Laws of the Polish Republic, No. 102 of the 1st December.

This law has been passed in order to give the Polish Government a free hand to increase the customs duties on German goods in the event of the German Government refusing most-favoured-nation treatment to Polish goods after the expiration, on the 10th January, 1925, of the period during which that Government undertook, in virtue of Article 264 of the Treaty of Versailles, to grant such treatment to the goods of the Allied and Associated States.

Article 1.

MAXIMUM import duties will be fixed at twice the duties set out in the customs tariff of the 26th June, 1924.

For goods on which, according to the customs tariff of the 26th June, 1924, no duty is charged at present, maximum import duties will be introduced.

* No. 466 in Dominions No. 93.

These maximum import duties are applicable in the following cases for goods originating in countries with which Poland has not yet concluded a commercial treaty:—

(a) Where Polish goods are not subject to the most-favoured-nation treatment;

(b) Where the export of goods to the territory of the Republic of Poland is assisted by means of open or concealed premiums.

2. The enumeration of the countries and of the goods to which paragraph 1 will be applied and the list of the maximum import duties for goods which until now are imported free of duty, will be made the subject of a separate order.

9TH JUNE. Portuguese Government have communicated to His Majesty's Government new regulations relating to tonnage measurement and have asked that in view of these His Majesty's Government will recognize for purposes of Merchant Shipping Act tonnage denoted on Portuguese papers issued after 5th July, 1924. New regulations are considered substantially equivalent to British regulations and accordingly proposed to negotiate agreement on lines of those with Finland and Japan, see my despatch 30th August, 1924, Dominions 424,† my despatch 9th March, 1923, Dominions 77.‡ Do your Ministers concur? If agreement on these lines concluded it would be placed on record at time of signature that agreement made with consent of Dominions.—AMERY.

Foreign Office, S.W.1.

8th September, 1925.

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

WITH reference to your note of 5th June last, and to previous correspondence regarding the proposed agreement between Portugal and Great Britain for the reciprocal recognition of regulations relating to tonnage measurement, I have the honour to inform you that His Majesty's Government are prepared to conclude an agreement with the Portuguese Government in the terms of the enclosed draft. If the latter meets with the approval of your Government I shall be glad to sign the agreement with Your Excellency as soon as possible.

* No. 675. † No. 674.

2. His Majesty's Government propose to place on record the fact that the agreement is made with the consent of the self-governing Dominions and India. This could conveniently be done by means of an exchange of notes at the time of signature.

3. I regret that I have been unable until now to furnish you with a definite answer in this matter, owing to the fact that it was necessary to ascertain the wishes of the Dominion Governments in regard to the agreement.

I have, &c.,

(For the Secretary of State),

Draft Agreement.

His Britannic Majesty's Government and the Portuguese Government have agreed as follows:—

In view of the fact that the existing laws and regulations of Great Britain in regard to measurement of tonnage of merchant ships are in substantial agreement with those of Portugal, British ships furnished with certificates of registry and other national papers duly issued by the competent British authorities shall be deemed by the Portuguese authorities to be of the tonnage denoted in the said documents, and shall be exempted from being re-measured in any port or place within the Portuguese territory or in localities under the control of Portugal, on condition that similar terms shall be accorded to Portuguese ships equipped with certificates of registry or other national papers duly issued by the competent Portuguese authorities on or after the 5th July, 1924, and that such ships shall be exempted from being re-measured in any place within His Britannic Majesty's Dominions or under His Britannic Majesty's protection or control.

Either of the contracting parties may, on giving to the other twelve months' notice to that effect, terminate this agreement either as a whole or separately in respect of any of the following parts of His Britannic Majesty's Dominions, viz., the Dominion of Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, the Dominion of New Zealand, the Union of South Africa, the Irish Free State, Newfoundland, and His Majesty's Indian Empire.

In the event of the agreement being terminated in respect of any such part of His Britannic Majesty's Dominions the agreement shall cease to apply to British ships registered therein.

In witness thereof the under-signed have signed the present agreement and have fixed thereto their seals.

MONSIEUR LE SECRÉTAIRE D'ÉTAT,

le 9 janvier, 1925.

D'ORDRE de mon Gouvernement j'ai l'honneur de transmettre à votre Excellence les copies certifiées conformes ci-jointes des Actes signés au Congrès postal universel de Stockholm, savoir:—

Convention postale universelle,

Arrangement concernant les lettres et les boîtes avec valeur déclarée,

Arrangement concernant les colis postaux,

Arrangement concernant les mandats de poste,

Arrangement concernant les virements postaux,

Arrangement concernant les recouvrements,

Arrangements concernant les abonnements aux journaux et écrits périodiques.

Un de ces exemplaires est destiné au Gouvernement britannique, les autres sont destinés aux autorités compétentes de l'Empire de l'Inde britannique, du Canada, de la Commonwealth de l'Australie, de la Nouvelle-Zélande, de l'Etat libre d'Irlande, de l'Union de l'Afrique du Sud et des "diverses colonies et protectorats britanniques."

Je me permets d'attirer en même temps votre attention sur:—

* No. 476 in Dominions No. 93. † No. 484 in Dominions No. 93. ‡ No. 470 in Dominions No. 93.

l'article IX du Protocol final de la Convention postale universelle, d'après lequel le Protocole reste ouvert à la Commonwealth de l'Australie, à l'Equateur, au Guatemala, à la République du Honduras, au Nicaragua et au Salvador;

l'article X du même Protocole, suivant lequel le Protocole demeure ouvert en faveur des Pays dont les représentants n'ont signé que la Convention postale universelle ou un certain nombre seulement des Arrangements arrêtés par le Congrès, à l'effet de leur permettre d'adhérer aux autres Arrangements, ou à l'un ou à l'autre d'entre eux, et l'article XI du dit Protocole, fixant au 1^{er} septembre, 1925, le délai accordé aux pays énumérés dans l'article IX pour leur notification d'adhésion.

Je dois aussi signaler à Votre Excellence le fait que, bien que l'Union des Républiques Soviétiques Socialistes soit nommée dans le préambule de l'Arrangement sur les colis postaux, celui-ci ne porte pas la signature des plénipotentiaires de l'Union; suivant l'article X mentionné ci-dessus, l'Union garde toutefois la faculté d'y adhérer.

Finalement je me permets de porter ce qui suit à la connaissance de votre Gouvernement.

D'après l'article XIII de la Convention postale universelle, les Actes du Congrès doivent être ratifiés aussitôt que possible et les ratifications doivent être communiquées au Gouvernement du Pays siège du Congrès, c'est-à-dire dans le cas présent au Gouvernement suédois. Suivant les dispositions finales de tous les Actes signés au Congrès ceux-ci seront mis à exécution le 1^{er} octobre, 1925.

Dans ces conditions il serait désirable que les instruments des ratifications parviennent à Stockholm au plus tard le 1^{er} septembre, 1925. Mon Gouvernement se propose de dresser à cette date l'acte de dépôt de tous les instruments de ratification qui lui auront été transmis. Copie de cet acte sera remise à chacune des Parties contractantes.

Veuillez agréer, Monsieur le Secrétaire d'Etat, les assurances de ma plus haute considération.

Monsieur Austen Chamberlain, M.P.,

Secrétaire d'Etat pour les Affaires Etrangères, etc., etc., etc.

Copies of the Universal Postal Convention of Stockholm and of the Agreement concerning Insured Letters and Boxes were enclosed in my despatch under reference.]

2. The following conclusions reached by the Postmaster-General in connexion with certain of the decisions of the Congress may be of interest to your Ministers:—

(a) Under the terms of Article 34, sub-section 1, of the Convention, Administrations are authorized, as a reciprocal measure, to grant a reduction of 50 per cent. of the ordinary postage at the printed papers rate on (1) newspapers and periodicals posted directly by the publishers, (2) sewn or bound books not containing advertisements, (3) literary and scientific works exchanged between learned institutions. As the ordinary Printed Paper rate is unremunerative, it follows that this reduced rate must entail a loss, and for this reason it is not proposed to adopt it as far as this country is concerned.

(b) The Congress decided (Article 34, sub-section 9) that packets prepaid at the letter rate may contain dutiable articles if the country of destination agrees to admit such packets. The packets must bear either a special label (D ter) giving particulars of the contents, or a label (D quater) and, in that case, be accompanied by a separate Customs declaration form. The Postmaster-General considers that the Letter Post is not the proper medium for the importation of dutiable articles, and in these circumstances letter packets containing dutiable articles will not be admitted into Great Britain, although such packets will be forwarded from this country to those countries which do not object to the importation of dutiable articles in letters.

WITH reference to my despatch [Dominions No. 287] [No. 235] of even date,* I have the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [you,] for the information of your Ministers, copies of the printed Confidential report† of the British Delegation to the Eighth Congress of the Universal Postal Union held at Stockholm.

2. I would invite special reference to paragraphs 13 to 23 of the Report, dealing with the proposals and discussions with regard to Dominion and Colonial votes.

I have, &c.,
L. S. AMERY.

Enclosure in No. 691.

EXTRACT FROM THE REPORT OF THE BRITISH DELEGATION TO THE EIGHTH CONGRESS OF THE UNIVERSAL POSTAL UNION, HELD AT STOCKHOLM.

13. The voting of Dominions, Colonies, etc., has been regulated heretofore by the provisions of a Special Article in the Convention. In the Stockholm draft Convention this was Article 8, and consequently was due for discussion at an early stage of the proceedings; but, owing to representations which were made by the Delegation of the Soviet Republics and others, it was deferred in order that alternative proposals to those already submitted might be formulated.

14. At the outset, the Congress had before it a proposal of Mexico to deprive Dominions, Colonies and Protectorates of their votes, and to limit voting power to Metropolitan countries. Having regard to what had happened at the Madrid Congress when the question of Colonial votes was under consideration, it was anticipated that this proposal would be largely supported by the Latin-American States.

15. On the other hand, Great Britain was claiming a vote for the Irish Free State, the French Colonies were claiming a vote for French Colonies in Continental Africa, and Portugal was asking for a separate vote for the Colony of Mozambique.

16. Before the whole question was considered at Stockholm, the Mexican Delegation had withdrawn its original proposal and replaced it by one which would permit those Dominions which already had a vote, and in addition, the Irish Free State, to exercise separate votes, but would deprive British India of its vote. France also claimed an additional vote for the group formed by the mandated territories of Syria and Lebanon. The Swiss Delegation proposed an amendment to the Mexican proposal which would in effect leave the British Empire votes intact, but would deprive the United States of America, Spain, France, Japan, the Netherlands and

* No. 690. † Extract only printed here.

Portugal of one Colonial vote each. Canada, in order to avoid difficulty in the future, proposed that the names of the British Dominions and India should no longer be included in Article 8 of the Convention, but should simply be shown in the Preamble as contracting countries. The Soviet Delegation stated that the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics was composed of four separate Republics and demanded a vote for each. They further proposed to suppress all Colonial votes with the exception of those allocated to the four British Dominions of Australia, Canada, New Zealand and South Africa, and to grant a vote to the Irish Free State.

17. The debate was ably opened by the Mexican Delegate, and those countries who were being attacked energetically defended their position. It soon became clear, however, that although the general opinion was adverse to reduction in existing votes, it was equally opposed to any increase, and eventually the proposals made for additional votes in the French and Portuguese interests were withdrawn.

18. The Swiss proposal for the re-grouping of the Colonies was first put to the vote and was rejected by 28 votes to 6.

19. The Canadian proposal to assimilate British India and the Dominions of Australia, Canada, New Zealand and South Africa to Metropolitan countries as regards their status in the Union was then carried without objection.

20. The principle of suppressing certain existing Colonial votes embodied in the proposals of Mexico, Switzerland and the Soviet Republics was then considered, and was rejected by 27 votes to 9.

21. A separate vote was then granted without opposition to the Irish Free State; but the proposal of the Soviets to grant four separate votes to the Union of Soviet Republics was rejected by 23 votes to 1.

22. The vote already allocated by the Union to the group of "Les autres Dominions et l'ensemble des autres colonies et protectorats britanniques" and exercised since the Congress of Rome by the Delegate of New Zealand was definitely allocated to New Zealand; and the representation of the smaller Colonies, etc., will in future be undertaken in form, as well as in fact, by Great Britain.

23. Thus, the final result of the discussion of this important subject has been to maintain intact the voting power of the Empire, to render, in all probability, the Dominions and India immune from further attack on their votes, to grant a separate vote to the Irish Free State, and to indicate clearly the strong antipathy manifested by the Congress to the multiplication of Colonial votes which are in effect simply additions to the voting strength of the Metropolitan countries concerned.

YOUR telegram 14th May,* Stockholm Postal Convention. As desired by your Ministers His Majesty's Minister at Stockholm was instructed to arrange with Swedish Government for signature of Convention, Regulations and Protocols on behalf of Commonwealth of Australia. He now reports that Swedish Government consider that all that is required for adhesion of Commonwealth under Article XI of Final Protocol is a note from him stating on behalf of Commonwealth Government that they have decided to adhere. Note would be acknowledged by Swedish Government who would notify adhesion to all members of the Postal Union. Unless your Ministers see any objection it is proposed to instruct His Majesty's Minister to proceed accordingly. Should be glad to receive telegraphic reply as adhesion must be notified not later than 1st of September.—AMERY.

SIR,

Stockholm, 30th July, 1925.

WITH reference to my telegram No. 13 of to-day on the subject of the adhesion of the Commonwealth of Australia to the Universal Postal Convention signed at Stockholm on 28th August last, I have the honour to report that in accordance with the instructions contained in your despatch No. 169 of the 26th June, I asked the Swedish Government to appoint a time when I might sign the Convention on behalf of the Commonwealth of Australia.

2. I have now the honour to transmit to you a copy of a letter sent me by the acting head of the Political Department of the Ministry for Foreign Affairs, informing me of the practice of the Swedish Government in cases of this kind. You will observe that they do not regard it as necessary that I should sign the Convention on any of the documents relative thereto, but that all that is required is that I should notify them of the desire of the Commonwealth to adhere to them.

MONSIEUR LE MINISTRE, Stockholm, 28th July, 1925.

DURING yesterday's telephone conversation between Mr. Dodds and M. Hallenborg concerning the accession of Australia to the Universal Postal Convention signed at Stockholm on 28th August, 1924, Mr. Dodds said that you would like to have a statement regarding the practice of the Ministry for Foreign Affairs as to the procedure to be followed for accessions of this kind.

As you will find from the enclosed copy of a letter from the late M. Decoppet, President of the Postal Union, to the Swedish Postmaster-General the term of "Protocole laissé ouvert" which is used in the Final Protocol to the Convention, has nothing to do with the form of the accession. It only signifies the fact that accession may take place. The rule laid down in Article XI of the Final Protocol prescribes that "les adhésions prévues à l'article IX ci-dessus devront être notifiées au Gouvernement du Royaume de Suède—en la forme diplomatique."

In conformity with the said rule the Swedish Government have hitherto maintained the practice that accessions to the Postal agreements should be effectuated by way of a note from the diplomatic representative of the country concerned containing a declaration that his government have decided to adhere to the agreement in question. The receipt of such a note is acknowledged by this Ministry and thereupon the accession is notified in the usual diplomatic way to all the members of the Universal Postal Union.

I have, &c.,
ERIC GYLLENSTIERNA.

(No. 7038.)

Bureau International de l'Union Postale Universelle,
CHER MONSIEUR JUHLIN, Berne, le 3 décembre, 1924.

JE m'empresse de répondre à la lettre que vous m'avez adressée, en date du 28 novembre, et dans laquelle vous me faites part de l'intention d'un pays de l'Union d'adhérer à deux Arrangements conclus à Stockholm mais non signés par ses délégués. Vous me demandez quelles sont les formalités à remplir en pareil cas.

À la lumière des textes quelque incomplets qu'ils soient, aussi bien que les cas dans lesquels, à l'occasion des Conventions antérieures, le Bureau International a eu à donner son avis, la question me paraît devoir être résolue comme suit :

Ce sont les dispositions du Protocole final qui, jusqu'au moment de l'entrée en vigueur de la Convention de Stockholm, doivent être prises en considération et, dans le cas qui vous occupe, c'est en vertu de l'article X de ce Protocole que les adhésions complémentaires devront être notifiées. Cet article X, il est vrai, par suite, selon moi, d'une erreur que n'avait pas commise la Convention de Lisbonne, mais qui a son origine dans celle de Vienne et qui dès lors s'est constamment reproduite, cet article X, disje, est muet en ce qui concerne la forme de ces adhésions complémentaires et le délai dans lequel elles doivent intervenir. Or, ainsi que le Bureau International en jugeait, après le Congrès de Rome en particulier, il y a lieu de décider par analogie que ces adhésions doivent être faites par voie diplomatique auprès du Gouvernement suédois, dans la forme et dans le délai prévus à l'article XI.

C'est donc à votre Gouvernement que l'Etat dont vous me parlez doit adresser sa déclaration d'adhésion jusqu'au 1er septembre 1925. Passé ce terme, il devrait, en vertu des art. 2 et 3 in fine de la Convention, se tourner vers le Conseil fédéral suisse.

Telles sont les conclusions auxquelles je suis arrivé et qui conformes aux avis précédemment donnés par mon Bureau, permettent de suppléer à l'insuffisance des textes.

Les déclarations d'adhésion ont été jusqu'ici soumises à certaines conditions de formes qui peuvent varier suivant les Arrangements auxquels elles se rapportent. Aussi le Conseil fédéral suisse prend-il la précaution, lorsqu'il est nanti de déclarations de cette nature, de les soumettre préalablement à toute décision à l'examen de mon Bureau. Je vous fais part de cette pratique pour le cas où il vous conviendrait ainsi qu'à votre Gouvernement de me communiquer les adhésions qui seraient notifiées à ce dernier afin que, le cas échéant, je puisse vous faire part de mes observations.

Veuillez agréer, &c.,
Le Directeur,
CH. DECOPPET.

Ancien Ministre de l'Intérieur,
Directeur général des postes,

SIR, Government House, St. John's, 28th August, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch No. 56 of the 4th June last§ on the subject of the International Postal Congress at Stockholm, and to transmit herewith a formal document conveying the confirmation and approval of the Universal Postal Convention (including the final Protocol, detailed Regulations, and Final Protocol to the Regulations) and of the Agreement concerning Insured Letters and Boxes. This formal document completes the action which was taken in June of last year, when the delegation representing Great Britain was authorized to act also on behalf of Newfoundland at the Congress to be held at Stockholm.

I have, &c.,

W. L. ALLARDYCE.

Enclosure in No. 699.

(Sgd.) W. L. Allardyce,
Governor.

By His Excellency Sir William Lamond Allardyce, Knight Commander of the Most Distinguished Order of Saint Michael and Saint George, Governor and Commander-in-Chief in and over the Colony of Newfoundland.

Whereas by formal letter of authority under date 26th June, 1924, I did authorize and appoint certain persons to represent Newfoundland at the Congress of Representatives of the countries constituting the Universal Postal Union meeting at Stockholm in August, 1924, giving them jointly and severally full powers to discuss, settle and sign on behalf of Newfoundland, subject to the confirmation and approval of the Governor of Newfoundland, any Agreement or Convention drawn up at the said Conference;

And Whereas the said persons, on behalf of Newfoundland, signed at Stockholm, on the 28th August, 1924, the Universal Postal Convention and the Agreement concerning Insured Letters and Boxes;

I do, by and with the advice of my Executive Council, hereby formally confirm and approve the action of the representatives of Newfoundland in respect of the said Universal Postal Convention and Agreement, and I also hereby formally confirm and approve the Universal Postal Convention (including the Final Protocol, detailed Regulations and Final Protocol to the Regulations) signed at Stockholm.

3RD JANUARY. Confidential. [Not to Irish Free State: My telegram of 15th October*] [To Irish Free State: My despatch of 18th of October, Confidential.†] Following message sent at request of Chancellor of Exchequer who is going to Paris 6th January to attend Conference of Finance Ministers:—

Begin: It is hoped not to re-open Spa percentages of distribution of reparation payments already fixed between Allies, and in any case the percentages of distribution between Great Britain and Dominions of British Empire share will not be altered. Main question is what proportion of German annuities should go to reparations and what proportions to other Treaty charges, such as Army of Occupation costs, Belgian war debt, Restitution, which have also to be met out of the German annuities under Dawes Plan. British Government policy is to reduce non-reparation charges especially Army costs as much as possible so as to secure maximum for reparations. This policy represents interest of British Empire as a whole. Further main point is claim of United States to share in reparations. British Government is advised that this claim is unfounded in law and proposes to resist it, offering arbitration unless United States accept settlement on a basis so favourable to other Allies as not seriously to affect our interests. Other questions relate to detail of accounts as to Ruhr receipts, Belgian priority, interest charges, &c. British Government hope to secure about £10,000,000 as British Empire share of first year's payments, and any solution adopted on detailed points is not likely to modify this by more than £1,000,000.—Ends.

9TH JANUARY. Confidential. My telegram of 3rd January.* Chancellor of Exchequer is quite satisfied with the way in which the Conference of Finance Ministers has begun, and with general atmosphere which prevails. Formal meetings were held on 7th and 8th January but solutions of the more important questions are to be sought in private conversations between the representatives of the Powers mainly interested and plenary Conference will not meet again till 12th January.

Chancellor of Exchequer has discussed privately with United States of America Delegates the claim of the United States of America to share in Dawes Annuities for reparation as well as for cost of occupation. United States of America are already entitled to about 4½ million pounds a year for twelve years for cost of occupation. They are now prepared to accept about 5 million pounds a year for sixteen to nineteen years (under various alternative schemes) to cover both reparation and cost of occupation. Having regard to the small dimensions to which the financial issues are now reduced, and of advantage in getting United States of America fully interested in extraction of Dawes Annuities from Germany, His Majesty's Government have authorised Chancellor of Exchequer to settle on these or such better terms as he can obtain.—AMERY.

It will be observed that if annual payments to United States of America are increased from 4½ to 5 million pounds, Canada and Australia lose about £5,000 a year each and other Dominions less; His Majesty's Government, having had to take an immediate decision, have felt justified in assuming that Dominions would agree with them in regarding the small financial sacrifice involved as outweighed by political advantages of a settlement. Chancellor of Exchequer has reached an amicable settlement as regards the United States claim, which only awaits confirmation by the United States Government.

As regards other questions all points of principle have been settled in a manner which, in the Chancellor's opinion, fully safeguards financial interests of the British Empire and is not far below maximum at which he originally aimed.

Draft agreement is being drawn up and will be submitted to next meeting of Conference to-morrow morning.

Chancellor anticipates that this draft will be accepted and that he will be able to leave Paris on Wednesday.—AMERY.

15TH JANUARY. Confidential. My telegram 12th January.† Conference of Finance Ministers. English text of the Protocol signed 14th January is now being prepared in Paris and a copy will be sent by mail.

The distribution of the Dawes Annuities is to be on following principles. Figures are approximate. (a) Service of German External Loan, £4 millions. (b) Cost of Reparation Commission, Agent-General, Rhineland Commission and Commission of Control £1,370,000, with provision for reductions after first year. (c) Rhineland Armies of Occupation, £8 millions. (d) French and British arrears of Armies of Occupation, £750,000 in first year (and small annual sums till arrears are repaid). This leaves £36 millions out of first annuity for reparation in first year. Of this, 1 per cent., viz., £360,000, is to go to Restitution, 5 per cent., viz., £1,800,000, to Belgian War Debt, and 2½ per cent., viz., £760,000, for United States reparation claims, leaving £33 millions to be distributed in Spa percentages, of which British Empire share (22 per cent.) is £7¼ millions.

United States of America Army Costs (about £50 millions) will be paid off without interest by Annuities payable out of cash receipts beginning 1st September, 1926, of £2½ millions. For reparation claims United States of America is to receive 2½ per cent. of part of Dawes Annuities available for reparation, not to exceed £2½ millions in any year. The general effect of the compromise reached is that the annual payments to United States of America will not be appreciably greater than under the Wadsworth Agreement of May, 1923, Cmd. 1973 (which is now superseded), but will continue for a longer period.

* No. 711. † No. 713.

The annual cost of the Allied Armies of Occupation even as limited by previous agreements is from £13 to £15 millions: under new agreement only £8 millions can be charged direct to Dawes Annuity and balance will be added to arrears due to Powers concerned from reparation pool.

Whole question of provision for Armies to be reviewed before next September.

As regards settlement of past accounts a compromise favourable on the whole to British views was reached, especially in that only the extra cost of Ruhr troops, over and above their cost in home garrisons, is to be deducted from receipts down to 1st September, 1924, and thereafter nothing is to be allowed for Ruhr troops. Belgian Priority will be satisfied at some date between 1st September, 1925, and 31st August, 1926, and Belgium's percentage will then be reduced from 8 per cent. to 4½ per cent. the 3½ per cent. thus released going to France and British Empire in proportions 52 to 22.

Italy and Serbia begin repaying their debts to reparation pool by instalments from 1926.

Reparation Commission is to draw up an account showing net reparation receipts of each Power concerned as on 1st September, 1924, and distribution of British Empire receipts between parts of the Empire can then be dealt with, together with arrangements for distributing British Empire portion (viz., £7¼ millions) of first Dawes Annuity and future annuities.—AMERY.

14TH MARCH. Confidential. My despatch 20th January, Dominions 28, Confidential.* Sayre, Political Adviser to Government of Siam, who is at present in England, has discussed with representatives of His Majesty's Government question of revision of existing Treaties with Siam and represented that any such revision should accord to Siam (1) full fiscal autonomy and (2) autonomy in matters of jurisdiction.

As regards first point, as United States of America, France and Japan have in recent treaties with Siam admitted principle of Siamese autonomy in fiscal matters, it does not seem possible for His Majesty's Government to refuse to do same provided that adequate safeguards for important trade of United Kingdom with Siam can be secured.

As regards second point, understood that Siamese Government would be willing to extend to British subjects same privileges as were granted to United States citizens by Treaty with United States (see League of Nations Treaty Series, Volume 6, page 302), i.e., in place of existing limited right of evocation (for details of which see correspondence enclosed in my despatch of 9th July, 1924, Dominions 308*) which expires on publication of last Siamese code to allow right of evocation in all cases during period continuing until five years after publication of last code provided that Treaty right of British subjects to presence in certain cases of European judicial adviser in Court were abandoned. This would in some respects be more favourable to British subjects than present system, and would be regarded by His Majesty's Government as satisfactory provided that assurance could be obtained from Siamese Government that they have no intention of abandoning in near future practice of appointing certain number of European judicial advisers of whom reasonable proportion would be British.

Accordingly proposed that in place of draft Treaty enclosed in my despatch 10th March, 1923, Dominions 80, Confidential,† endeavour should be made to negotiate two new Treaties. First of these would be General Treaty which would include (a) abrogation of Treaties of 1826, 1855 and 1883, and Articles 5 to 8 and Annexes 2 and 4 of 1909 Treaty, (b) recognition that principle of national autonomy should apply to Siam in all that pertains to import and export duties drawbacks and transit and all other taxes and impositions. It would also contain in Protocol, provisions as to jurisdiction similar to those in Protocol to United States Siamese Treaty. Second would be Commercial Treaty based on model draft with usual clauses as to accession of Dominions and containing also provision whereby (a) Siam would undertake not to increase beyond specified figure import duties on cotton goods, iron and steel and manufactures thereof, machinery and gunny bags, and (b) as long as Siamese rice and teak are admitted free to any parts of Empire to which Treaty made applicable Siam would in respect of such parts impose no export duty on teak and limit export duty on rice to specified figure. Similar arrangement might be made in respect of tin.

Discussions with Sayre are continuing and prospect of agreement being reached at early date. Hence should your Ministers have any observations on above proposals His Majesty's Government would be glad to receive them as soon as possible.

Similar message sent to other Dominions.—AMERY.

Sir,
Foreign Office, S.W.1, 2nd April, 1925.
WITH reference to Mr. John's telegram No. 2 of 28th February, I transmit to you herewith the drafts‡ of two treaties, one a General Treaty of Friendship, the other a Treaty of Commerce and Navigation, which it is now proposed to

* No. 718. † Nos. 718 and 719. ‡ Not printed; see Treaty Series 1926, Nos. 7 and 8 for the final texts of the Treaties.

conclude with the Siamese Government. It is also proposed to conclude a Treaty of Arbitration; the text of which will be forwarded later.

2. The General Treaty and the Commercial Treaty are interdependent: that is to say, His Majesty's Government would be reluctant to sign the former, under which Siam will obtain full fiscal and jurisdictional autonomy, unless the Siamese Government on their side were prepared simultaneously to sign the latter, under which it is apprehended that British commercial interests will be adequately safeguarded. A further safeguard of British interests will be contained in the letter which it is proposed that the Siamese Government should, upon the conclusion of the treaties, address to His Majesty's Government as regards the continued employment of European judicial advisers. The provisional text of this letter is enclosed herein. It should be treated for the present as highly confidential.

3. The two present drafts are the result of a process, first, of consultation between the departments of His Majesty's Government concerned, and, secondly, of negotiation with Doctor Sayre, who has provisionally accepted their terms, subject to reference to the Siamese Government. It is understood that he has forwarded them to Bangkok, with a recommendation that, if they are found to be satisfactory, the Siamese Government will authorize their Minister here to conclude treaties on these lines. I should accordingly be glad if you would examine the drafts and telegraph your observations as soon as possible, after such unofficial consultation with the British community at Bangkok as you may think desirable.
In this connexion I would draw your particular attention to Article 16 of the commercial treaty which has been inserted in order to meet the principal difficulties anticipated by British traders in Siam, in view of the fact that Dr. Sayre was unable to agree to an article embodying the first sentence of paragraph 3 of Article 8 of the Anglo-Siamese Treaty of 1855.

4. You will observe that the original idea of conducting the actual negotiations at Bangkok after a preliminary discussion of principles with Doctor Sayre has been abandoned. The reason lies in the accommodating spirit displayed by Doctor Sayre, which at once made it seem probable that treaties negotiated by him and backed by the influence which he apparently is able to exert on the Siamese Government could be brought to a more satisfactory and more speedy conclusion than would have been possible if negotiations had been carried on direct with native officials at Bangkok.

5. The British delegation has received invaluable help from Mr. Lyle, lately
His Majesty's Consul-General at Bangkok, and, as regards the commercial treaty, it has had the advantage of consultation with Mr. Hendrick, the London Manager of the Anglo-Siam Corporation.

DRAFT.

IN connexion with the jurisdictional autonomy of Siam resulting from the Treaty between our respective countries signed on 1925, I have the honour to state that my Government is happy to give to Your Excellency the assurance that the intention of the Royal Siamese Government is not to discontinue the use of European judicial advisers upon the ratification of the new Treaty, but to continue to employ them until such time after the promulgation of the Codes as it may be convinced that the administration of justice by Siamese judges shows the further services of such European advisers to be unnecessary. In connexion with the employment of European judicial advisers it is the intention of the Royal Siamese Government that the proportion of British to other foreign judicial advisers shall, as in the past, be commensurate with British interests in Siam.

(Confidential.)

SIR, Downing Street, 27th April, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to request you to inform your Ministers that the question of the revision of the existing Treaties with Siam has been for some time under consideration.

2. Dr. Sayre, the Political Adviser to the Government of Siam, who is at present in England, has recently discussed the matter with representatives of His Majesty's Government, and represented at the outset that any such revision should accord to Siam

- (1) full fiscal autonomy; and
- (2) autonomy in matters of jurisdiction.

3. As regards the first point, the United States of America, France and Japan have in recent Treaties with Siam admitted the principle of Siamese autonomy in fiscal matters, and consequently it seemed to His Majesty's Government that it would not be possible for them to refuse to do the same, provided that adequate safeguards for the important trade of this country with Siam could be secured.

4. As regards the second point, it was indicated that the Siamese Government would be willing to extend to British subjects the same privileges as had been granted to United States citizens by the Treaty between the United States and Siam. This arrangement would in some respects be more favourable to British subjects than the present system, and it appeared to His Majesty's Government that it would be satisfactory, provided that an assurance could be obtained from the Siamese Government that they have no intention of abandoning in the near future the practice of appointing a certain number of European Judicial Advisers, of whom a reasonable proportion would be British.

5. The discussions with Dr. Sayre have proceeded on the above basis and, as a result, drafts have been prepared of

- (a) a General Treaty of Friendship, and
- (b) a Commercial Treaty.

These Treaties would replace the existing Treaties with Siam of the 20th June, 1826, the 18th April, 1855, the 6th April, 1883, and the 3rd September, 1883, and certain provisions of the Treaty of the 10th March, 1909.

[MY LORD,] [SIR,]

Downing Street, 15th July, 1925.

WITH reference to my Confidential despatch of the 27th of April Dominions No. 181* [Not to Irish Free State and Southern Rhodesia: and my telegram of 12th May, †], regarding the revision of the existing Treaties with Siam, I have the honour to request [Your Excellency] [you] to inform your Ministers that the observations of His Majesty's Minister at Bangkok have been received and the matter has been further discussed with Dr. Sayre. As a result, the draft Treaties enclosed in my despatch have been further modified. I enclose copies of the draft Treaties† in their revised form.

2. It will be observed that Article 10 of the draft Commercial Treaty has been modified

(a) by substituting "any of His Britannic Majesty's territories to which this Treaty applies" for "the United Kingdom";

(b) by omitting the original second and third paragraphs;

(c) by inserting two new paragraphs defining more clearly the articles to which the first paragraph applies and providing for the possible imposition of specific Customs duties.

3. As regards the second of these amendments, it appeared from the discussions with Dr. Sayre that the Siamese Government did not attach importance to the original second paragraph, which had been inserted to meet the wishes of Dr. Sayre, while the original third paragraph afforded no real guarantee against the imposition of prohibitive export duties by the Siamese Government on rice, teak and tin. It was therefore considered that these paragraphs could be omitted, but it is hoped that it may be possible to obtain from the Siamese Government, at the time of signature of this Treaty, a declaration that it is not their present intention to impose any new, or increase any existing export duties on rice, teak and tin.

4. It will also be observed that the third paragraph of Article 37 of the draft Commercial Treaty differs from the provision normally inserted in Commercial Treaties since it provides that, in the event of India or any of the Colonies not possessing responsible Government or Protectorates acceding to the Treaty, notice of separate termination in respect of India or any such Colony or Protectorate cannot be given until the expiration of nine years from the coming into force of the Treaty, this being the earliest date at which notice of termination of the Treaty as a whole can be given under the first paragraph of the Article. This change was made in order to meet the views of the Government of India, and a similar change has been made in the third paragraph of Article X of the draft General Treaty.

5. I take this opportunity to enclose a copy of a telegram to His Majesty's Minister at Bangkok regarding the terms of notes which it is proposed should be exchanged with the Siamese Government at the time of signature of the Treaties, regarding the employment in Siam of European legal advisers and other kindred matters.

6. It is hoped that it will be possible to arrange for the signature of the Treaties at a very early date.

I have, &c.,
L. S. AMERY.

TELEGRAM TO MR. GREG (BANGKOK) FROM THE FOREIGN OFFICE.

(Sent 8.30 p.m., 16th June, 1925.)

CONSIDERATIONS urged in your telegrams Nos. 5 and 6 of 19th May, New Siamese Treaties, are fully appreciated, and we have tried to meet them in negotiations with Dr. Sayre on the following lines.

New draft of notes to be exchanged has been agreed as follows, subject on our side to your observations, and on Sayre's side to approval of the Siamese Government, to whom he has telegraphed.

British note, after stating nature of British interests in Siam, and expressing confidence that Siamese Government "are not likely to take any steps calculated to prejudice" them, runs as follows:—"His Majesty's Government, without wishing to make any suggestion which might constitute an interference in the internal affairs of Siam, or to make the grant of the rights acquired by Siam under the new treaties subject to any conditions or restrictions, feel nevertheless in view of the magnitude of the interests involved that it may be useful to state frankly certain apprehensions," due to possibility that trained Siamese judges will not be available when codes are promulgated, and to the fact that the codes are based on Roman law. "It therefore occurs to His Majesty's Government that the Siamese Government may well wish, should it be necessary in order to avoid possible future injury to the interests common to both countries, for a reasonable time after the coming into force of the various codes, and even, if necessary, after the disappearance of the right of evocation, to continue to employ a reasonable number of European legal advisers, of whom a proportion commensurate with British interests will be of British nationality; to continue to employ them in general in the same posts and in the same judicial capacities as at present, and to arrange that they shall exercise their powers in the same general manner as they have hitherto done (except in so far as the termination of the 1909 Treaty may result in their judgments no longer prevailing in the cases provided for under that Treaty); to retain the post of judicial adviser, which it will probably be impracticable to fill with a lawyer of other than British nationality; to employ as a teacher in the law school an English lawyer, preferably a barrister familiar with the Indian codes; and to continue to employ a British subject as adviser in the customs."

Reply of Siamese Government will state that they have "taken very careful note of the matters set forth in this communication, and they will endeavour, in respect of the several points set out in the letter from His Majesty's Government, to do everything possible to safeguard British interests in Siam, so far as this can be done without injury to the interests of the Siamese Government. In particular, the Siamese Government readily give an assurance that it is not their intention to dispense with the services of European legal advisers upon the ratification of the new Treaty, but to continue to employ them until such time after the promulgation of the codes as they may be convinced that the administration of justice shows the further services of such European advisers to be unnecessary." Then follows assurance that, until the promulgation of the codes, the Siamese Government will continue to act on the principle as to the use of British law in commercial cases where no Siamese law exists which was stated in Westengaard's letter to Beckett of 19th May, 1909.

(P.C. 247.)

CERTIFIED COPY OF A MINUTE OF A MEETING OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL, APPROVED BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL ON THE 17TH FEBRUARY, 1925.

THE Committee of the Privy Council have had before them a Report, dated 13th February, 1925, from the Secretary of State for External Affairs, representing that the Acting Minister of Finance and the Minister of Trade and Commerce have been conducting negotiations with the Government of Spain looking to the conclusion of a convention of commerce between the two countries.

The Minister states that it has not been found possible to conclude a permanent agreement immediately, and, pending the conclusion of such a permanent agreement, it is considered desirable to enter into a provisional trade agreement with the Government of Spain whereby Spain shall grant to Canada the benefits of her second tariff duties and Canada shall grant to Spain the benefits of the Intermediate Tariff.

* No. 731.

The Minister, therefore, with the concurrence of the Acting Minister of Finance, recommends that Your Excellency, under the authority of Section 4 of the Customs Tariff, 1907, in consideration of benefits satisfactory to Your Excellency, be pleased to extend the benefit of the Intermediate Tariff to goods the produce or manufacture of Spain when conveyed without transshipment from a port of Spain or from a port of a country enjoying the benefit of the Preferential or Intermediate Tariff into a sea or river port of Canada upon the terms and conditions of an agreement to be entered into between the Government of the Dominion of Canada and the Government of the Kingdom of Spain substantially in the form of the draft agreement annexed hereto; and that the benefits of the Intermediate Tariff shall be so granted to goods the produce or manufacture of Spain on and after a day to be fixed by proclamation which shall be published in the Canada Gazette.

The Minister also recommends that His Britannic Majesty's Ambassador at Madrid be authorized to sign the said agreement on behalf of the Government of the Dominion of Canada, and that Your Excellency may be pleased to cause a despatch to be sent to the Secretary of State for the Colonies for transmission to the Foreign Secretary requesting that he authorize the British Ambassador at Madrid to sign the said agreement on behalf of the Government of Canada.

All of which is respectfully submitted for Your Excellency's approval.

E. J. LEMAIRE,
Clerk of the Privy Council.

AGREEMENT entered into this _____ day of _____ 1925, between _____ representing herein the _____ Government of the Dominion of Canada, _____ Party of the first part, and _____ representing herein the Government of the Kingdom of Spain, _____ Party of the other part:

It is hereby respectively agreed on behalf of the Government of the Dominion of Canada and of the Government of the Kingdom of Spain, that—

1. The Government of the Dominion of Canada shall, under the authority of section 4, sub-section (c), of the Act of Parliament of Canada "The Customs Tariff, 1907," on and after a day to be fixed by proclamation of the Governor in Council of Canada, which proclamation shall be published in the Canada Gazette, extend the benefit of the Intermediate Tariff to goods the produce or manufacture of Spain when conveyed without transshipment from a port of Spain or from a port of a country enjoying the benefit of the preferential or intermediate tariff into a sea or river port of Canada;

2. The Government of the Kingdom of Spain shall concede to goods the produce or manufacture of Canada, upon their importation into Spain, on and after the same day as that mentioned in the proclamation referred to in section 1 of this agreement, the second tariff duties;

3. This agreement is a provisional one, and the question of a general convention for the regulation of commercial relations between Canada and Spain shall be deferred for consideration at a time which may be found mutually convenient;

4. Either of the principals herein represented may, if it is deemed desirable, terminate or cancel the respective concessions granted in pursuance hereof on giving to the other three months' notice of intention so to terminate or cancel.

Done in duplicate at the City of Madrid.

SIR,

WITH reference to previous correspondence ending with your despatch No. 200 of the 8th instant, I have the honour to transmit to you herewith a copy of the Spanish Note, together with a translation, which I received yesterday from the Acting President of the Directorate, setting forth the conditions on which the Spanish Government are prepared to conclude a Commercial Modus Vivendi with Canada. A copy of my Note acknowledging this communication and recapitulating the conditions in question is likewise enclosed. The Modus Vivendi is considered as concluded by means of this exchange of Notes, and it will go into force on the 20th instant. The original of the Spanish Note has been handed to Mr. Clarke for transmission to his Government.

In company with Mr. Clarke (the Canadian Trade Delegate) and Captain Charles, I attended all the meetings of the Treaty Commission at which we discussed the possibility of concluding a Modus Vivendi between Spain and Canada. There have been five such meetings, the first taking place on 19th December last, and the final meeting having been held on the 28th ultimo.

The Canadian Government put forward two alternative proposals, the second of which they have succeeded in obtaining. Briefly, this provides for the application of the Canadian Intermediate Customs Tariff to Spanish goods in return for the application of the duties in the second column of the Spanish Customs Tariff to Canadian goods.

This Modus Vivendi will come into force on the 20th instant and will cease to be in force three months after its denunciation by either contracting party. The contracting parties undertake to commence without undue delay the necessary negotiations for the conclusion of a more general and definite Convention for the regulation of a Commercial Agreement between Spain and Canada.

An Agreement in principle with regard to the Modus Vivendi was reached at the fourth meeting of the Spanish Treaty Commission on 6th February. The Spanish Treaty Commission, however, raised objections to two points at the last minute. These were the stipulations that Spanish goods subject to the Intermediate Customs Tariff must be imported into a "sea or river port of Canada without transshipment from a Spanish port."

The Spanish Authorities pointed out that, whereas on the basis of Mr. Clarke's calculations twenty-two per cent. of the Spanish exports to Canada are not subject to any duty and can be imported into Canada via the United States, the advantages of the Modus Vivendi only extended to seventy-eight per cent. of the Spanish exports to Canada, which must be imported direct into a sea or river port of Canada. They, therefore, had to consider whether the Tariff advantages, which it was proposed to extend to that seventy-eight per cent., were sufficient compensation for the extension of the Second Column of the Spanish Customs Tariff to Canadian products. After some delay the Spanish Treaty Commission decided in the affirmative.

It only remains for me to add that Mr. Clarke, at my request, consulted the Canadian Government with regard to the Spanish suggestion that the Modus Vivendi should be considered as concluded by an exchange of Notes, and received a reply approving the signature of the Agreement if it embodied all the essential points of the Canadian draft and if he himself was quite satisfied. I have been in the closest touch with Mr. Clarke during the negotiations, and Captain Charles has been of great assistance to him.

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

Madrid, 10th April, 1925.

WITH reference to the Note which Your Excellency has been good enough to address me regarding the negotiations for a Commercial Agreement between Spain and Canada, and especially with reference to the Note No. 76 of 25th February last, under cover of which a Draft Modus Vivendi to be drawn up between the two countries was enclosed, and in view of the report on the question from the corresponding Departments, I have the honour to inform Your Excellency that the Government of His Catholic Majesty has agreed to draw up a Modus Vivendi in accordance with the following clauses:—

(1) The Government of the Dominion of Canada will apply the duties of her Intermediate Customs Tariff to goods the produce or manufacture of Spain on their importation by a sea or river port of Canada without transshipment from a Spanish port or from a port of any country which may enjoy in Canada the benefits either of her preferential tariff or of her intermediate tariff.

(2) The Government of His Catholic Majesty will apply to goods the produce or manufacture of Canada on their importation into Spain the duties of the second column of the Customs Tariff in force at any time.

(3) The present Modus Vivendi will come into force on the 20th April, 1925, and will cease to be in force three months after its denunciation by either contracting party.

In view of the provisional character of this arrangement both Governments agree to commence without undue delay the necessary negotiations for the conclusion of a more general and definite Convention for the regulation of the commercial relations between Spain and Canada. The Government of His Catholic Majesty considers that the present Modus Vivendi will be concluded by means of the exchange of this Note and the similar Note which Your Excellency will be good enough to address to me.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Note No. 104 of 10th April, in which Your Excellency is so good as to inform me that the Government of His Catholic Majesty are prepared to conclude a Commercial Modus Vivendi with the Government of the Dominion of Canada, on the following basis:—

1. The Government of the Dominion of Canada will extend the benefits of the intermediate Tariff to goods the produce or manufacture of Spain when conveyed without transshipment from a port of Spain or from a port of a country enjoying the benefits of the preferential or intermediate tariff into a sea or river port of Canada.

2. The Government of His Catholic Majesty the King of Spain will apply to goods the produce or manufacture of Canada on their importation into Spain the duties under the Second Column of the Spanish Customs Tariff in force at any time.

3. The present Modus Vivendi will come into force on 20th April, 1925, and will cease to be in force three months after its denunciation by either Contracting Party.

In view of the provisional character of this arrangement the Governments of both Contracting Parties agree to commence without undue delay the necessary negotiations for the conclusion of a more general and definite Convention for the regulation of the Commercial relations between Canada and Spain.

I have been authorized to assure Your Excellency that the Government of the Dominion of Canada accept the above arrangement which they will regard as completed by the present Note, and that which I have had the honour to receive from Your Excellency, and that the necessary proclamation will be published in the Canada Gazette, bringing it into effect in Canada as from the 20th April next.

29TH APRIL. My despatch of 25th February, No. 84,* draft trade agreement with Spain. Canadian Government have been informed that the first stage in these negotiations was concluded 10th April by exchange of notes between the British Ambassador at Madrid and the Spanish Government providing for granting of Canadian intermediate tariff as against Spanish Second Column tariff as a modus vivendi pending undertaking of negotiations for more general and definite convention for the regulation of commercial relations between Canada and Spain.

During these negotiations Canadian Government expressed its desire to accede to the Agreement between the United Kingdom and Spain of June, 1924, regulating the treatment of companies under Article II of that Agreement. We are informed that shortly before 12th April British Ambassador at Madrid received a reply from the Spanish Government that, as Canada had not adhered to the Treaty of Commerce and Navigation, and as this Treaty and Companies' Agreement are inter-related, the latter would not be open to Canada's adherence.

Canadian Government would be greatly obliged if the opinion of legal officers of the Foreign Office upon the validity of the Spanish contention could be secured. If it is upheld they would desire that the British Ambassador at Madrid should be requested to inquire of the Spanish Government what procedure in its opinion should be followed to make it possible to come to an agreement so far as Canada is concerned on reciprocal treatment of Companies. Canadian Government desires to add for your information that they would be prepared to negotiate separate agreement on treatment of companies or include it in general trade agreement, and they would desire as early settlement as possible as Spanish taxation of Canadian companies is at present very onerous.

Canadian Government will communicate with you later regarding negotiations for permanent trade agreement.—BYNG.

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

Madrid, 9th April, 1925.

In your Note No. 55, of the 13th February last, Your Excellency forwarded to me a Memorandum in which Mr. Clarke, the Delegate of the Government of the Dominion of Canada for the negotiation of a commercial agreement between Spain and that Dominion, stated that he had received instructions from his Government to inform His Majesty's Government that the Government of Canada is prepared to submit to Parliament a disposition authorizing the adherence of the Dominion to the Agreement regulating the taxation of Commercial Companies, concluded between Spain and the United Kingdom on the 27th June, 1924.

In acknowledging receipt to Your Excellency of your above-mentioned Note, I have the honour to make the following statement:—

The agreement in question, referring to the taxation of Companies, is a consequence of the agreement arrived at between the Spanish and British Governments, in Article I of the Treaty of Commerce of the 31st October, 1922, according to which the future treatment of the Companies of the two parties in the country of the other was to be established by a special agreement. Therefore, the said special agreement arises out of the Treaty referred to, and it is accordingly necessary, whenever this matter is considered, to connect it with the corresponding clause of that Treaty.

Such connexion cannot be established in the case of Canada, for the reason that this country has refused to adhere to the Treaty, which must therefore be considered non-existent as far as the Dominion is concerned; and, as has been stated, the right of the Dominions, Colonies and other British territories to adhere to the special Hispano-British Agreement regarding mercantile companies deriving from the dispositions in regard to this matter in the Treaty of the 31st October, 1922, already mentioned, His Majesty's Government is of the opinion that there is no satisfactory method by which Canada can adhere to the special agreement in question.

that Canada is not entitled to accede to agreement since effect of accession would not be that which was contemplated by accession clause of agreement. This contention seems difficult to resist since Spanish companies would not derive from accession of Canada any benefits under Article II of Agreement as Spanish subjects do not, in fact, enjoy any benefits in Canada under the Treaty of 1922. In the circumstances Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs considers that best course would be for Canadian Government to negotiate separate agreement with Spanish Government as regards treatment of companies. SIR, Government House, Wellington, 18th February, 1925.
WITH reference to your predecessor's Confidential despatch of the 6th November last,‡ relative to the limits of territorial waters in New Zealand, I have the honour to inform you that my Ministers have carefully studied the points raised in that despatch, and they do not desire to press for any of the waters adjoining this Dominion to be recognized as "territorial inlets."

[Not to Irish Free State: With reference to the Duke of Devonshire's Confidential despatch Dominions No. 229 of the 27th of June, 1923*, I have the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [you,] for the information of your Ministers, the accompanying copy of a despatch to His Majesty's Ambassador at Rome regarding an Italian notice to Mariners of the 15th of November, 1924, which contains a claim to exercise jurisdiction in waters lying outside the three-mile limit.

I have, &c.,

L. S. AMERY.

Enclosure in No. 746.

(No. 120.)

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 29th January, 1925.

WITH reference to your despatch No. 480 of the 24th May, 1923, I transmit to your Excellency herewith a copy of a letter† from the Admiralty enclosing a copy† and translation of an Italian notice to mariners of 15th November, 1924, which prohibits shipping from entering a zone beyond eight miles in width extending along a portion of the Italian coast.

2. The action taken by His Majesty's Government in regard to the Italian law of 16th June, 1912, to which the Admiralty refer in the second paragraph of their letter, was as follows:—

3. In May, 1911, the attention of His Majesty's Government was drawn to a Bill then before the Italian Parliament for the extension, in certain cases, of Italian jurisdiction to a distance of ten miles from the shore. In accordance with instructions Sir Rennell Rodd addressed a note to the Italian Government informing them that His Majesty's Government could not recognize a claim to jurisdiction over waters beyond the three-mile limit, or interference with British vessels in the extended area which legislation before the Italian Parliament proposed to substitute for it. In their reply, the Italian Government explained the grounds on which the extension of jurisdiction was proposed, but stated that an exact judgment in respect of the Bill could not then be formed as it was still open to eventual amendment. On 16th June, 1912, however, the Bill became law without His Majesty's Government being afforded an opportunity to renew their objection so far as British ships were concerned. On 1st August, 1912, Sir R. Rodd again informed the Italian Government that His Majesty's Government were unable to recognise any claim to jurisdiction over, or to interference with, British vessels beyond three geographical miles from low water mark, the limit generally recognized among nations. In their reply to these representations, the Italian Government asserted that the limit of three miles from the shore, generally admitted in international theory and practice in the past as the most convenient standard for the delimitation of territorial waters, no longer corresponded to the actual state of affairs, the circumstances which originally justified it having altered. They maintained that the theory and practice of various countries had tended to advance, and to adopt different criteria and standards according to the places over which and the objects for which the limit of territorial jurisdiction over coastal waters had to be determined, and they declined to recognize the old rule as having the character and force of a positive rule of international law universally admitted. The Italian Government considered, therefore, that the law in question did not conflict with any rule of the law of nations in such a manner as to justify remonstrance or the possible failure of any power to observe it. His Majesty's Government were unable to share the views of the Italian Government.

* No. 381 in Dominions No. 88. † Translation of Decree only printed.

4. As the Admiralty have apparently not received a copy of the Italian law of 16th June, 1912, I shall be glad if you will transmit copies with a translation for the information of the Admiralty and this department.

5. I am therefore concurring in the proposal of the Admiralty not to issue the Italian notice to mariners of 15th November, 1924, in the form of an Admiralty notice to mariners, as is the usual practice; and in their policy of not issuing any foreign notice to mariners which, as in the present case, contains a claim to exercise jurisdiction in the waters lying outside the three-mile limit, which is the only limit of territorial waters recognized by His Majesty's Government.

6. The issue of this notice by the Italian Government appears to be an attempt to further their claim to a wide extension of their territorial waters and for a wide belt of "territorial air." The Italian delegates made a similar attempt at The Hague in 1922 in connexion with the proposal for rules of aerial warfare. I shall be glad if you will now renew to the Italian Government the protests made by His Majesty's Embassy in 1912 and 1923 against the Italian legislation in this matter.

I am, &c.,

(For the Secretary of State),

GEORGE MOUNSEY.

EXTRACT FROM ITALIAN LAW OF 16TH JUNE, 1912, REGULATING THE PASSAGE AND STAY OF MERCHANT VESSELS ALONG ITALIAN COASTS. (TRANSLATED.)

"Article 1.

The passage and sojourn of national or foreign merchantmen may be prohibited, at any time whatever, and in any determined place whatever, within or without the seas of the State, when it is recognized as necessary in the interests of the national defence.

For the particular purposes of the present law, the seas of the State are understood to be the zone of the sea included within ten marine miles of the shore. As respects gulfs and bays, the zone of ten miles is measured from a straight line drawn across the bend in the part farthest outside where the opening has a breadth not exceeding twenty miles."

[MY LORD,] [SIR,]

Downing Street, 9th March, 1925.

WITH reference to my Confidential despatch Dominions No. 54 of the 13th of February,* I have the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [you,] for the information of your Ministers, the accompanying copy of a Note Verbale from the British Embassy at Rome to the Italian Ministry for Foreign Affairs renewing the protests of His Majesty's Government against Italian legislation in regard to territorial waters,

I have, &c.,

Enclosure in No. 747.

(No. 43.)

NOTE VERBALE.

HIS Britannic Majesty's Embassy have the honour, under instructions from His Majesty's Government, to refer to the law entitled "Rules for the passage and sojourn of merchant ships off the coasts of the State" which received the Royal Assent and was published in the Official Gazette of 27th June, 1912.

On 1st August, 1912, His Britannic Majesty's Embassy had the honour to address a Note to the Royal Italian Ministry for Foreign Affairs in this connexion to the effect that His Britannic Majesty's Government were unable to recognize any claim to jurisdiction over, or to interference with, British vessels beyond three geographical miles from low water mark.

Subsequently, in connexion with the application of Royal Decree No. 860 of 28th May, 1922, the Royal Ministry contended in Note Verbale of 11th January, 1923, that the limit of Italian territorial waters had been considered as six miles since August, 1914, and that, in view of the increased carrying power of artillery, etc., it should be proportionately increased and should extend even as far as ten miles. His Britannic Majesty's Embassy, in their Note Verbale No. 229 of 24th May, 1923, in reply, then stated that they were authorized to inform the Royal Ministry that His Majesty's Government could not accept the view of the Royal Government in this question.

An Italian notice to mariners of 15th November, 1924, which prohibits shipping from entering a zone beyond eight miles in width extending along a portion of the Italian coast, having been brought to the attention of His Majesty's Government, the Embassy have been instructed again to renew to the Royal Government the protests made by them in 1912 and 1923 against the Italian legislation in this matter.

NOTE VERBALE.

HIS Britannic Majesty's Embassy have the honour, under instructions from His Britannic Majesty's Government, to refer to a Ministerial Decree by the Royal Minister for National Economy, dated 16th January, 1925, containing regulations with regard to mechanically propelled fishing vessels in Italian waters. (Gazzetta Ufficiale No. 27 of 3rd February, 1925.)

In view of the restrictions which this decree would impose on fishing to distances of seven and four marine miles from the Italian shore, the Embassy have the honour to inform the Royal Italian Government that His Majesty's Government can only recognise this decree in so far as it does not infringe the rights of British vessels in international law.

HIS Britannic Majesty's Embassy have the honour, under instructions from His Britannic Majesty's Government, to refer to a Ministerial Decree, dated 16th March, 1925, regulating fishing by mechanically propelled vessels in the waters of Genoa and Savona. (Gazzetta Ufficiale No. 74 of 30th March, 1925.)

The Embassy have the honour to inform the Royal Italian Government that in so far as the decree in question purports to apply to the movements of British fishing vessels outside the three-mile limit, His Majesty's Government are unable to recognize its validity.

WITH reference to their Note Verbale No. 43 of 7th February, 1925, His Britannic Majesty's Embassy have the honour, under instructions from His Britannic Majesty's Government, to refer to the Royal Italian Notice to Mariners No. 89/165 of 1925, superseding No. 252/557 of 1924, relative to firing practice in the Southern Approach to Cape Linaro, which alters the limits of the firing zone from eight miles to seven miles, and to renew to the Royal Italian Government the protests previously made by them against the Italian legislation in question.

(Translation.)

NOTE VERBALE.

IN reference to Note Verbale No. 43 of the 7th February, the Royal Ministry for Foreign Affairs have the honour to inform His Britannic Majesty's Embassy that, in view of the desirability of reconciling as far as possible the exigencies of naval exercises, with due protection to navigation, the notice to mariners No. 252/557 of 15th November, 1924, has been modified by notice No. 89/165 of 10th April, 1925, published in Bulletin No. 89 of the same date of the Hydrographic Institute of the Royal Navy.

2. As regards the general question of the limit of territorial waters, the Royal Ministry for Foreign Affairs, while taking into the most careful consideration the point of view of His Britannic Majesty's Government, can only confirm the view of the Royal Italian Government already expressed in their previous note verbale No. 201505/13 of the 11th January, 1923.

3. As is known to His Majesty's Embassy the limit of territorial waters, in the absence of a regular obligatory agreement between the nations, has always been defined as "the limit within which a state can exercise its own sovereignty in fact with guns without recourse to shipping."

4. It is natural, therefore, that with the increased range of guns, there should also be a similar increase in the limit of territorial waters, so much so that there are now many States who have adopted limits of territorial maritime jurisdiction far greater than three nautical miles.

5. Given, moreover, the desirability of eliminating as far as possible the differences now existing as to the determination of the extent of territorial waters, the Royal Ministry for Foreign Affairs have the honour to propose, for the consideration of the British Embassy, whether it would not be desirable to submit for examination such a question of principle to the Committee of Jurists established at the League of Nations with a view to their making proposals in regard to the codification of the international law.

6. Thus it might be possible easily to reach an international settlement of this important question.

7. The Royal Ministry would be glad to know the views of His Majesty's Government on the above.

Enclosure in No. 749.

(Translation.)

NOTE VERBALE.

THE Note Verbale (No. 228) which His Britannic Majesty's Embassy were so good as to address to the Royal Ministry of Foreign Affairs on the 6th June, relative to the notice to mariners No. 89/165 of the 10th April last, crossed that of the 11th June, No. 222881/133, in which the Royal Ministry, while stating that the notice above referred to had modified the earlier one, No. 252/557, of 15th November, 1924, explained at the same time the point of view of the Italian Government on the question of principle.

In so far as this last question is concerned, the Royal Ministry of Foreign Affairs, while confirming that the second notice was designed precisely with the object of reconciling as far as possible the exigencies of naval exercises with the safety of navigation, has the honour to revert to the proposal already formulated, namely, that, taking into account the divergencies already existing as regards the fixing of territorial waters, the Government of His Britannic Majesty may be willing to consider whether it would not be opportune to refer the question to the Committee of Jurists established under the League of Nations to make suggestions for the codification of international law. The Italian Government will be glad to learn the views of the British Government on this point.

But with particular reference to the second "notice to mariners," that of 10th April last, No. 89/165, the Royal Ministry of Foreign Affairs cannot refrain from submitting to the courteous consideration of the Embassy the circumstance that international practice in the matter and the admitted exigencies of naval firing, which cannot in practice be left out of consideration, seem to exclude from the regulations of the Italian authorities, to which reference has been made, any feature of a nature to call forth objections on the part of His Britannic Majesty's Government.

Instances are not lacking in which the British Government themselves, on the occasion of similar firing practice, have declared dangerous, and certainly for reasons of absolute necessity, maritime zones extending to seven miles from the coast.

The notice to mariners of 10th April, 1925, the object of the Note Verbale No. 228 of 6th June, appears in fact, by a really remarkable and accidental coincidence, to correspond accurately, except for the different bearings and the different names of places, to the analogous notice which appears on page 493 of "The Mediterranean Pilot" (Vol. I, fifth Edition, 1913, a periodical publication issued under authority of the British Admiralty), which refers to artillery practice carried out in Maltese waters.

In confirmation and in explanation of the above, a sheet is annexed on which the two texts are reproduced opposite to each other.

* No. 748.

This point is brought up solely to show how the British naval authorities, in face of the necessities resulting from the perfection of naval armaments and of the requirements consequent upon their employment, have rightly been obliged to abandon the strict observance of the old limitations, based as they were on elements of fact which are now obsolete.

The Royal Ministry for Foreign Affairs trust, however, that His Britannic Majesty's Government, with their usual spirit of enlightenment, courtesy and fairness, will be willing to take these considerations into account, and will appreciate favourably the proposals of the Italian Government, which are designed to bring about a practical solution of the question, with a liberal respect for the arguments on both sides, and of a character satisfactory to all from every point of view.

Artillery Practice—Regulations.

THE following regulations govern the artillery practice from any fort on the Islands of Malta and Gozo:—

A blue pennant over a red flag will be displayed at the work from which practice is to take place on the afternoon previous to such practice, and at 7 a.m. on the day on which the practice takes place. The same signal will be displayed from the launch leaving the harbour with targets, whenever artillery practice is to take place from any of the defence works in the under-mentioned areas. A red flag will also be hoisted fifteen minutes before the commencement of, and kept flying during the continuance of, firing from which practice is to be made.

Limits of fire zone areas:—

(d)
(e)
(f)
(g)
(h)

The danger limit extends to 14,000 yards from the firing point.

Whenever and so long as a red flag is hoisted at any battery on the shore, between the lines described above, denoting the danger area, fishing is prohibited, and vessels are forbidden to pass through that area unless compelled to do so by stress of weather, in which case the master of the vessel may be called upon to prove that entering the area was unavoidable.

Firing Practice.

With reference to notice No. 252/557 of 1924, it is notified that the following routine will govern firing practice in the vicinity of Capes Linaro and Palo.

A red flag will be hoisted from the battery 15 minutes before firing commences, and will be kept close-up during the practice.

The limits of the firing zone are comprised between a line running 220° from Cape Linaro and another running 230° from Palo.

The danger zone extends up to 7 miles from that point of the coast from which firing is being carried on.

When and during the whole time that the red flag is hoisted on the battery then, in the above-described region, forming the dangerous area, fishing is prohibited, and it is equally forbidden for vessels to traverse the danger zone, at least if they are not constrained to do so by bad weather, in which case the master of the vessel may be called upon to prove that his passage through the zone was unavoidable.

Any person infringing the above regulations will be liable to be proceeded against, and will be subject to a fine not exceeding £5 or to a period of detention not exceeding one month, or both punishments simultaneously, and the vessel may be towed out of the prohibited area by Government launches stationed in the vicinity for the purpose.

Any person who contravenes the above regulations will be liable to prosecution, and to the infliction of a fine not exceeding 500 lire, or to a period of detention not exceeding one month, or to both penalties simultaneously, and the vessel may be towed out of the prohibited zone by the Government craft stationed there for that purpose.

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 5th October, 1925.

WITH reference to Sir Ronald Graham's despatch No. 591 of the 10th July last, I do not consider it desirable that any encouragement should be given to the League of Nations Committee for the Codification of International Law to make a report that the extent of territorial waters is a fitting subject for a codification convention.

2. An intimation of what my views are has been conveyed as a matter of information to the British member of the Committee (which is, of course, unofficial) and he has been warned privately that the Italian delegate will probably try to induce the Committee to make a report that the extent of territorial waters is a fitting subject for a codification convention.

3. The above is for your confidential information and guidance in dealing with any further communications that you may receive from the Italian Government. It is not, however, desirable that any further communication should at present be addressed by you to that government on the subject of territorial waters.

SIR, British Legation, Christiania, 15th December, 1924.

WITH reference to my despatch No. 420 of the 9th instant, I have the honour to transmit, herewith, copies of the protocols§ of the final seven meetings of the Anglo-Norwegian Committee on Territorial Waters, together with an annex to the protocol of the 9th meeting. The text of the official communiqué issued to the Norwegian press at the conclusion of the conversations will be found in the Protocol of the 12th meeting.

These protocols were drawn up with considerable caution; and a full account of the conversations will only be available when the report of the British experts can be studied in the light of the special charts they have prepared. Nor do the protocols give an adequate idea of the immense amount of work which the Committee got through during their twelve meetings, some of which lasted from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. with no interval for lunch.

* No. 690 in Dominions No. 93. † No. 751. ‡ Not reprinted: Foreign Office print T. 13150/893/380 of 31st December, 1924, Section I. § Not printed: Annexures to Foreign Office print mentioned under ‡.

From conversations with Dr. Hjort, Mr. Maurice and Captain Douglas, I gather that there would be a good chance of the present Norwegian Government accepting an arrangement by which Norway would adopt the International Three-Mile Limit, provided that (1) her jurisdiction were admitted over the Fjords; and (2) trawling were prohibited completely between the three and four-mile limit (drawn on British principles) off 120 miles of the coast of East Finmarken, and restricted in a few other unimportant localities off the coast further south. Such an arrangement would mean that we should obtain a point to which we attach great political importance with no practical sacrifice at all; for the only Fjords which could be disputed with a possibility of success are the Vestfjord and Varanger Fjord, Norwegian jurisdiction over which we have already declared ourselves ready to acknowledge. As regards the coast of Finmarken, our trawlers are now in practice excluded from a wider area than that which would be closed by such an arrangement, which would give them, moreover, a definite and easily recognizable line beyond which they could operate. In these circumstances it would be permissible to hope that the disputes and arrests of trawlers in this district would cease to give serious trouble. The other small areas which it is proposed to regulate are, I am informed, of no interest to British fishermen.

I confess that, when I suggested the initiation of these negotiations, I did not think that there was a chance of obtaining conditions so favourable; and I have difficulty, even now, in believing that they can be secured. But I have the honour to recommend that a serious effort be made to seize a favourable opportunity and put an end to a long-standing source of friction between the British Empire and Norway. In the hope that His Majesty's Government may adopt this view I venture to lay the following considerations before you:—

In the first place it is desirable to act with as little delay as possible. The present Prime Minister and Minister for Foreign Affairs entered into the negotiations with alacrity, whereas all his predecessors have shown the utmost reluctance to touch the question. Mr. Michelet, in particular, surpassed even his own record in other matters in his masterly inactivity over this one. It is not possible to say how long the present Ministry will last. They may fall so early next year that nothing can be done with them, but I am inclined to think that they will continue in office until March. In any case there is no time to be lost.

Another factor which makes it desirable to avoid delay is the favourable attitude of the Tidens Tegn, the organ of the so-called Independent Liberals, who form an influential wing of the Conservative Party, now in opposition. Mr. Thommessen, the Editor, whom I mentioned in my despatch No. 416 of the 5th instant, is at present a convinced supporter of an arrangement, as will be seen from the short article* which appeared in last Saturday's number of the paper and of which a translation is enclosed. Mr. Thommessen advocates the three-mile limit for Norway on broad grounds of national policy; and his support is of the greatest value in that Mr. Hambro, Editor of the Conservative Morgenblad, can be counted upon to oppose anything desired by His Majesty's Government. In this connexion I should warn you against the fatal effect here of any fresh British claim to jurisdiction over wide areas of the open sea. Such claims as those over Hudson's Bay, the Bay of Fundy and the Ceylon pearling banks are awkward enough for exponents of the three-mile limit to defend, but they are, at any rate, of old standing and have been digested even by those who complain of them. A new claim to jurisdiction over extensive portions of the Indian Ocean, such as I understand is advocated in some quarters, would be quite another matter, and would cut the ground from under our feet in this country. It would make a satisfactory arrangement impossible if it were known during the negotiations and would be regarded as very sharp practice if it were put forward after their successful conclusion. I feel so strongly on this point that I should prefer to drop the Norwegian negotiations altogether at the present stage if this Indian Ocean claim is to be put forward seriously.

The Norwegian contention that the province of Finmarken is entitled to peculiar treatment is based on facts. Not only is the population considerable, but it is very poor and possesses no other means of subsistence save the fishing. Moreover, the province is a frontier one and politically of importance to Norway as a barrier against Finnish and Bolshevik penetration. The barrier is none too solid.

* Not reprinted.

The people of the district are less pure in blood than those of other provinces and have shown a marked preference for vague Bolshevik ideas in the last few years. Under the old régime in Russia, Norway felt no anxiety in this quarter; but the combination of Soviet rule in Moscow and an independent Finland has changed matters; and it has now become of political importance to do everything possible to allay discontent in this northern and isolated district.

The position regarding other Powers in the event of an Anglo-Norwegian arrangement is perhaps the most pressing point to be considered. German trawlers have lately visited the coast of Finmarken, and I understand that the German Minister expressed some surprise to Mr. Mowinkel that his Government had not been invited to participate in the conversations. Dr. Hjort is particularly anxious regarding the Germans, and informed me that nothing would help matters on at the Ministry for Foreign Affairs more than an intimation that His Majesty's Government had no objection to Germany being consulted as to adherence to a possible Anglo-Norwegian arrangement. Nothing would be done without such an intimation. The British experts saw no objection in the proposal, and I should be grateful if you would authorize me with as little delay as possible to inform the Minister for Foreign Affairs and Dr. Hjort that they are at liberty to discuss the matter with the German Minister. It might be useful if I was authorized unofficially to do the same.

I cannot close this despatch without reporting the great personal success achieved by Mr. Maurice and his assistants. Not only did they succeed in establishing the most agreeable relations with their Norwegian colleagues, but it was easy to see that the latter were really impressed by their competence and concentration on the work in hand. The amount of fresh and interesting information they have acquired concerning the Norwegian fishing industry and the exact nature of the Norwegian claims will prove of great value even should matters remain where they now are. The Norwegians, too, have benefited by having their somewhat vague methods scrutinized closely by the Hydrographer to the Navy and his able assistant. It is a pleasure to add that both Dr. Hjort and the members of the British Committee expressed the highest appreciation of the services of Mr. Ingram, First Secretary to this Legation, who acted as Secretary on the British side.

No. 8. (R.) Your despatch No. 13 of 8th January: Norwegian territorial waters. Please inform Norwegian Government that His Majesty's Government regret that they are not prepared to continue the discussions on the lines described in the report of the experts at the Oslo Conference. They would, however, be glad to conclude an agreement with Norway, whereby Norway would accede to the North Sea Fisheries Convention of 6th May, 1882, in which the principle of the three-mile limit is embodied and provision is made, as regards bays, for the distance of three miles to be measured from a straight line drawn across the bay, in the part nearest the entrance, at the first point where the width does not exceed ten miles; and that as regards the waters north of latitude 61°, being the northern limit of the area covered by the North Sea Convention, they would be prepared to conclude with the Norwegian Government a special convention on the lines of the 1882 Convention, but amplified and modified to meet the special local conditions. His Majesty's Government would also agree to include in such convention a clause recognizing the Vest and Varanger Fjords as Norwegian exclusive fishery areas, provided that the accession of the German Government could be obtained.

MONSIEUR LE MINISTRE,

British Legation, Oslo, 1st April, 1925.

I HAVE received instructions from the Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs to inform Your Excellency that His Britannic Majesty's Government, having given the most careful consideration to the report drawn up by the experts at the recent Anglo-Norwegian Conference regarding territorial waters, regret that they are not prepared to continue the discussion on the lines described in that report. His Majesty's Government would, however, be glad to conclude an agreement with the Norwegian Government, whereby Norway would accede to the North Sea Fisheries Convention of 6th May, 1882. Your Excellency is no doubt aware that in that Convention the principle of the three-mile limit is embodied, and that, as regards bays, this limit is measured from a straight line drawn across the bay in question at the point nearest the opening of the bay where its width does not exceed ten miles.

As regards waters north of latitude 61 degrees, which is the northern limit of the area covered by the North Sea Convention, His Britannic Majesty's Government would be prepared to conclude with the Norwegian Government a special convention on the lines of the 1882 Convention, but amplified and modified to meet the special local conditions obtaining in those regions. His Majesty's Government would also be agreeable to include in such a convention a clause recognizing the Vestfjord and the Varanger Fjord as fishing areas exclusively reserved to Norwegian subjects, on the condition that the accession of the German Government could be obtained.

It will be seen that Mr. Mowinckel, while regretting the decision taken by His Majesty's Government not to negotiate regarding Norwegian territorial waters on the basis of the conversations which took place at the end of last year, observes that the Norwegian Government has not yet had an opportunity of considering the new proposals. Before they are able to do so, he requests that he may be informed as to the significance of the difference between the offer now made to recognize the Vest Fjord and the Varanger Fjord "as fishing areas exclusively reserved for Norwegian subjects," and that made in my note of the 29th March, 1924, "that certain large inlets, notably the Vest Fjord and the Varanger Fjord, should be recognized as part of Norway."

TRANSLATION OF NOTE FROM THE NORWEGIAN MINISTER FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS
TO MR. LINDLEY, DATED 15TH APRIL, 1925.

MR. MINISTER,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your note of the 1st instant, in which you inform me that the British Government regrets to be unable to continue negotiations regarding the question of territorial waters on the basis of the report of the British and Norwegian Committee. At the same time you put forward on behalf of your Government a proposal that Norway should adhere to the North Sea Fishery Convention of the 6th May, 1882, and that she should, as regards the waters north of latitude 61°, conclude with Great Britain a special agreement founded on the same principles as those in the Convention of 1882, but modified and amplified in order to meet the particular local needs of those regions. In such an agreement the British Government would be willing to include a clause recognizing the Vest Fjord and the Varanger Fjord as fishing areas exclusively reserved for Norwegian subjects, on condition that the accession of the German Government could be obtained.

The Norwegian Government—which regrets the point of view taken by the British Government regarding the December negotiations—has not yet had an opportunity of considering the new proposal now put forward by the British Government. Before this can be done I feel it first to be necessary to ask supplementary information in explanation of the following:—

In your note of the 1st instant you state that the British Government would eventually be ready to recognize the Vest Fjord and the Varanger Fjord "as fishing areas exclusively reserved to Norwegian subjects." In the note of the 29th March, 1924, you state "that certain inlets, notably the Vest Fjord and the Varanger Fjord, should be recognized as part of Norway." I should be grateful to hear from you what importance should be given to the difference in expression, which is to be found in the two notes.

In order that I may be able to deal with the matter further, I should be glad to hear from you when I can expect a reply regarding the above-mentioned point.

I have, &c.,

Your telegram No. 8 of April 14. Norwegian territorial waters.

Provided that an agreement is reached with the Norwegian Government on the precise lines of the instructions contained in my telegram No. 8 of 31st March, and on the understanding that by such an agreement the Norwegian Government accept three miles as the limit of Norwegian territorial waters for all purposes, His Majesty's Government will be prepared to support claim of Norwegian Government to Varanger and Vest Fjords as Norwegian national waters at a future international conference.

As regards Germany, it would be understood that German trawlers would not receive more favourable treatment than British trawlers in Norwegian waters.

MONSIEUR LE MINISTRE,

British Legation, Oslo, 30th April, 1925.

I DID not fail to refer to my Government Your Excellency's note of the 15th instant, in which you inquire as to the signification to be attached to the fact that, in my note of the 29th March, 1924, addressed to your predecessor, I stated that in certain circumstances His Britannic Majesty's Government were prepared to "recognize as part of Norway certain large inlets, notably the Vest Fjord and Varanger Fjord," whereas in my note of the 1st instant I stated that His Britannic Majesty's Government were ready, on certain conditions, to recognize these two fjords "as fishing areas exclusively reserved for Norwegian subjects."

I have now received from His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs a telegram instructing me to inform Your Excellency that, provided an agreement is reached with the Royal Norwegian Government on the precise lines laid down in my note of the 1st instant and on the understanding that, by such an agreement, the Norwegian Government accept the three-mile limit of Norwegian territorial waters for all purposes, His Britannic Majesty's Government will be prepared to support the claim of the Norwegian Government to the Varanger Fjord and the Vest Fjord as Norwegian national waters at future international conferences. As regards Germany, it would be understood that German trawlers would not receive more favourable treatment in Norwegian waters than British trawlers.

Enclosure 2 in No. 756.

(No. 124.)

SIR,

British Legation, Oslo, 5th May, 1925.

I DISCUSSED this morning with the Prime Minister the note regarding territorial waters, of which a copy was enclosed in my despatch No. 119 of the 30th ultimo. Mr. Mowinckel began by thanking me for the note, the contents of which had relieved him of some anxiety. He went on to point out that we did not now offer to recognize the Varanger Fjord and the Vest Fjord as Norwegian territorial waters, but merely to advocate such recognition at future international conferences. He wondered whether His Majesty's Government had any particular conference in view. I replied that I did not think so, and that the wording of the note seemed to me to be due to the obvious difficulty of our recognizing these fjords as Norwegian unless other nations did the same. The Prime Minister seemed satisfied with this explanation, which, as I gathered, tallied with what he had heard from Professor Hjort, who is now in London.

Mr. Mowinckel went on to say that he had not yet received the opinion of the Department of Commerce regarding the results of the recent Anglo-Norwegian Conference, and that, in consequence, those results had not been considered by the Government or laid before the Storting. He had now given the Department an ultimatum and informed them that he would communicate the relevant papers to the members of the Storting on the 15th May, whether or not he received the observations of the Department before.

His Excellency then discussed the sort of answer the Norwegian Government might send to my note. The more he considered the matter, the less divergence did he find between the terms of that note and the recommendations of the Conference; and he agreed with the view that the whole matter would eventually have to become one for international agreement. He was inclined to think that the reply might take the form of a statement that the Norwegian Government were ready to conclude an international agreement based on the findings of the Anglo-Norwegian Experts.

It seemed to me that Mr. Mowinckel was not very clear in his mind, and I let him continue talking for some time before pointing out that an answer such as he suggested would not lead to any useful result. His Majesty's Government had stated that they could not negotiate on the basis of the findings of the Experts, and it seemed to me that it would be regrettable if, in the face of this decision, the Norwegian Government suggested continuing negotiations on that basis. I thought that the first thing the Norwegian Government should do was to make up their minds whether they would adhere to the North Sea Convention. If they had no objection to this, they might so inform us in their reply and suggest that, as regards the area north of latitude 61°, they would like to discuss with us what modifications and amplifications could be introduced into the Convention suitable to the local conditions obtaining in that area. If the two Governments could reach an agreement, we could either invite other governments to adhere or could present a united front to such governments at a future international conference.

The Prime Minister listened carefully to what I said and agreed that it might not be necessary in his reply to refer to the recent Conference at all. He realized the importance of not taking up an attitude in opposition to that assumed by His Majesty's Government on this point. He had not yet discussed the matter with his colleagues, and would not come to any decision until Professor Hjort returned from London, where he had had the advantage of going into the question with Mr. Maurice and others. As regards the North Sea Convention, he saw no objection in principle to Norway adhering to it, but he did not think such adherence would be desirable unless at the same time a satisfactory arrangement were concluded regarding the area north of latitude 61°.

Towards the end of our conversation, Mr. Mowinckel expressed some uneasiness as to the possible action of the Soviet Government. He feared that they might claim recognition for their own pretensions in return for their recognition of any change in Norwegian territorial waters. I pointed out that as there was no question of extending those waters beyond what Norway already claimed, but rather of restricting them, I did not see what grounds the Soviet could have for making difficulties.

The Right Honourable
Austen Chamberlain, M.P.,
&c., &c., &c.

I have, &c.,
F. O. LINDLEY.

Enclosure 3 in No. 756.

(No. 141.)

SIR,

British Legation, Oslo, 20th May, 1925.

WITH reference to my despatch No. 124 of the 5th instant, I have the honour to transmit herewith translation of a note from the Norwegian Minister for Foreign Affairs replying to my note of the 30th ultimo, on the subject of Norwegian territorial waters, of which a copy was transmitted to you in my despatch No. 119 of the same date.

It will be observed that the Prime Minister, while welcoming the declaration that His Majesty's Government would, in certain circumstances, "be prepared to support the claim of the Norwegian Government to the Varanger Fjord and the Vest Fjord as Norwegian national waters at future international conferences," draws attention to the fact that this declaration differs from that contained in my note of the 29th March, 1924, in which His Majesty's Government declared themselves ready "to recognize as part of Norway certain large inlets, notably the Vest Fjord and the Varanger Fjord." Mr. Mowinckel goes on to observe that it is not possible to judge what the views of His Majesty's Government are regarding the remaining fjords, either from my note of the 1st April or from that of the 30th, and he states that before the Norwegian Government can deal with the latest British proposal, they desire explanations regarding the views of His Majesty's Government on the subject not only of the two fjords mentioned, but also of the remaining Norwegian fjords.

The note then goes on to express the opinion that it would be of interest to obtain further information regarding the convention, which the British Government proposes to conclude with the Norwegian Government in regard to the area north of latitude 61°, and what form the amplifications and modifications of the North Sea Convention would take in order to meet the local conditions of the area in question.

The note concludes by expressing the opinion that an agreement regarding territorial waters will eventually be found to depend on the possibility of its acceptance, not merely by Germany, but by all other interested countries. Without such international acceptance, an agreement such as that now being discussed would scarcely have the authority required by the situation.

The Prime Minister has been away ever since I received this note, so that I have not had an opportunity of discussing it with him. I have, however, had a long conversation with Dr. Hjort, to whom Mr. Mowinckel has communicated all the reports received from the various Government departments regarding the Anglo-Norwegian negotiations of last year and whom he has requested to furnish him with a considered opinion regarding the future action to be taken by the Norwegian Government. Professor Hjort discussed the matter with his usual frankness and showed me the draft of his report to the Prime Minister. The important point in this communication was that the Professor could not advise the Norwegian Government to continue the negotiations unless His Majesty's Government were prepared to recognize the Norwegian fjords as Norwegian territorial waters. In explaining this point of view to me the Professor said that he based his advice on two considerations. The first was that he did not believe that the Storting would accept any arrangement which did not accord to Norway jurisdiction over her fjords. It was the prospect of obtaining this recognition that had moved the Storting to accord a favourable reception to Dr. Hjort's lecture after the conclusion of the negotiations, and he felt that, even if he and the Government were willing to drop this demand, the Storting would insist on its being retained. Apart from the position of Mr. Mowinckel as Prime Minister, which would be shaken were the Storting to reject his advice on this important subject, it would be clearly better for Anglo-Norwegian relations that the negotiations should be quietly dropped rather than that they should come to an end after a heated public debate.

But after examining the whole dossier, and especially a memorandum drawn up by the Norwegian Admiralty, Professor Hjort would not himself feel justified in advising his Government to conclude an arrangement which did not give Norway jurisdiction over her fjords, even if the Storting were likely to accept it. The fact was that the configuration of the coast was such that, if the ordinary three-mile limit were taken as the boundary of Norwegian jurisdiction, the most serious difficulties of a practical nature arose in the event of hostilities, during which Norway was neutral. In the first place the coastal communications, which were necessary to Norway, owing to the lack of railways, were seriously hampered, since the Norwegian vessels keeping up these communications would have to desert their ordinary routes and follow the sinuosities of the coast in order to avoid possible interference from belligerent vessels. Moreover, it would be next to impossible for the Norwegian naval authorities to exercise any useful supervision over waters with such a long and complicated boundary. Finally, it would be quite possible for a naval action between the belligerents to be fought in places which, if not actually landlocked, were so surrounded by Norwegian territory as to expose the inhabitants to the most disagreeable experiences.

I told Professor Hjort that I entirely agreed with him regarding the inadvisability of the Norwegian Government presenting to the Storting an agreement which the latter were likely to throw out. If we could not come to an arrangement which the Prime Minister could present to the Chamber with a real prospect of its being accepted, it would be far better to let the whole matter quietly drop. As regards the naval difficulties, I observed that during the late war the Norwegian authorities, as a matter of fact, had not attempted to maintain the full extent of their theoretical claims, and I did not know that Norwegian interests had been gravely compromised. To this Dr. Hjort replied that it was perfectly true that one set of instructions had been issued to the Naval Authorities in respect of those waters which were accepted by the belligerents as Norwegian, and that another set of instructions had been issued regarding the waters which Norway claimed as hers, but which the belligerents did not recognize as such. This state of affairs had been extremely inconvenient, and the Norwegian Admiralty were most anxious that it should not recur.

I observed that the negotiations had certainly taken a curious turn. We had considered that the chief difficulties were connected with the fishing industry, but it now appeared that they were due to Admiralty considerations on both sides. Dr. Hjort agreed with this appreciation, and said that he believed that, provided His Majesty's Government accepted Norwegian claims regarding the fjords, the fishing difficulties could be adjusted.

After discussing the matter further in all its bearings with the Professor, I told him that I did not think any useful progress would be made by a series of written communications. I would, therefore, go over to London at the earliest possible opportunity and discuss the whole question with the Foreign Office and the other departments concerned. If, as a result of that discussion, I found that it might be possible to come to an agreement, I would recommend that Dr. Hjort and a Norwegian naval representative (who would probably be Commodore Cade, who commanded the Norwegian forces on the West Coast during the War, and who has always been a great friend of this Legation) should proceed to London to negotiate. Professor Hjort agreed that this was the best thing to do at the present moment.

As regards the concluding sentences of Mr. Mowinckel's note dealing with the international aspect of a possible agreement, Professor Hjort informed me that the Prime Minister had not meant to raise any difficulties in this connexion. The Professor and I both agreed that it would be most desirable that an Anglo-Norwegian agreement should be come to and that the simplest manner of dealing with the international side of it was to invite other interested countries to adhere. If necessary a clause could be inserted in the agreement to the effect that it would lapse unless certain named countries adhered within a suitable interval.

I have, &c.,

F. O. LINDLEY.

NOTE FROM THE NORWEGIAN MINISTER FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS TO MR. LINDLEY,
12TH MAY, 1925.

MONSIEUR LE MINISTRE,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your note of 30th April, 1925, in which you were good enough to acquaint me with further explanations regarding a particular point which I ventured to raise in my note of 15th April, 1925.

In this latter note I directed your attention to a discrepancy in the statements of the British Government concerning the Vest Fjord and the Varanger Fjord in your note of 1st April of this year as compared with that in your note of 29th March, 1924.

I now learn from your note of 30th April that your Government, in conjunction with its readiness to recognize the Vest Fjord and Varanger Fjord as fishing areas exclusively reserved for Norwegian subjects, "will" also, in certain circumstances, "be prepared to support the claim of the Norwegian Government to the Varanger Fjord and Vest Fjord as Norwegian national waters at future international conferences."

While welcoming this declaration of the British Government, I cannot refrain from drawing attention to the fact that there is still a discrepancy between this promise and the statement in the note of 29th March, 1924, in which the British Government stated that in certain circumstances it was prepared "to recognize as part of Norway certain large inlets, notably the Vest fjord and the Varanger fjord."

The attitude of the British Government towards the above fjords is not clear from either of the notes of 1st or 30th April, 1925, in that the notes only name specifically the Vest fjord and Varanger fjord, and furthermore refer to the provisions of the North Sea Convention of 1882, in which the three-mile limit in regard to fjords (bays) "is measured from a straight line drawn across the bay in question at the point nearest the opening of the bay where its width does not exceed ten miles." As far as the waters are concerned north of 61° latitude, which is the limit of the North Sea Convention, the British Government declares its readiness to conclude "a special convention on the lines of the 1882 Convention but amplified and modified to meet the especial local conditions obtaining in those regions."

Before the Norwegian Government can undertake a closer investigation of the proposals which appear in the two notes of the British Government, it will be necessary to obtain further light on the British Government's attitude, not only regarding the Varanger fjord and Vest fjord, but also regarding the other Norwegian fjords.

It would also be of interest to receive further details regarding the Convention which the British Government, in its note of 1st April, declares itself prepared eventually to conclude with the Norwegian Government as regards waters north of 61° latitude, and of which it is said that it (sic) can be "amplified and modified to meet the special local conditions obtaining in those regions," especially in regard to the substance and scope of these amplifications and modifications which are to meet the local conditions.

In your note of 1st April, 1925, it is stated that the recognition on the part of Great Britain of the Vest fjord and Varanger fjord "as fishing areas" must be conditional upon the accession of the German Government. And in your note of 30th April, 1925, you say that so far as Germany is concerned, it must be understood that German trawlers would not receive more favourable treatment in "Norwegian waters" than British trawlers.

Both these notes give me the impression that the British Government is of opinion that there will eventually be a question of a regulation of territorial waters of international application.

This coincides with the opinion of the Norwegian Government that any eventual agreement regarding the question of territorial waters will be conditional upon the accession not only of Germany, but of all the countries which are concerned, either upon the grounds of their interest in the question or as the result of their attitude towards it generally. Without such an international regulation an agreement such as is here contemplated will lack the general application, which, from its very nature, is essential to it.

TELEGRAM TO MR. LINDLEY (OSLO) FROM THE FOREIGN OFFICE.

(Sent 9.20 a.m., 10th June, 1925.)

(No. 16 (R).)

YOUR despatch No. 141 of 20th May.

You may inform Norwegian Government that, after careful consideration of their note to you of 12th May last, His Majesty's Government are prepared to make substantial concessions in regard to the recognition of Norwegian jurisdiction over fjords.

2. As regards the proposed extension of the North Sea Convention to area north of latitude 61 they have reason to believe that the arrangements which they have in view will be satisfactory to both parties.

3. You should therefore urge them to send their delegates over here as soon as possible for the purpose of discussing in detail the question of the fjords and the arrangements north of latitude 61.

4. In making this communication to the Norwegian Government you should explain to them verbally that some of the points which in the view of His Majesty's Government will present difficulty in reaching a settlement about the fjords which the Norwegian Government are understood to claim as being included within their jurisdiction are the shape of the opening in some and the fact that in many cases the fjord is formed by off-lying islands or ends in a channel.

YOUR telegram No. 16.

I addressed note to Minister for Foreign Affairs yesterday in terms of instructions and made verbal explanations regarding possible difficulties. I have also had a long conversation with Professor Hjort.

Result is that I hope Professor Hjort, Commodore Gade and Secretary will arrive in London on 22nd June whether there is change of government or not.

Despatch follows.

Enclosure 3 in No. 757.

(No. 165.)

SIR,

British Legation, Oslo, 11th June, 1925.

ON receipt of your telegram No. 16 of the 10th instant I at once saw the Prime Minister, who had returned that morning from Stavanger, and handed him the note, of which I have the honour to transmit copy herewith, containing the latest proposals of His Majesty's Government on the subject of Norwegian territorial waters.

2. At the same time I explained to Mr. Mowinckel that there might be difficulty in reaching a settlement on account of the configuration of some of the inlets, which are called fjords and which the British authorities do not consider they would be justified in treating differently from the ordinary coast-line of the country. I made it clear to him, as you, Sir, in your last interview instructed me to do, that His Majesty's Government had now gone as far as they could to meet the Norwegian point of view, and that we expected that the Norwegians on their side would show an accommodating spirit regarding the points which remained at issue.

3. The Prime Minister was obviously gratified at the nature of my communication and said that he attached the greatest importance to coming to an arrangement. As I knew, there was a Cabinet crisis blowing up on the ridiculously unimportant question as to whether certain communal and State bodies should have the right to free postage. The matter would come to a head on Friday, and it was possible that his Government would fall over it. Speaking quite privately he believed that the matter would be settled at the last moment and that there would be no change of Government, but he hardly felt justified in appointing the delegates two days before the crisis. I did not conceal my disappointment at this decision, which was at variance with what he had told Professor Hjort in my absence and what I had learnt from the Permanent Head of the Norwegian Foreign Office before the Prime Minister returned. I pointed out to His Excellency that the despatch of the delegates was merely a continuance of the conversations which had taken place before Christmas and did not constitute a new departure, to which exception might legitimately be taken by the Opposition. Mr. Mowinckel agreed to some extent with me and said that he would lay the matter before his colleagues that afternoon, but said that he did not think it would be wise to alter his decision in the matter.

4. During the afternoon I had a long conversation with Professor Hjort, to whom I also explained the views of His Majesty's Government and the possibility of difficulties arising regarding certain inlets. I found the Professor was also disappointed at his brother-in-law's change of front, but he did not attach great importance to it. He observed that he was an active member of the Independent Liberal Party, which was an important element in the Opposition and that the Conservative Party also owed him a debt for the various political speeches which he had lately made. He had spoken to Dr. Thommessen, the Editor of the Tidens Tegn, and the most influential man in the Independent Liberal Party, and also to Mr. Lykke, the Parliamentary Leader of the Conservatives, who would probably form the new Government if there were a change. He had found both these gentlemen in favour of a settlement, and he thought that, even if there were a change of Government, he would be able to get off with the delegates on Saturday, the 20th instant. It would in any case be rather difficult for him to go before that day.

5. I had the honour to telegraph a résumé of what I have written above in my telegram No. 19 of to-day's date, and I should like to take this opportunity of thanking the Foreign Office for their promptitude in sending me instructions in time to lay the matter before the Prime Minister before the Cabinet crisis developed. I should add that Professor Hjort told me that he intended to ask the Government to allow him to take Commodore Gade, Chief of the Norwegian Naval Staff and well known for his pro-English sympathies during the War, and Mr. Smith Kielland of the Norwegian Foreign Office, to London with him.

I have, &c.,

3. By direction, therefore, of His Britannic Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, I am to urge Your Excellency to send Norwegian delegates over to London as soon as possible for the purpose of discussing in detail the question of these fjords and the arrangements to be made north of latitude sixty-one degrees.

16TH JULY. My despatch 11th May, Dominions 196, Confidential.* As your Ministers will be aware, discussions have been proceeding for some time between

* No. 755.

His Majesty's Government and the Norwegian Government on the subject of Norwegian territorial waters. Recently conference has been held here between representatives of both Governments and following recommendations made (1) that a convention should be concluded with Norway under which Norway would accept the principle of the three-mile limit while on our side certain specified Norwegian fjords would be recognized as territorial inlets; (2) that another convention should be concluded dealing with question of fisheries north of latitude 61 degrees north on lines of Anglo-Danish Convention of 1901; (3) that Norway should accede to the North Sea Fisheries Convention of 1882. Above recommendations open the way (a) to ending the disputes regarding the seizure by Norway of British fishing vessels in places which His Majesty's Government cannot admit to be Norwegian waters (b) to securing the recognition of the three-mile limit by Norway (which has long maintained claim to jurisdiction up to four miles) and her support for this limit at any future International conference. Question whether recognition of Norwegian territorial inlets may at some time cause embarrassment in our dealings with other Powers has been carefully considered but each case has been carefully scrutinized by Admiralty experts and His Majesty's Government are advised that proposed concessions can be properly and safely made and would indeed be likely to strengthen any claims put forward at an International conference on behalf of various parts of the British Empire.

Declaration of principle of three-mile limit for territorial waters and the recognition of specified territorial inlets are in accordance with conclusions of Imperial Conference 1923, see my despatch of 10th January, 1924, Confidential, Dominions No. 13.*

His Majesty's Government are prepared to accept conclusions of the Conference with Norwegian Representatives. They are satisfied that the terms arranged between the two delegations are beneficial to the interests of the British Empire and they propose to proceed with preparation of necessary conventions to give effect to conclusions (1) and (2). But they would be glad to learn as soon as possible by telegraph whether your Ministers have any observations to make. Matter most urgent as Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs fears that unless agreement with Norway be reached without delay prospect of a settlement may be endangered.—AMERY.

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 20th August, 1925.

WITH reference to my telegram No. 25 of the 16th July and my despatch No. 216 of the 19th instant, I transmit to you herewith a communication to the principal Norwegian Delegate to the recent conference in London regarding Norwegian territorial waters, signed by the two British Delegates, to the effect that His Majesty The King will be prepared to enter into conventions with the King of Norway on the lines indicated in the enclosures to that communication.

2. I should be glad if you would make such arrangements as may be necessary for the immediate transmission of this communication to Doctor Hjort.

3. I have conveyed to the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty and the Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries my high appreciation of the services rendered by Captain Douglas and Mr. Maurice and their assistants in connexion with these negotiations.

SIR,

London, 18th August, 1925.

WE have submitted to His Britannic Majesty's Government the summary of conclusions adopted at the eighth meeting of the Anglo-Norwegian conference, and we are authorised to inform you and Kommandor Gade that His Britannic Majesty will be prepared to enter into conventions with His Majesty the King of Norway in accordance therewith.

With reference to the questions addressed to us by the Norwegian Delegation at our seventh meeting, we are authorised to state that, should agreement be reached on the points at issue between His Britannic Majesty's Government and the Norwegian Government, His Britannic Majesty's Government would be prepared, jointly with the Norwegian Government, to communicate the conventions when concluded to other governments interested and to invite their accession thereto. His Britannic Majesty's Government would, moreover, be prepared to agree to the inclusion in the conventions of provisions reserving complete liberty to both Parties to denounce the agreements and to resume their existing claims regarding territorial waters and rights of fishing, should the interested Powers refuse to recognize Norwegian territorial claims to the same extent as His Britannic Majesty, or to accede to the proposed convention about fisheries.

* No. 758.

The terms set forth in the drafts herewith* represent the utmost limit of the concessions which His Britannic Majesty's Government are prepared to make.

His Majesty's Government trust that the Norwegian Government will give instructions to the captains of its fishery-protection cruisers to act in accordance with the proposed Fisheries Convention without waiting for its formal ratification. His Britannic Majesty's Government will enjoin a corresponding line of conduct upon the masters of all British fishing vessels fishing in waters adjacent to the coast of Norway.

Enclosure in No. 766.

(No. 288.)

SIR,

British Legation, Oslo, 8th October, 1925.

WITH reference to my despatch No. 287 of the 6th instant, I have the honour to state that yesterday I had an interview upon his return from Geneva with Mr. Mowinkel, the Prime Minister and Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, in the course of which he raised the question of the Anglo-Norwegian fishery and territorial waters agreements.

2. Mr. Mowinkel said that he had just received from Dr. Hjort a confidential letter urging him to come to an early decision regarding the proposal in Mr. Maurice's and Captain Douglas' letter of 18th August that the Norwegian Government should give instructions to the Captains of its fishery protection cruisers to act in accordance with the proposed Fisheries Convention without waiting for its formal ratification, if His Majesty's Government were to enjoin a corresponding line of conduct upon the masters of all British fishing vessels fishing in waters adjacent to the coast of Norway. Mr. Mowinkel said that without a moment's hesitation he had decided against any such provisional arrangement, and he authorized me so to inform you. He stated that if it became known among the narrow-minded fishing population of the north that such instructions had been issued, the effect on public opinion would be far worse than any number of trawler incidents. I pointed out to him the advantages which would accrue to Norwegian fishermen from the provisional exclusion of British trawlers from the Varanger and Vest fjords and from the temporary observances of the stipulations laid down in the article drafted in substitution for Article 19 of the Anglo-Danish Convention of 1901 regarding Iceland and the Faroe Islands.

* Not printed here; see No. 758 for their substance. † No. 765.

Mr. Mowinckel remained adamant, however, and said that it would prejudice the whole future of the agreements if he were to take the proposed step. I told him that I much regretted his decision, that of course he must be the best judge of Norwegian psychology in the matter and that I only hoped he had consulted his fishery experts before taking this decision, which I could not help feeling was based on political rather than practical grounds. Mr. Mowinckel replied that no Norwegian Government could have decided otherwise.

3. He then reverted to the recent newspaper articles on the subject, which I reported in my despatch No. 278 of the 23rd ultimo and deplored their effect on public opinion. He seemed to cast the blame for them on injudicious publications in the English press, but I pointed out to him that the most offending paragraph of all was a three-months' old extract from the Yorkshire Post dating from the time of the conversations in London, and that, as far as I was aware, the British press had been practically silent on the subject during the past two or three months.

4. Mr. Mowinckel is evidently rather less optimistic than usual about these agreements. Had he felt no doubts as to their going through, he would not, I feel sure, have been so categorical in his refusal to entertain the idea of a modus vivendi. It is the fact of his uncertainty as to their fate which increases his caution. Nor has his decision come as a surprise to me—see paragraph 6 of my despatch No. 278 of the 23rd ultimo. I left, however, with the distinct impression that he was determined to try and see the agreements through, and that in his opinion his chances of success were about even, provided only the discussions in the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Storting and in the Storting itself were permitted to take place in an atmosphere unprejudiced by press interference or by actual trawler incidents. As regards the latter, I venture again to express the hope that all that within reason can be done, will be done to impress on the trawling industry the desirability of avoiding during the next six months incidents which will influence Norwegian opinion against the proposed agreements.

EXTRACT FROM "Izvestiya" OF 20TH AUGUST.

THE FIGHT AGAINST FOREIGN POACHERS IN RUSSIAN WATERS.

EXISTING measures of the Criminal Code and Code of Criminal Procedure relating to the conservation of fishing interests are insufficient to protect the latter against the poaching trade, especially in areas off the Pacific coast, the Arctic Ocean and the White Sea, where foreign industrialists poach. In view of this the People's Commissariat for Agriculture has worked out a number of draft additions to the Code and has applied to the People's Commissariat for Justice for its co-operation in carrying this draft through urgently, so that the new measures may apply in the Far East in time for the coming fishing season. The sense of the additions in question is as follows:—

Part 2, chapter 1 of the Criminal Code concerning offences against the system of administration to be supplemented by an article, 99a, which shall prescribe that in cases of fishing, sea-animal hunting, and other maritime industries in seas, rivers and lakes which have a general importance for the republic, without the necessary permission, in forbidden waters, in forbidden areas, or by forbidden methods, the guilty parties shall be liable to imprisonment for up to one year or to the payment of a fine of up to five hundred roubles, together with confiscation of the catch and gear, and of the vessels and all their equipment and cargo employed in the illegal commerce. The People's Commissariat for Agriculture's draft proposes to add to the rules as to imposition of fines under Articles 220-a and others an addition for including the organs of fisheries-inspection among those which are charged with reporting violations of the law on this matter. Finally, it is proposed to add to Article 197 of the code of criminal procedure a supplement for the inclusion of the organs of fisheries-inspection among the competent investigating organs mentioned in that Article.

Enclosure in No. 771.

(No. 503.)

SIR,

Stockholm, 12th December, 1924.

I HAVE the honour to transmit translation of an interesting article on the limit of Swedish territorial waters, published in the Stockholme Dagblad of the 9th instant.

The writer points out in the concluding paragraph that in the course of the discussion respecting legislation for the suppression of smuggling—in regard to which a Conference of the Scandinavian States and of the countries which touch the Baltic was recently held at Helsingfors (see my despatch No. 491 of the 4th instant)—attention has been directed to the doubtful character, from the point of view of International Law, of the Swedish claim to a four-mile limit. He examines the claim in question and shows that originally the three-mile limit was the rule in Sweden. In 1779 the three-mile limit was suddenly replaced by the "German mile," which is equivalent to four nautical miles. On the whole, however, the three-mile limit seems to have been maintained until a late period in the nineteenth century when the four-mile limit again appeared, viz., in certain regulations issued in 1871 with regard to the fisheries on the west coast of Sweden. In this case the four-mile limit was copied from a Norwegian decree of 1869, issued for the purpose of excluding Swedish fishermen from certain parts of the Norwegian coast. Since that time the erroneous belief has prevailed that the four-mile limit has for long been the distance to which the territorial waters of Sweden extend.

I have sent copies of this despatch to His Majesty's Ministers at Christiania, Copenhagen and Helsingfors.

I have, &c.,

"STOCKHOLME DAGBLAD."

(9th December, 1924.)

The Limit of Swedish territorial waters, by Lage Stael von Holstein.

It is frequently stated, with an air of authority, in documents and works which are accessible to the general public that the limit of the territorial waters claimed by both Sweden and Norway extends to a distance of four nautical miles from the outermost rock which is uncovered at high tide. On the 11th November, 1874, the Swedish Government caused a Note to be addressed to Lord Derby in which this position was maintained. Mr. Sjöborg, the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, moreover declared at the meeting of the International Law Association, which took place in Stockholm last autumn, that the four-mile limit had been uninterruptedly maintained by the Swedish authorities since 1779, in which year the distance of the limit is stated to have been fixed for the first time. The limit in question—in virtue of being "un usage séculaire et continu"—may therefore claim to be regarded as valid in international law and as an exception to the three mile, which is accepted by the majority of nations.

I recently explained, in an address to a meeting of experts, the reasons for the practice generally adopted by the Powers. These were the same as those adduced by me in my essay on the limit of Swedish neutrality, in which I pleaded for a reconsideration of the supposed facts. In view of the practical character of the subject—the Swedish Government has proposed an international conference in regard to the policing of the coastal waters and a law on smuggling in the Baltic may shortly be expected—a review of the question may not be without interest. The modern international doctrine of reciprocity does not permit the individual State to encroach on the freedom of the sea by means of an arbitrary extension of its territorial waters and the acute character which this doctrine has acquired in international practice makes it highly desirable that a weak Power should have well-defined views as to the line of policy which it proposes to follow in this particular. There is a risk that a continued application of the four-mile limit may impose on our diplomacy tasks which it is not in a position to perform.

The object of our inquiry is to discover to what extent the four-mile limit contended for by Sweden is based on a prescriptive right of sufficiently long and uninterrupted duration to make it possible to put forward a claim for recognition on the part of other Powers in the same manner as the more usual three-mile limit is recognized. We will therefore, in the first place, endeavour to ascertain what was the original Swedish territorial limit.

The documents which I have examined in the Records Department happily afford ample information on the point. In 1758, in consequence of the captures of vessels which were taking place, Kaulbars, the landshövding of Gothenburg, applied to the Government for instructions respecting the limit within which prizes could be captured. The Chancery, the Admiralty, and the Ministry of Commerce, after deliberating, replied that the waters to a distance of three miles from the Swedish coast seawards should undoubtedly be regarded as being under Swedish sovereignty, and that consequently no hostilities should be permitted within this limit. In respect of the Sound a line half-way across—where the width does not exceed six miles—was to be regarded as the limit. This rule has been retained until the present day. The limit as thus fixed replaced the limits previously determined by gunshot or the naked eye, and for the first time not only in the case of Sweden but also in that of the whole of Europe the three-mile limit was taken as the norm in respect of neutrality. An entirely independent method of calculation was employed to obtain this result. In accordance with the regulations issued in 1696 the pilot water was regarded as having an extension of three miles, and it was only natural that the distance in question should receive a more general application.

Twenty years later it was found necessary to prescribe rules for convoying squadrons in regard to neutral zones. The department concerned accordingly renewed the proposal that the waters within which hostilities might not take place should extend for three miles from the shore, as previously laid down, and "in order that ignorance may not be pleaded as to the extent of the territorial waters, three miles, that is to say, the distance to which the pilot water commonly extends, are specially prescribed and regarded as 'neutral miles,' whether a pilot is on board or not." On the proposal of the Minister Falkengren this provision was subsequently amended. It was not regarded as having a sufficiently secure basis, and there were doubts as to the possibility of applying it. On 23th May, 1779, Duke Charles the Younger signed a rescript which contained the following passage: "Our royal authority extends one sea, or so-called German, mile beyond the outermost rocks and islets which are uncovered at high tide, within which limit hostilities shall be prohibited, and this prohibition shall apply whether there is a Swedish pilot on board or not."

The three-mile limit was thus for no apparent reason replaced by the German mile, which extended to a distance of $4\frac{1}{4}$ miles. This was doubtless due to the fact that action in agreement with the Danish rules in force was thought desirable. There is, however, some uncertainty as to whether the German mile had in this case the nautical signification usually assigned to it. It is only in the prize regulations of 1788 and 1808 that the sea-mile is defined as being equivalent to one-fifteenth of a degree. But the limit was regarded as extending only from inhabited rocks and islets, and was thus in some degree modified.

The earlier customs regulations of the nineteenth century show traces of the four-mile limit. On the other hand, it does not appear in any document relating to fisheries nor is it mentioned in any diplomatic State paper, except the Note of 1874 referred to above. The claim to a four-mile limit would not appear to be based on any document of the eighteenth century but on an instruction of the year 1686 in which, however, only gunshot distance is mentioned. This means that contact with the previous rules had been entirely lost.

As is well known the regulations issued in 1871 with regard to the west coast fisheries assume the existence of the four-mile limit. Is the missing link to be sought here? Far from it! The limit in question was copied from a Norwegian decree of 1869, by which Swedish fishers were excluded from Söndmöre and after 1869 from Romsdal. The decree in question was issued merely as a reprisal and therefore only applied to the coast mentioned. No change was made in regard to the traditional outermost line of rocks. This measure was not to the advantage of Sweden. It prevented us from basing, as the experts proposed, the fisheries convention with Denmark of 1899 on the three-miles limit—which is more favourable to our interests and which Denmark had expressly approved through her adhesion to the North Sea Convention in 1882.

The four-mile limit has found a place in the customs regulations since 1871, and it has been brought into prominence as the Swedish territorial limit even in literature. It is in reality a Norwegian rule which has always been contested, and which was rejected by Denmark, the country in which it originated, as long ago as 1874.

When our diplomacy in 1914 made the four-mile limit the limit of Swedish neutrality this step was calculated to arouse astonishment. The communication was not followed by recognition on the part of other Powers, and it was expressly ignored by the Oberpreisengericht at Berlin. As a fact during the War the protection afforded by our neutrality did not extend beyond the three-mile limit. The protests which were made in regard to the four-mile limit were only concerned with the minefields of the belligerents, the extent of which, owing to defects in the mines' convention in force, was undoubtedly excessive.

In the course of the discussion respecting legislation for the suppression of smuggling attention has been directed to the doubtful character, from the point of view of international law, of our contention in regard to the four-mile limit. No seizures have, however, been made outside the three-mile limit, and for this reason the question has not become acute as regards jurisdiction, although this is the case in Norway and Finland.

(No. 347.)

SIR,

Stockholm, 27th August, 1924.

I HAVE the honour to transmit herewith copies and translation of a Royal Decree, dated 21st August (No. 397), relating to the extent of Swedish Territorial Waters in respect of the area adjoining the sea frontier between Norway and Sweden.

The Swedish Maritime Law experts consulted by the "Aftonbladet" state that the enclosed Decree has the effect of extending the customs sea frontier between Norway and Sweden, as defined in the agreement between those countries of 1909, so as to coincide with the Swedish territorial limit of four nautical miles. Under that Agreement, as hitherto interpreted, the customs sea frontier between the two countries extended only three nautical miles.

I also enclose a translation of the clause of the Swedish Customs Statute referred to in the Decree.

The Decree is doubtless chiefly intended to oblige smugglers of spirits lying off the Grissbadarne Islands (in Swedish waters) near Stromsbad, to move out into deeper waters, and has already had this effect.

In this connexion it might be mentioned that A/B Stockholmsystemet (the liquor control company) and the Temperance Committee have jointly requested the Governor-General of Stockholm to reinforce the customs and harbour police in Stockholm, with a view to the more effective prevention of the smuggling of spirits, which has led to an alarming increase of drunkenness in the capital during the last few months.

I have transmitted a copy of this despatch to His Majesty's Minister at Christiania.

TRANSLATION OF PARAGRAPH 1 IN THE CUSTOMS STATUTE OF THE 1ST JULY, 1904.

Clause 1.—All vessels, whether destined for Swedish or foreign ports, shall, when in Swedish territorial waters, be subject to the inspection of the Customs.

Clause 2.—Swedish territorial waters for this purpose are estimated to extend up to one geographical mile (4 minutes or 7,420 metres) from the coast or outermost outlying islets and rocks not perpetually washed by the sea. Provided that in frontier waters of less breadth than two geographical miles the frontier line shall be deemed to coincide with the middle line, unless otherwise specially laid down.

ROYAL DECREE

Concerning the extent of Swedish Territorial Waters in respect of the area adjoining the sea frontier between Sweden and Norway.

Given at the Palace, Stockholm, 21st August, 1924.

His Majesty has thought fit to decree that the provisions of paragraph 1, clause 2, of the Customs Statute of the 1st July, 1904, regarding the extent of Swedish territorial waters shall, in respect of the area adjoining the sea frontier between Sweden and Norway be interpreted to mean that Swedish territorial waters, whilst observing the frontier delimited under the arbitration agreement between Sweden and Norway of the 23rd October, 1909, shall be deemed to extend up to one geographical mile from the coast or the outermost outlying islets and rocks which are not perpetually washed by the sea, or from the part falling on the Swedish side of the frontier of a straight line referred to in the aforesaid agreement connecting the northernmost of the rocks designated Stora Drammen and the Hejeknubb rock south-east of the Island of Heja.

This Decree comes into force on the 25th August, 1924.

Enclosure 2 in No. 772.

(No. 14.)

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 13th January, 1925.

WITH reference to Mr. Ramsay's despatch No. 347 of the 27th August last, enclosing a translation of a Swedish royal decree dated 21st August, 1924, relative to the extent of Swedish territorial waters in the area adjoining the sea frontier between Norway and Sweden, it may be convenient to recall the circumstances in which this question has on various occasions been the subject of representations made by His Majesty's Government to the Swedish Government.

2. A circular despatch was sent from the Foreign Office on 25th September, 1874, to His Majesty's Representatives at the capitals of the principal maritime Powers inquiring the views of those Powers respecting the extent of maritime jurisdiction, and in the case of Sweden and Norway the reply was to the effect that

"the Swedish and Norwegian Government never had occasion either to recognize or to contest the claim of Spain to a six-mile limit of jurisdiction, that they had always claimed to exercise jurisdiction within four geographical miles from their coasts, and that this claim has not hitherto been contested by foreign governments, whilst it had even been distinctly recognized by the Russian Government in 1838."

I understand that a Swedish decree had been issued on 5th May, 1871, fixing a limit of six miles for customs and of four miles for fisheries in the Sound.

3. Discussion arose in 1911 respecting a Russian demand for an extension of the territorial limit in the Baltic and Gulf of Bothnia to a distance of twelve miles; and it appears from Sir Cecil Spring Rice's despatches No. 134, Commercial, of 22nd November, 1911, and No. 137, Commercial, of 2nd December, 1911, that Baron Ramel, with reference to the Swedish point of view at that time, stated that it was customary in declarations of neutrality "to declare the sea limit of Swedish waters to be a radius of four sea miles," but that the extent of Swedish waters was not defined in the regulations issued by the Swedish Government respecting neutrality and the admission of foreign warships. Sir Edward Grey instructed Sir C. Spring Rice on 1st December, 1911 (No. 45 Commercial), to take an opportunity of pointing out to Baron Ramel, in conversation, that His Majesty's Government have never recognized the claim of the Norwegian Government to extend their fishery limit from three to four miles.

4. In connexion with the drafting of a Swedish declaration of neutrality, Sir Cecil Spring Rice, in his despatch No. 167, Confidential, of 11th December, 1912, referred to the limit claimed for Swedish territorial waters as three miles. As it had hitherto been understood by the Foreign Office that Sweden claimed a four-mile belt as territorial, enquiry was made as to the grounds on which this statement was based; but Lord Kilmarnock was unable, without raising the question officially, to obtain precise information.

5. Some months after the outbreak of the War, the Swedish Minister in London called attention to the Swedish claim (d'après une tradition déjà ancienne) that the limit of Swedish territorial waters was four nautical miles. His communication contained a memorandum thus worded:

"La limite des eaux territoriales indiquée dans la note du Ministre de Suède en date d'aujourd'hui a été maintenue par la Suède depuis longtemps et se retrouve ainsi dans des Ordonnances Royales récentes. Par suite d'une note-circulaire britannique du 28 septembre, 1874, concernant la question des eaux territoriales, le Gouvernement Royal a déjà rappelé ce fait à la Grande Bretagne et à d'autres puissances de l'Europe."

After the Admiralty had been consulted, Count Wrangel was informed

"that, while not admitting the claim that Swedish territorial waters extend beyond 3 miles, His Majesty's Government are prepared, as an act of courtesy towards the Swedish Government, to instruct His Majesty's ships to respect the proposed four-mile limit provided that they learn that other belligerent Powers are adopting the same attitude."

It is, however, important to remember in this connexion that in the case of the Swedish ship "Ellida," captured by the Germans in October, 1914, in which the Swedes pleaded that, as the vessel was captured between three and four miles from Swedish territory, it was in Swedish territorial waters, the President of the German Court took the opportunity of stating, although the decision of the Court was not affected by the question of the territorial limit, that the only rule binding on the Court in this connexion was that laid down in the German Prize Law, which fixed the limit at three sea miles.

6. A Swedish decree of 29th November, 1915, prohibited the navigation of Swedish waters by foreign submarines within three nautical miles (5,556 metres) from land. This decree seems to be practically identical in terms with a Swedish decree of 19th July, 1916.

7. In the Swedish decree of 23rd May, 1919, concerning air traffic, it was provided that subject to certain exceptions in regard to waters in the Sound the term "Swedish territory" should be understood to include Swedish coastal waters within four nautical miles of the land or rock farthest from the Swedish coast which is not perpetually washed over by the sea. On instructions from His Majesty's Government, Mr. Barclay therefore informed the Swedish Government in a note dated 29th December, 1919, that His Majesty's Government felt obliged to put on formal record once more their view that the limits of territorial waters do not extend beyond a distance of three miles from low water mark.

8. A Swedish decree dated 26th July, 1920, which replaced the decree of 23rd May, 1919, also contains a claim to four miles. On that occasion also Mr. Barclay pointed out to the Swedish Government, in his note of 24th November, 1920, that the views of His Majesty's Government expressed in the note of 29th December, 1919, remained unchanged.

9. In Mr. Ramsay's despatch No. 436 of 5th October, 1922, he reported that with reference to announcements in the Press to the effect that the Swedish customs frontier extended to four miles from the coast he had reminded the Secretary-General of the Ministry for Foreign Affairs that His Majesty's Government had decided views as to the extent of territorial jurisdiction at sea, which had repeatedly been communicated to the Swedish Government, and that their refusal to admit jurisdiction beyond three nautical miles from the coast was by no means confined to the late War. He added that he trusted that the Swedish customs would confine their action to Scandinavian shipping, as the first application of their rule to a British vessel would raise the whole question of the limits of territorial jurisdiction at sea, which was one on which His Majesty's Government were not prepared to compromise, and that nothing but trouble would therefore result from such interference with a British ship outside the three-mile limit. Mr. Ramsay's language was approved in Lord Curzon's despatch to Sir C. Barclay, No. 292 of 19th December, 1922. I would refer in this connexion also to the despatch to Sir C. Barclay, No. 293, Confidential, of 19th December, 1922.

10. Since that date this subject has been considered by the Imperial Conference, 1923, a copy of whose resolution was transmitted to His Majesty's Legation at Stockholm in Lord Curzon's circular despatch of 27th November, 1923.

11. Paragraph 1 of the Swedish Customs Statute of 1st July, 1904, of which a translation was enclosed in your despatch of the 27th August last, described Swedish territorial waters as extending "up to one geographical mile (four minutes or 7,420 metres) from the coast or outermost outlying islets and rocks not perpetually washed by the sea"; and the Swedish decree of 21st August, 1924, appears to adapt their claim to territorial waters to that extent to the special circumstances which exist in the area where the waters of Sweden and Norway meet.

12. According to the information obtained by your Legation from the Swedish Hydrographic Office, the Swedish official definitions of the geographical mile and the nautical mile are as follows:—

"1 geographical mile = 1/15 degree of latitude.

"1 nautical mile = 1,852 metres.

"(= 1/60 degree of latitude = 1/4 geographical mile)."

In any further discussions with Sweden relating to territorial waters and kindred subjects it will therefore be necessary to bear in mind that the Swedish "geographical mile" is equivalent to the "sjömil," or sea-mile of four nautical miles ("kvartmils") used as a measure of distance when Sweden was united with Norway, and to the old expressions "Spanish league" and "German league," and is equal to four ordinary geographical miles, using the term in its generally accepted sense of the length of one minute of latitude, or roughly two thousand yards. Even on this basis the definition of a "geographical mile" given in the Swedish Customs Act as equivalent to four minutes of latitude or seven thousand four hundred and twenty metres is misleading, since the length in metres of a minute of latitude varies for different latitudes.

13. Both the Swedish claim to a four-mile belt of territorial waters and the claim to measure the territorial limit from any rock not perpetually washed over by the sea are opposed to the principles embodied in the conclusions of the recent Imperial Conference. His Majesty's Government consider that three miles measured from low water mark constitute the proper limits of territorial waters; and they can therefore only recognize the Swedish decree of 21st August, 1924, in so far as it does not infringe the rights of His Majesty's Government in international law.

14. I shall be glad if you will address a note to the Swedish Minister for Foreign Affairs to this effect, referring to the previous communications which have been made to the Swedish Government on the question of the principle of the three-mile limit.

STOCKHOLM.

Extract from Sir A. Grant-Duff's despatch No. 120 of 31st March, 1925.

SIR,

I HAVE the honour to transmit copy of a Note which I handed personally to the Swedish Minister for Foreign Affairs, and in which I pointed out, with reference to Article 9 of the draft Convention for the prevention of smuggling of alcoholic liquors, that His Majesty's Government can only recognize the validity of such an extension of the regulations as is proposed in so far as these do not infringe the rights of His Majesty's Government in international law.

Monsieur Osten Undén observed that the twelve-mile zone mentioned in the Convention would only apply to the States which were parties to that instrument.

The draft Convention is contained in a Royal Message to the Riksdag recommending the approval of the same, and of a Bill, by which vessels suspected of smuggling may be detained within a zone of twelve nautical miles from the coast or from the outermost skerries.

The Acting Minister of Finance in his statement at the Cabinet Council on the proposed legislation, said that the law would only apply to vessels belonging to States which had ratified the Convention, and that it could only be made applicable to foreign vessels, i.e., vessels belonging to non-signatory Powers, by a Royal Ordinance. The Bill accordingly contains a clause that its provisions shall "not apply to vessels of a foreign nationality unless the King shall order that the Law shall be applicable to the vessels of the nationality in question."

Sir Arthur Grant Duff to Monsieur Osten Undén.

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

ACCORDING to an official Notice which was published in the Press of this Capital in February last, the Royal Swedish Government have decided to approve on behalf of Sweden the draft Convention for the suppression of the smuggling of alcoholic liquors, but with the proviso that ratification is subject to the approval of the Riksdag; and, further, that the Royal Swedish Government has decided to submit to the Law Council a draft law to extend the scope of the regulations respecting the importation of spirits, &c., so as to make these, in certain circumstances, applicable outside the limit of territorial waters within an area of twelve nautical miles from the Swedish coast.

I acquainted my Government with the intention of the Royal Swedish Government to lay a Bill before the Riksdag making the regulations respecting the importation of alcoholic liquors applicable outside the generally accepted limits of the territorial waters, and I have now the honour, in accordance with instructions which I have received from His Majesty's Principal Secretary for Foreign Affairs to remind your Excellency that His Majesty's Government can only recognize the validity of such extension of the regulations as is proposed in so far as these do not infringe the rights of His Majesty's Government in international law.

Si un navire soupçonné de se livrer à la contrebande est rencontré dans la zone élargie nommée ci-dessus et qu'il s'échappe hors de cette zone, les autorités du pays dont relève cette zone pourront le poursuivre aussi au delà de cette zone dans la mer ouverte et user envers lui des mêmes droits que s'il avait été saisi à l'intérieur de la zone.

SIR,

Stockholm, 28th August, 1925.

ON receipt of your despatch No. 14 of 13th January,‡ regarding the extent of Swedish Territorial waters in the area adjoining the sea frontier between Norway and Sweden, I duly addressed a note, of which I had the honour to transmit a copy in my despatch No. 32 of 26th January, reminding the Swedish Government of the views of His Majesty's Government on this subject and informing them that His Majesty's Government could only recognize the Swedish decree of 21st August, 1924, in so far as it does not infringe the rights of His Majesty's Government in international law.

2. The Swedish Government have now replied in a note, of which I have the honour to transmit a copy herewith, stating that they are unable to share the views of His Majesty's Government as regards the extent of Swedish territorial jurisdiction at sea, and that they see no reason to alter the opinion frequently expressed by them that each State should put into practice within its own waters the rights due to it from internal legislation or long usage.

3. The Swedish note also refers to the note which I addressed to the Swedish Government of 23rd March last, of which I had the honour to enclose a copy in my despatch No. 120 of 31st March,§ in which I pointed out that His Majesty's Government could only recognize the validity of any extension of regulations regarding smuggling in so far as they did not infringe the rights of His Majesty's Government in international law.

4. The note points out that, as observed by Monsieur Undén when I handed him my note, and as reported in my despatch No. 120, the legislation in question, namely the rights of search up to a twelve-mile limit, is only applicable to vessels belonging

MONSIEUR LE MINISTRE,

Stockholm, le 18 août, 1925.

PAR une lettre, en date du 26 janvier dernier, se référant à l'ordonnance Royale du 24 août, 1924, concernant l'extension des eaux territoriales suédoises à la frontière maritime entre la Suède et la Norvège, vous avez bien voulu m'informer que "His Majesty's Government consider that three miles measured from low water mark constitute the proper limit of territorial waters, and they can only recognize the Decree of the Royal Swedish Government referred to at the beginning of this note in so far as it does not infringe the rights of His Majesty's Government in international law."

De plus vous avez exposé, par votre office du 23 mars dernier, certaines considérations du Gouvernement de S.M. Britannique au sujet du projet de convention entre la Suède et certains autres pays concernant la repression de la contrebande des boissons alcooliques.

Me référant à la première de vos deux lettres précitées, j'ai l'honneur de porter à votre connaissance que le Gouvernement du Roi, en ce qui concerne le territoire de la Suède, ne se voit pas à même de partager l'opinion de celui de S.M. Britannique selon laquelle trois mille marins seraient la limite des eaux territoriales. En effet, au su de mon Gouvernement, aucun nouveau fait n'est survenu qui serait de nature à modifier la manière de voir adoptée par lui et exprimée à maintes reprises, entre autres dans la note adressée par le Ministre des Affaires Etrangères au Ministre de S.M. Britannique, sous la date du 11 novembre, 1874, à savoir que l'extension des eaux territoriales n'a pas encore été l'objet d'un arrangement de nature internationale. Dans l'attente d'un tel arrangement il appartient, selon l'avis du Gouvernement du Roi, à chaque Etat de faire valoir dans ce domaine les droits qui peuvent être revendiqués en vertu de sa législation interne ou d'un usage séculaire. Je n'ai pas besoin d'ajouter que le Gouvernement suédois qui de tout temps a tenu à se conformer scrupuleusement aux règles du droit international, n'a aucunement l'intention d'empiéter de quelle manière que ce soit, sur les droits du Gouvernement de S.M. Britannique.

En ce qui concerne, d'autre part, votre lettre du 23 mars dernier, je me permets d'appeler votre bienveillante attention sur le fait que l'extension de l'application des dispositions de la loi sur le trafic illicite des boissons alcooliques, etc., est basée sur des concessions réciproques accordées par les Etats signataires de la Convention d'Helsingfors. Ainsi qu'il ressort du protocole sur le nouveau projet de loi (page 7) l'extension dont il s'agit ne saurait être appliquée qu'à ceux des navires étrangers qui appartiennent à des ressortissants des Etats ayant ratifié la Convention.

Veuillez agréer, &c.,

Pour le Ministre,

RODHE.

Enclosure 2 in No. 774.

(Confidential.)

(No. 32.)

Sir A. Grant Duff to Mr. Austen Chamberlain.

(Received, Foreign Office, 4th February.)

His Majesty's Minister at Stockholm presents his compliments to the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and has the honour to transmit herewith a copy of a note to the Swedish Minister for Foreign Affairs, dated the 26th January, regarding the extent of territorial waters.

Stockholm, 26th January, 1925.

Sir A. Grant Duff to Professor Esten Undén.

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

Stockholm, 26th January, 1925.

On the 21st August last the Royal Swedish Government issued a decree (No. 397) in which it was laid down that "the provisions of paragraph 1, clause 2, of the Customs Statute of the 1st July, 1904, regarding the extent of Swedish territorial waters, shall, in respect of the area adjoining the frontier between Sweden and Norway, be interpreted to mean that Swedish territorial waters . . . shall be deemed to extend to one geographical mile from the coast or the outermost outlying waters and rocks which are not washed by the sea."

In this connexion I have the honour to remind your Excellency that, with reference to a decree issued by the Royal Swedish Government on the 23rd May, 1919, respecting air traffic, in which it was laid down that Swedish territory included Swedish coastal waters within four nautical miles from land, His Majesty's Minister, pursuant to instructions received from His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, informed the Royal Swedish Government on the 29th December, 1919, that His Majesty's Government felt obliged to put on formal record their view that the limits of territorial waters do not extend beyond a distance of three nautical miles from low water mark.

On the 16th July, 1920, the Royal Swedish Government issued a further decree, which replaced that of the 23rd May, 1919, in which it was again laid down that the term "Swedish territory" should be understood for the purposes of the decree to include Swedish coastal waters within four nautical miles from the land or rock furthest from the Swedish coast which is not perpetually washed by the sea. His Majesty's Minister once more drew the attention of the Royal Swedish Government to his note of the 29th December, 1919, and pointed out, by direction of His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, that the views of His Majesty's Government, as expressed therein, remained unchanged, namely, that the limits of territorial waters do not extend beyond a distance of three nautical miles from the low-water mark.

In 1922 the Svenska Dagblad declared that, although during the war Great Britain had refused to recognize any other than the three-mile limit of the coastal waters, there was not the slightest doubt that the four-mile limit applied to the territorial waters of Sweden. His Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires called the attention of the Secretary-General of the Royal Swedish Ministry for Foreign Affairs to the above statement, and reminded him that His Majesty's Government had decided views as to the extent of territorial jurisdiction at sea, which had been repeatedly communicated to the Royal Swedish Government, and that their refusal to admit jurisdiction beyond three nautical miles from the coast was by no means confined to the late war. Mr. Ramsay added that he trusted that the Swedish Customs Authorities would confine their action to Scandinavian shipping, as the first application of their rule to a British vessel would raise the whole question of the limits of territorial jurisdiction at sea, which was one on which His Majesty's Government were not prepared to compromise, and that nothing but trouble would result from such interference with a British ship outside the three-mile limit. The language held by His Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires on this occasion subsequently received the approval of His Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs.

In view of the above, I have the honour to inform your Excellency that His Majesty's Government consider that three miles measured from low-water mark constitute the proper limits of territorial waters, and that they can only recognize the decree of the Royal Swedish Government referred to at the beginning of this note in so far as it does not infringe the rights of His Majesty's Government in international law.

I avail, &c.,

considered the question of extension of Convention to Australia and is of the opinion that forms of intercourse between this country and Turkey which proposed Convention is intended to regulate are not at present of sufficient importance to be put on a treaty basis. Further, Turkish Asiatic subjects are in principle excluded from Commonwealth, and individual exemption would require to be granted to any Turkish merchant desiring to enter and set up business in Australia. Commonwealth Government, therefore, whilst having no objection to provision being made in Convention for future accession by Dominions, are not desirous at present of becoming parties to Convention. * No. 762 in Dominions No. 93.

state that I have for some time past been debating whether in spite of the stipulations of the Treaty of Lausanne it would be advisable for His Majesty's Government to open negotiations with the Turkish Government for any such convention regarding the reciprocal admission of Turkish and British nationals to various professions, industries, etc., as is provided for in Article 4 of the Establishment Convention. For there are, I think, certain considerations which should be carefully weighed before it is definitely decided to commence negotiations to this end.

2. At present the anti-foreign feeling in Turkey and the desire to keep certain professions so far as possible for Turkish nationals alone shows little sign of abatement. Even, therefore, if the anti-ex-enemy legislation in England regarding such subjects as banks, shipping and the non-ferrous metals industry is repealed—I am not quite clear what likelihood there is of this being done in the immediate future—it is probable that the Turks will not prove willing to grant to British nationals in Turkey as wide opportunities to engage in professions and industries as His Majesty's Government is prepared to give to Turkish nationals in the British Empire. In point of fact, they will want very little from us and we a good deal from them. The negotiations will probably cause a good deal of friction and the results are likely to be meagre. Rights acquired before the 1st January, 1923, are already safeguarded, so far as this can be done on paper, under Article 4 of the Establishment Convention and the most we could expect to secure at present would be a paper guarantee that the list of callings at present reserved to Turkish nationals will not be extended. It is unlikely that we should achieve so much. On the other hand in a few years' time the present Turkish ultra-nationalism may diminish and the policy of reserving certain professions will quite possibly be tacitly dropped. In that case, if no convention were negotiated British subjects might be able quietly to take up professions again from which they would run more risk of being excluded if an agreement on this subject were negotiated now, defining rigidly the professions, etc., open to them.

3. It is true that a convention would provide a definite legal sanction for the practice by British subjects of such callings as were not reserved to Turkish nationals. But I am doubtful whether this advantage would be sufficient to outweigh the disadvantage of seeing British subjects definitely excluded from the "reserved" professions, unless the British negotiators were able to secure that the convention should be concluded for a very short period and was subject to frequent reviews. I do not in any case anticipate that, while the present uncertain political and economic situation lasts, a large number of new British subjects will wish to commence work in Turkey.

4. The possibility is not to be excluded that, as in the negotiations with the shipping companies regarding cabotage, the Turkish Government would propose impossible terms and thus cause a breakdown of the negotiations. In this case, British subjects would be no worse off had no attempt been made to conclude a convention and the net result would be a certain amount of friction between the Governments.

5. Against these arguments must, of course, be set the risk that, should His Majesty's Government decide not to avail themselves of the right under 4 to open negotiations before 6th August, 1925, their abstinence may later be seized upon by the Turks as a cogent argument for supporting a prolongation of restrictions against British subjects, when any such come forward to enter a profession in Turkey. On the other hand if Turkish policy had really changed on the principle of the "protection" of professions, etc., I doubt whether they would think it worth while to use this lever against us. The risk is, however, a real one.

6. My Allied colleagues have not yet finally decided their policy in this matter, although Signor Montagna mentioned it verbally to the Turkish Minister for Foreign Affairs at Angora, and was informed, I understand, that the Turkish Government were ready for negotiations under Article 4. They are, in any case, anxious, as far as is practicable, for a common front in any negotiation that may eventually be opened. On the whole they are both probably in favour of negotiating.

7. The question may be put thus:—Is it wiser to forgo the chance of the immediate acquisition of a paper guarantee that British newcomers will be allowed to follow certain professions, in the hope that, when Turkey becomes more normal and therefore a better field for foreigners, she will tacitly allow them to practice all professions, if there are no restrictions laid down in a written convention, or if friction has not been engendered, and much importance drawn to the matter by fruitless negotiations?

8. I shall be glad to receive your final instructions on this subject. As time is comparatively short, you may think it well to telegraph them.

9. I would add that this convention will comprise such different complex issues of a local and technical nature that I am very doubtful if the Assistant Legal Adviser to the Foreign Office would wish to negotiate it with Munir Bey at Berne, even with the assistance of one local expert from Constantinople. If it be decided to open negotiations, could not Mr. Malkin come out to Constantinople, where the necessary technical experience and advice, not necessarily forthcoming from one "expert" alone, could be more easily drawn upon as required? Even if Munir Bey had returned to Berne, before we were ready to open negotiations, the Turks could probably find a negotiator here for their purpose, such as Nusret Bey.

Enclosure 2 in No. 779.

(No. 549.)

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 6th June, 1925.

WITH reference to my telegram No. 70 of 24th April, relative to the proposed convention for the reciprocal admission of Turkish and British nationals to various professions, industries, &c., I have to inform Your Excellency that the questions raised in your despatch No. 284 of 6th April, as to the general desirability or otherwise of postponing the negotiation of the proposed convention, have now been considered by the interested departments of His Majesty's Government.

2. Apart from the difficulties indicated in your despatch, there are various other factors which would be likely to render difficult, in present circumstances, the negotiation of a satisfactory convention. In the first place, it seems clear that the Turks would insist on any convention which might be negotiated being based on the principle of strict reciprocity. In principle there can be no objection to this, but in practice considerable difficulties would present themselves. It had for instance been hoped to pass the necessary legislation to remove the disabilities from ex-enemy aliens in this country as regards banking, non-ferrous metals industries, employment on ships, &c., at an early date. An unexpected difficulty has, however, now arisen over this and no guarantee can be given that these disabilities will be removed in the immediate future. While they are not primarily aimed at Turkish nationals, it would be impossible for practical reasons to exempt Turkish nationals from them unless and until all other ex-enemy aliens are similarly treated. It would thus be impossible for the present to enter into any arrangement with the Turks on most-favoured-nation lines.

3. Apart from this, the number of professions, &c., from which Turkish nationals are excluded in this country is small, but there are some, and they do not necessarily correspond with the professions from which foreigners are or may be excluded in Turkey. It would therefore be necessary to balance the admission of Turkish nationals to various forms of activity in this country against the admission of British subjects to other forms in Turkey, and the only method would be to draw up lists on each side, either of professions to which nationals of the other contracting party would be admitted or from which they would be excluded. This course would present considerable difficulties, more especially as it is not only the position in Great Britain which may have to be considered.

4. At the same time it is possible that some foreign government might acquire by negotiation something more than it is entitled to under Article 4 of the Establishment Convention, and in this case His Majesty's Government might be exposed to criticism if they failed to obtain similar treatment for British subjects. It would be convenient, therefore, to learn as soon as possible, the action of the French and Italian Governments in this matter, and you should endeavour to ascertain the position from your French and Italian colleagues, and inform me in due course.

5. A possible solution of the difficulty would have been to negotiate at Constantinople a short convention providing for most-favoured-nation treatment in these matters coupled with the preservation of acquired rights, at least to the extent to which they are protected under Article 4 of the Establishment Convention. This course is, however, unfortunately impossible in view of the difficulty which has arisen regarding the removal of restrictions on ex-enemy aliens in this country.

6. I shall be glad to receive your observations on the whole question in order that the subject may receive further consideration when a suitable opportunity arises.

I have, &c.,

3RD FEBRUARY. My despatch of 31st January, No. 44.† In view of negotiation of a treaty supplementary to the Boundary Demarcation Treaty with the United States signed at Washington, 4th June, 1908, for further regulation of International boundary between Canada and the United States, Order in Council has been passed to-day recommending the issue of Full Powers, Honourable Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior, naming and appointing him as Commissioner and Plenipotentiary in respect of the Dominion of Canada, with full power and authority to conclude treaty with such plenipotentiary or plenipotentiaries as may be vested with similar powers and authority on the part of the United States of America, and to sign for and in the name of His Majesty the King in respect of the Dominion of Canada everything so agreed upon and concluded, and to transact all such other matters as may appertain thereto.

* No. 788. † 6635/25: not printed; it enclosed a copy of the draft Treaty (the text of which, as signed, is printed in Treaty Series 1925, No. 37).

Treaty, copy of which was forwarded to you by mail on 31st January,* is of technical character providing in its first Article conventional lines in Lake of the Woods, in lieu of that defined in previous treaties location of which has been found impracticable. The second Article provides for substitution of straight line between adjacent monuments as now established or re-established 49th parallel where it forms the boundary instead of line having curvature of parallel. Article three recites that terminus in Passamaquoddy Bay as defined in the Treaty of 21st of May, 1910, at the middle of Grand Manan Channel has been found by survey to be less than three nautical miles distant both from the shore of Grand Manan Island in Canada and from the shore line of Maine in the United States, while there is small zone of water of controvertible jurisdiction in Grand Manan Channel between the terminus of the boundary and the high seas, provides for additional course to be extended from such terminus south 34 degrees 42 feet west for a distance of 2,383 metres through the middle of the Grand Manan Channel to the high seas. Article four empowers the Commissioners appointed under the Treaty of 1908 to inspect various sections of the boundary line, to repair damaged monuments and buoys, replace those destroyed and generally to maintain effective boundary line. As it is urgently desired to have the Treaty signed and approved by the United States Senate before adjournment of Congress on the 3rd March, my Ministers would be very grateful if full powers could be prepared and forwarded so as to permit of signature of the Treaty middle of February. Despatch† follows by mail.—BYNG.

20TH FEBRUARY. Your telegram 16th February.* My Ministers appreciate promptness of response to request for Full Power for Stewart for signature of Boundary Marking Convention. Another Convention now unexpectedly ready for signature dealing with Lake of the Woods power development. This question under investigation and discussion by International Joint Commission from 1912 to 1919. Canadian Government notified its approval April, 1923, of Convention negotiated in that year, but the United States took no action because of local Minnesota opposition. Opposition now removed, and telegram received 19th February from the British Ambassador that the Secretary of State is anxious for signature not later than next Monday night or Tuesday morning, 24th February, to ensure presenting to Senate Tuesday noon and securing ratification before 4th March. Ambassador states that no difficulty in arranging signature even if Full Powers not received provided he can assure Secretary they are on the way. My Ministers have this day passed Order in Council requesting that His Majesty the King be humbly moved to issue Letters Patent to the Honourable Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, naming and appointing him Commissioner and Plenipotentiary in respect of the Dominion of Canada for the purpose of signing Lake of the Woods Convention and the accompanying Protocol. Further, since Stewart unexpectedly detained in Alberta and could not possibly reach Washington before Thursday, Second Order in Council has been passed to-day requesting issue of Full Powers to Lapointe for signing Boundary-Marking Convention also. My Ministers greatly obliged if British Ambassador can be informed by cable by Monday, 23rd February, that Full Powers for signature of both Lake of the Woods and Boundary Conventions by Lapointe are on the way.

Summary of Convention: After the usual Preamble provides for establishment of Control Board Engineer with appeal to International Joint Commission for purpose of raising and regulating level of Lake of the Woods between specified limits. For enlargement of outlet by Dominion. For assumption by the United States of liabilities for the flooding of land on its shores and certain protective works. For payment Canada on this ground of dollars 275,000. No diversion of water to other watersheds. Accompanying Protocol provides for supervision by the Control Board of outlet work and protective works, also representation of

With further reference to my despatch No. 44 of the 31st January† with regard to the Boundary Demarcation Treaty with the United States, I have the honour to enclose copies of the approved Minute of the Privy Council for Canada upon which my telegram of the 3rd instant‡ was based.

Enclosure in No. 794.

(P.C. 178.)

CERTIFIED COPY OF A MINUTE OF A MEETING OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL, APPROVED BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL ON THE 3RD FEBRUARY, 1925.

THE Committee of the Privy Council have had before them a report, dated 30th January, 1925, from the Acting Secretary of State for External Affairs, submitting that he has had under consideration a despatch from His Majesty's Ambassador at Washington, dated 18th November, 1924 (No. 425), intimating that as the Canadian and United States Governments are in accord with regard to the terms of the proposed new treaty for the further regulation of the international boundary between the United States and Canada, the United States Government is prepared to direct the preparation of the treaty for signature, and asking to be advised of the name and designation of the plenipotentiary who will be authorized to sign the treaty in behalf of Canada.

The Minister represents that it is therefore expedient to invest fit person with full power to treat on the part of His Majesty the King in respect of the Dominion of Canada with a person or persons similarly empowered on the part of the United States of America in regard to this treaty.

* No. 792. † 6655/25: not printed; it enclosed a copy of the draft Treaty (the text of which, as signed, is printed in Treaty Series 1925, No. 37). ‡ No. 790.

The Minister therefore recommends that His Majesty the King be humbly moved to issue letters patent to the Honourable Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior, naming and appointing him as Commissioner and Plenipotentiary in respect of the Dominion of Canada with full power and authority to conclude the treaty with such plenipotentiary or plenipotentiaries as may be vested with similar power and authority on the part of the United States of America, and to sign for and in the name of His Majesty the King in respect of the Dominion of Canada everything so agreed upon and concluded and to transact all such other matters as may appertain thereto.

The Minister further represents that a suggestion having been made to the United States Government that the draft as settled should be amended by the insertion in the preamble after the word "India" in His Majesty's title of the words "in respect of the Dominion of Canada," by the insertion of the same words after "His Britannic Majesty" in the clause naming the Canadian Plenipotentiary, and by making provision in Article 5 for the exchange of ratifications of the treaty in the alternative at Ottawa by inserting after "Washington" in the first sentence of that Article the words "or Ottawa," an intimation has now been received from the United States Government concurring in these proposed amendments.

The Committee concur in the foregoing, and, on the recommendation of the Acting Secretary of State for External Affairs, advise that Your Excellency may be pleased to forward a copy of the draft treaty as now agreed upon, which is submitted herewith, to the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies with the request, as above set forth, that His Majesty the King be humbly moved to issue to the said the Honourable Charles Stewart the necessary Full Powers authorizing him to conclude and sign such treaty in respect of Canada.

All of which is respectfully submitted for Your Excellency's approval.

(P.C. 288.)

CERTIFIED COPY OF A MINUTE OF A MEETING OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL, APPROVED BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL ON THE 20TH FEBRUARY, 1925.

THE Committee of the Privy Council have had before them a Report, dated 20th February, 1925, from the Secretary of State for External Affairs, with reference to a telegram from His Majesty's Ambassador at Washington, dated 19th February, 1925, stating that the United States Government has agreed to the draft convention to regulate the levels of the Lake of the Woods as well as to the proposed protocol to accompany the convention and the terms of the identical letters of reference to be addressed to the International Joint Commission which were submitted with the Minute of Council approved by Your Excellency on the 13th April, 1923 (P.C. 648.)

The Minister represents that it is expedient to invest a fit person with Full Power to treat on the part of His Majesty the King in respect of the Dominion of Canada with a person or persons similarly empowered on the part of the United States of America in regard to this Treaty and Protocol.

The Minister, therefore, recommends that His Majesty the King be humbly moved to issue Letters Patent to The Honourable Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice, naming and appointing him as Commissioner and Plenipotentiary in respect of the Dominion of Canada with Full Power and authority to conclude the Treaty with such Plenipotentiary or Plenipotentiaries as may be vested with similar power and authority on the part of the United States of America, and to sign for and in the name of His Majesty the King in respect of the Dominion of Canada everything so agreed upon and concluded and to transact all such other matters as may appertain thereto.

The Minister further recommends that the text of the draft as heretofore approved be amended by the insertion in the preamble after the word "India" in His Majesty's title of the words "in respect of the Dominion of Canada," by the insertion of the same words after "His Britannic Majesty" in the clause naming the Canadian Plenipotentiary, and by the addition of the words "or Ottawa" after the word "at Washington" in Article 12.

The Committee concur in the foregoing, and on the recommendation of the Secretary of State for External Affairs, advise that Your Excellency may be pleased to forward a copy of the draft* of the Treaty with the suggested amendments, as herewith submitted, to the Secretary of State for the Colonies with the request, as above set forth, that His Majesty the King be humbly moved to issue to the said The Honourable Ernest Lapointe the necessary full powers authorizing him to conclude and sign such Treaty in respect of Canada.

[My LORD,] [SIR,]

Downing Street, 11th September, 1925.

WITH reference to my Secret despatch Dominions No. 160 of the 18th of April,* [To Canada only: and to my despatch No. 340 of the 7th of August,†] I have the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [you,] for the information of your Ministers, the accompanying copy of a despatch to His Majesty's Chargé d'Affaires at Washington which deals with the general question of the attitude to be adopted by His Majesty's Government in regard to the trial in the United States of America of British members of crews of ships seized by the United States authorities in accordance with the Liquor Treaty.

L. S. AMERY.

Enclosure in No. 806.

(No. 1366.)

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 22nd August, 1925.

WITH reference to your despatch No. 1215 of 16th July, and previous correspondence regarding the seizure of the steamships "Quadra" and "Coalharbour" and the arrest and trial of their crews, I transmit to you herewith copy of correspondence which has passed on the subject between this Department and Mr. E. G. Scott, who is representing the interests of the members of the crews.

2. You will observe that Mr. Scott has been informed that His Majesty's Government consider that any intervention in these cases so long as they are before the United States Courts would be contrary to the usual practice, and, further, would be undesirable as likely to elicit the reply that the matter is sub judice.

3. You will observe further that I am advised that it is possible to take in the United States Courts the point that there is no jurisdiction in those Courts to try the members of the crews of these vessels because they did not enter United States territory voluntarily, but were only brought in because they were on a vessel arrested under the Liquor Treaty.

4. I consider that this point is an extremely important one, especially as it affects many other persons besides members of the crews of the "Quadra" and "Coalharbour." In this connexion I enclose herein copy of a minute by one of the legal advisers to this Department. I am of opinion that sooner or later His Majesty's Government will be compelled to bring to the notice of the United States Government the view that the latter are not entitled to try British subjects arrested outside the three-mile limit and brought in under the Liquor Treaty or under the United States Statutes by which the United States Government claim for customs purposes jurisdiction up to twelve miles from the shore. The reasons which His Majesty's Government put forward as the basis for their view would be those set out in the first ground discussed by Mr. Beckett, though the argument that support for this ground might possibly be found by analogy in prize law would of course not be used against the United States Government.

* 14187/25: not printed; it enclosed copies of Foreign Office prints A.454/31/45 (26th January, 1925) Section 4, and A.1285/31/45 (13th March, 1925) Section 1. † 33139/25: not printed; it enclosed correspondence dealing with the seizure of a particular vessel.

5. It remains to be decided what would be the opportune moment for bringing His Majesty's Government's view to the notice of the State Department. On consideration I am disposed to think that it might be more difficult to put this view forward in a protest relating to some individual case, if His Majesty's Government by their action in apparently assenting to arrests being made in large numbers of other cases had given the impression that they consider these arrests justified. I am of opinion, therefore, that, subject to any views which you may express, His Majesty's Government should, in a general way and without reference to any particular case, make known their views to the United States Government without further delay.

6. In the meantime I shall be glad if you will furnish me with a report as to the exact present status of all cases in which British crews seized outside the three-mile limit, whether under the Treaty or under the United States Tariff Act, have been or are being tried for offences against United States law.

SIR,

YOUR reference A 3880/31/45.

8th August, 1925.

Re s.s. "Quadra" and re s.s. "Coalharbour."

Referring to my conversation yesterday with Mr. Beckett of the Legal Advisers' Department, I confirm that, whereas in my previous correspondence I have been representing the owners of these two ships and their cargoes, I am now concerned also on behalf of the Masters and Crews of the two vessels, who have been arrested by the American Authorities and charged with offences in alleged violation of the American Prohibition Laws.

In the case of the "Quadra," the arrested parties have been tried before the Court of First Instance, and the Masters and Officers of the vessel have been convicted of violation or conspiracy to violate the Prohibition Laws and sentenced to various terms of imprisonment and/or fines. The decision of the Court is, I believe, the subject of an appeal to a higher Tribunal, and I assume that in the meantime the convicted parties are on bail. The proceedings referred to were concluded in the early part of April of this year.

In the case of s.s. "Coalharbour," the Master and all the members of the crew have been arrested and an indictment has been laid against them alleging similar violation or conspiracy to violate the American Laws, but the trial has not yet taken place.

It is abundantly clear from the documents already before you in connexion with these two vessels that both the vessels were seized at a point far beyond the ordinary territorial limit and were forcibly taken into American waters by the American Authorities with the respective crews on board. The point which I made in my conversation with Mr. Beckett and which I desire to urge is that in both cases the masters and crews (all of whom are British subjects) have been seized by the American Authorities while on the High Seas and forcibly taken within the jurisdiction of the American Courts, and having been so forcibly taken within the jurisdiction, have then been arrested and/or charged in respect of acts which are alleged to be offences against the Laws of America.

Apparently the American Court will rightly act upon the view that the Court itself is not concerned as to the method whereby the parties charged came within its jurisdiction, the only concern of the Court on the question of jurisdiction being whether it has jurisdiction to try the particular charges.

On behalf of the masters and crews concerned, I therefore claim the protection of His Majesty's Government and submit that a case is made out for protest against the seizure of British Subjects on the High Seas and the forcible bringing of them into the jurisdiction of the American Courts for the purpose of charging them. As the parties themselves are not in a position themselves to raise these points as to assist them, I am further instructed to urge His Majesty's Government to request the release of these British subjects, who upon the facts of the two cases, have been wrongfully taken.

Upon consideration, it does not appear to me that the time for dealing with this point has any relation to the ultimate result of the proceedings taken against the parties charged, because (1) seeing that the parties are now within the jurisdiction of the American Courts, the point is not one which can be raised in the Courts, and (2) it appears to me that British subjects should not be put to the expense and risk of proceedings and a series of appeals on the merits of the case generally if, as is alleged in this case, the original seizure and arrest of them by the American Government was a violation of International rights.

If there are any other points upon which information is desired, I shall be pleased to deal with the same and I trust that His Majesty's Government will see fit forthwith to make representations to the American Authorities with a view to securing the release of the masters and crews concerned.

I am, &c.,
ERNEST G. SCOTT.

The Under Secretary of State,
Foreign Office, S.W. 1.

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W. 1, 24th August, 1925.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Chamberlain to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of 8th August, regarding the arrest and trial of the crews of the steamships "Quadra" and "Coalharbour."

2. In reply I am to state that the points raised in your letter have received very careful consideration, but that the conclusion has been reached that no useful purpose would be served by the intervention of His Majesty's Government in this matter, at all events so long as the case is before the United States Courts.

3. Mr. Chamberlain is advised that it is not correct to state that the point that there is no jurisdiction in United States Courts to try the members of the crews of these vessels cannot be taken on appeal to the Supreme Court. It would appear on the contrary that this point, namely, that these British subjects did not enter United States territory voluntarily but were only brought in because they were on board vessels arrested under the Liquor Treaty, can be taken before the Supreme Court and it is, in Mr. Chamberlain's opinion, desirable that it should be so taken. Though it may be the case that the point does not offer, under United States laws, many chances of success, the Courts are, under the Constitution of the United States, entitled to recognize and apply International law concurrently with Municipal law.

Seizure of the s.s. "Quadra."

1. Mr. Ernest Scott came to see me this morning and informed me that he was now instructed to represent the interests of the captain and other persons on board the "Quadra" who have been convicted by the United States Federal Court of offences against the prohibition laws of that country. Mr. Scott desires the diplomatic intervention of His Majesty's Government on behalf of these men, who, he tells me, are all British subjects, on the ground that their arrest and conviction is not justified by the rules of International law. Appeals have been entered from the conviction to the Supreme Court of the United States which have not yet been heard, and may not come on for hearing for a considerable time. The first point which Mr. Scott raised was whether (assuming that His Majesty's Government should see its way to interfere diplomatically at all) the protests should be made now or after the hearing of the appeal before the Supreme Court. Mr. Scott is going to write a short letter raising this point which I told him would be answered promptly. I also expressed my private opinion that His Majesty's Government would not take any action until after the decision of the United States Supreme Court. All the defendants are at present out on bail.

2. There are two possible grounds for arguing that the arrest and trial of these men were outside the jurisdiction of the United States by International law:—

(1) The men were in a ship thirteen miles from the American coast. The ship was seized and brought into an American harbour with the men on board. Assuming that the seizure of the ship was justified under the Liquor Treaty of 1924, the defendants did not enter the jurisdiction of the United States voluntarily. The Treaty, while giving the right to board, seize and adjudicate upon ships, says nothing whatever about persons on board them. It is at least a very open question whether the Treaty can be said to give the United States any jurisdiction over persons on board the ships seized and brought in under the Treaty which she did not possess without it. Assuming that the Treaty does not do so, is the United States entitled by International law to exercise jurisdiction founded on the presence of the defendants on United States soil when the defendants did not go there voluntarily but were only brought there under the terms of an International convention which does not, and was not intended to give the United States any jurisdiction over the persons?

I am not sure if this point was ever taken before Judge Partridge. It is not dealt with in his judgment on demurrer on the 5th January. If there is any sound basis for this point, it is clearly an important one. Some support for it might possibly be found by analogy in Prize Law, where it is recognized that, if a ship carrying mails is brought into a port involuntarily, the fact that the mails thus come within the jurisdiction in fact does not entitle the authorities to exercise their ordinary jurisdictional rights and to examine the mails.

(2) The men were charged with conspiracy to do various acts contrary to the prohibition law and other laws of the United States. I think it is the case, but I have not yet seen the indictment in the case of the "Quadra" defendants, that all the overt acts alleged in support of the indictment are alleged to have been committed at various places all outside the three-mile limit and outside United States jurisdiction. This raises the question whether the United States are entitled by International law to try British citizens for acts committed outside United States territory. The phrase "acts committed outside United States territory" is an ambiguous one, for an act may be said to be committed (a) at the place where the actor was at the time, and (b) at the place where effects produced by this action are felt. The stock instance of this ambiguity is the firing of a gun by "A" standing inside the Canadian border across the dividing line into the United States where "B" is hit and killed. The murder can be said to be committed both (a) in Canada and (b) in the United States. The same questions arise in cases of conspiracy where the plot is hatched (a) in Canada and carried out (b) by agents in the United States, the conspirators themselves remaining in Canada.

I think it is clear that American law considers acts coming under class (b), (i.e., where the effects are produced in the United States) as acts committed within their jurisdiction and justiciable by American Courts. (See Adams v. the People; Comstocks Reports (N.Y.) 173, 9; Comm. v. Macloon 101, Mass. 1869.)

English law seems, though rather less certainly, to take the same view. (See the Seven Bishops case, 12 State trials 331; R. v. Combs, 1 Leech cr. cases 432; R. v. Veltheim mentioned in Russell on Crimes, volume 1, page 55, 8th edition; R. v. Nillins 53, L.J.M.C. 157.) This principle has already been relied upon by the United States Courts in liquor cases (see page 10 of Judge Partridge's judgment on 5th January ref. Latham v. United States), and Judge Partridge refers both to American and English cases in support of the principle.

In my view we should be on very uncertain ground if we based any protest to the United States Government on a denial of this principle generally, for I think that the United States Government could show that it was justified by American law and that English law on this point was the same as American law. Nevertheless in this case no overt acts nor any results did (at any rate so far as the "Quadra's" cargo was concerned) take place in United States territory for everything was stopped before it got there. So it is not clear that the case comes within the principle at all. Possibly it would be argued that there was an attempt to produce results on United States territory, and that where there is jurisdiction over the completed act there must also be jurisdiction over the attempt. I do not feel that such an argument in reply is, strictly speaking, sound.

Nevertheless the second ground seems to me to be a rather hair-splitting one, and I should not have thought that it was worth taking up at all except possibly as a support to a case substantially based on the first ground.

3. It is worth while calling attention to the point that Judge Partridge in his judgment has also chosen to assent to and rely upon as an independent basis of his judgment on the old claim of the United States to arrest ships attempting to contravene any of their municipal laws, anywhere within four leagues of the United States coast, though he also finds as a fact that the "Quadra" was within one hour's voyage of the United States coast.

If the exercise of jurisdiction over the captain and crew cannot be justified under the Treaty, or their mere presence in United States territory. His Majesty's Government will certainly not assent to its being justified on this ground. If the objection, which I have described above as the first ground, is sound, it cannot be got over in this way.

Downing Street, 28th December, 1925.

[To Canada only: With reference to the despatch from His Majesty's Ambassador at Washington No. 553 of the 28th of October,* regarding the seizure of the "Hazel E. Herman,"]

I have the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [you,] for the information of your Ministers, the accompanying copy of a despatch from His Majesty's Ambassador at Washington forwarding a copy of a despatch which he has sent to certain of His Majesty's Consular Officers in the United States regarding co-operation with the local authorities in connexion with the Convention dealing with the illicit liquor traffic.

I have, &c.,
L. S. AMERY.

Enclosure in No. 807.

(No. 1666.)

SIR,

British Embassy, Washington, D.C., 6th November, 1925.

WITH reference to recent correspondence upon the participation of British ships in the illicit liquor trade and in particular to this Embassy's representations to the United States Government upon the seizure of the "Hazel E. Herman," I have the honour to transmit to you herewith copy of an identic despatch which I have addressed to His Majesty's Consular officers at Galveston, Boston, and Portland, Oregon, instructing them to explain the extent and scope of the Anglo-American Liquor Convention to the local authorities and to solicit the helpful co-operation of the latter in the avoidance of regrettable incidents.

2. Similar instructions have also been sent to the Acting British Consul-General at San Francisco and to the officers at ports in the Atlanta Consular district.

3. His Majesty's Consuls-General at New York and Philadelphia and His Majesty's Consuls at Baltimore and Los Angeles have also been informed. The three last-named ports, owing doubtless to their geographical positions, have never been greatly concerned with seizures of suspected British vessels, while the unsettled weather now prevalent in the North Atlantic, added to the special "offensive" of the local revenue forces, appears largely to have dispersed the smuggling fleet which for so long lay off the mouth of the Hudson and the coast of Long Island. Unless, therefore, the four Consular officers concerned express the opinion that it would be beneficial for them to approach the local authorities, I shall not instruct them to take any action.

* 52093/25: not printed; it dealt with the circumstances of the particular seizure.

4. With regard to New Orleans, the fact that Mr. Huckin has already been consulted upon the extent and scope of Liquor Treaty by the Federal District Prohibition Administrator and the officials (see Mr. Chilton's despatch No. 1493 of the 8th ultimo) would seem to render any steps on his part superfluous, and I have accordingly left it to his discretion whether he takes action or not.

I have, &c.,
ESMÉ HOWARD.

The Right Honourable
Austen Chamberlain, M.P.,
&c., &c., &c.

SIR, British Embassy, Washington, D.C., 5th November, 1925.
You will be aware that during the last four years cases have occurred from time to time in which British ships suspected of liquor smuggling have been seized by the United States Revenue Forces. You will further be aware that late in 1923 the United States Government, having found it impossible to take effective action against liquor smuggling vessels as long as these enjoyed immunity from search or arrest outside the recognized limit of territorial waters, namely three miles from the shore, suggested to His Majesty's Government that a treaty should be concluded which would allow of suspected vessels flying the British flag being searched and, if necessary, seized up to a limit of twelve miles from the American coast. His Majesty's Government, being desirous of assisting the United States as far as possible in dealing with the illicit liquor trade, proposed in reply that instead of a definite limit of twelve miles, the search, etc., of suspected British vessels should be agreed to up to a variable distance of an hour's sail from the shore, to be calculated either upon the speed of the suspect vessel herself or upon that of any vessel found to have been in communication between her and the shore. To cite a simple example: a suspect British vessel capable of ten miles per hour may be searched or seized up to a limit of ten miles from the shore; in the event of it being established, however, that this vessel was communicating with the shore by means of a fast motor-boat capable of a speed of thirty miles per hour, then the former may be searched and/or arrested up to thirty miles from the coast. This suggestion on the part of His Majesty's Government was gladly accepted by the United States Government and was incorporated in the Anglo-American Liquor Convention of 23rd January, 1924, which in turn has formed the basis of similar treaties between the United States and a number of other Powers.

Of late, certain British ships have been arrested in circumstances which have made me fear that violations of the Liquor Treaty have taken place, and I have accordingly found it necessary to request the United States Government to investigate the cases in question. Inasmuch, however, as I desire that the attitude of His Majesty's Government should be understood in the various ports of the Union, I should be glad if you would take an early opportunity of calling personally upon the local United States Attorney and prohibition authorities for the purpose of communicating to these officials, in a most friendly and informal manner, the substance of this despatch. In doing so you should add that while His Majesty's Government can have no sympathy with British subjects engaged in liquor smuggling, questions relating to the rights of British ships and seamen must always be of importance to His Majesty's Government in guarding against incidents which might, at some future date, be regarded by a foreign power as precedents for attacks upon British mercantile interests.

You should solicit the helpful co-operation of the local authorities in the sense outlined above, furnishing me in due course with a report upon your conversations.

I am, &c.,
ESMÉ HOWARD.

J'AI l'honneur d'accuser réception de la lettre du 21 août courant, par laquelle Votre Excellence a bien voulu me transmettre l'instrument des ratifications de Sa Majesté Britannique sur l'Arrangement international relatif aux facilités à donner aux marins du commerce pour le traitement des maladies vénériennes, signé le 1^{er} décembre 1924, à Bruxelles.

D'autre part, je prends acte de la notification faite par Votre Excellence de l'adhésion des Gouvernements du Canada et de la Nouvelle-Zélande à l'Arrangement dont il s'agit.

Je joins à la présente communication une copie du procès-verbal de dépôt des ratifications, et je saisis cette occasion, Monsieur l'Ambassadeur, de renouveler à Votre Excellence les assurances de ma haute considération.

E. VANDERVELDE.

A Son Excellence

le Très Honorable Sir George Grahame, Ambassadeur de Sa Majesté Britannique, à Bruxelles.

Procès-Verbal.

LES ratifications sur l'Arrangement relatif aux facilités à donner aux marins du commerce pour le traitement des maladies vénériennes conclu entre la République Argentine, la Belgique, la République Cubaine, le Danemark, la Finlande, la France et la Tunisie, la Grande-Bretagne, la Grèce, l'Italie, la Principauté de Monaco, le Pérou, la Roumanie et la Suède et signé à Bruxelles le 1^{er} décembre, 1924, devant être déposées au Ministère des Affaires Etrangères à Bruxelles, le présent procès-verbal, destiné à constater ce dépôt, a été ouvert aujourd'hui le 21 août, 1925.

Ont été successivement présentées au dépôt : le 21 août, 1925, les ratifications de Sa Majesté le Roi du Royaume-Uni de Grande-Bretagne et d'Irlande et des Possessions britanniques au delà des mers, Empereur des Indes.

GEORGE GRAHAME.

Secret. Dominions No. 89.)

[MY LORD,] [SIR,]

Downing Street, 3rd March, 1925.

WITH reference to my predecessor's Secret despatch Dominions No. 509 of the 24th October,* regarding the retrocession of Weihaiwei, I have the honour to request [Your Excellency] [you] to inform your Ministers that the Government which has assumed power in Peking, though recognized by the Powers as the de facto Government of China, has not received de jure recognition. The Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs is advised that de jure recognition would be involved if the recently negotiated convention for the retrocession of Weihaiwei were to be concluded with this Government, and he therefore considers that the conclusion of the convention must be suspended until a government is in office in China which the Powers having diplomatic relations with that country can fully and formally recognize.

2. In this connexion I would refer to my Secret despatches Dominions Nos. 529 and 578 of the 12th November† and 16th December‡ respectively on the subject of the situation in China.

I have, &c.,
L. S. AMERY.

* No. 858 in Dominions No. 93. † 58246/24; it dealt with the general situation in China.

‡ 58841/24; not printed; it dealt with the general situation in China.

CORRESPONDENCE ARISING OUT OF THE RESOLUTIONS OF THE IMPERIAL CONFERENCE, 1911.

RESOLUTION VIII: PROVISION FOR DESERTED WIVES AND CHILDREN.

1 The Governor New South Wales, 117 November 26, 1924 (Rec. Jan. 5, 1925)	Transmits copy of proclamation, with copy of Act and Rules made thereunder, regarding reciprocal enforcement of Maintenance Orders between New South Wales and the Isle of Man. States that Ministers have decided to declare reciprocal States as soon as they receive notification of the willingness of other parts of the Empire to reciprocate and draws attention to proclamation which extends the provisions of New South Wales to a number of Colonies and Protectorates ... 1
2 To the Governor New South Wales, 18 February 20	Transmits copies of an Order extending the Isle of Man Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1921, to New South Wales ... 2
3 The Governor-General Commonwealth of Australia, 60 ... March 19 (Rec. May 4)	Enumerates documents which should accompany provisional Maintenance Orders sent to Papua for enforcement ... 2
4 The Governor-General Commonwealth of Australia, 67 ... March 26 (Rec. May 4)	Inquires whether the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920, could be so amended as to permit of the enforcement in the Mandated Territory of New Guinea of Maintenance Orders from the parts of His Majesty's Dominions to which the Act applies ... 3
5 To the Governor-General Canada, 256 ... June 4	Transmits copy of letter from the Clerk to the Odiham Justices inquiring as to the extension to Canada of the Maintenance Orders (Facilities Enforcement) Act, 1920, and of the reply returned thereto (No. 6) ... 3
6 To the Clerk to the Odiham Justices ... June 3	States that no action has been taken by any of the Provincial Governments in Canada with a view to passing legislation reciprocal to the Act of 1920, and it is impossible to say what prospect there is of any such legislation being passed in the future ... 4
7 To the Governor-General Commonwealth of Australia, 245 ... September 5	States, in reply to No. 4, that as regards possibility of introducing amending legislation to enable reciprocity to be established between this country and Mandated Territories it is preferred that matter be left in abeyance, but that the establishment of reciprocity between Mandated New Guinea and any part of the Empire other than Great Britain and Ireland would appear to be a matter to be effected by direct arrangement, subject to the existence of appropriate legislation in New Guinea and such part of the Empire... 4

No. 1.

NEW SOUTH WALES.

THE GOVERNOR to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 5th January, 1925.)

[Answered by No. 2.]

(No. 117.)

Sir,
Government House, Sydney, 23th November, 1924.
I HAVE the honour, at the instance of Ministers, to inform you that upon receipt of your predecessor's despatch No. 95 of the 8th August last,* respecting the reciprocal enforcement of maintenance orders between this State and the Isle of Man, a proclamation was issued declaring that the Isle of Man is a reciprocating State for the purposes of the New South Wales "Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act." I transmit herewith copy of the proclamation,† together with copy of the said Act and Rules† made thereunder, for the information of the Government of the Isle of Man.

* No. 33 in Dominions No. 91. † Not reprinted.

2. I have to explain that Ministers have decided on the course of declaring reciprocal States as soon as they receive notification of the willingness of other parts of the Empire to reciprocate in this matter, together with evidence of the necessary legislation, rather than incur the delay caused by the fixing of a date for mutual action.

3. Ministers desire me to draw your attention to the proclamation,* copy of which is attached, which extends the provisions of the New South Wales Act to a number of the Colonies and Protectorates.

I have, &c.,
D. R. S. DE CHAIR,
Governor.

SIR, Governor-General's Office, Melbourne, 19th March, 1925.
WITH reference to your predecessor's despatch dated 9th July, 1924, No. 244,‡ covering copies of an Order in Council dated 25th June, 1924, applying the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920, to the Territory of Papua, I have the honour, at the instance of my Prime Minister, to inform you that provisional maintenance orders sent to Papua for enforcement should be accompanied by the under-mentioned documents:—

- (1) A certified copy of the Maintenance Order;
- (2) A certified copy of the depositions taken at the hearing;
- (3) Some means for the identification of the person against whom the order was made with the person in Papua believed to be the person against whom the order was made, i.e., the full name and address and the personal description of the defendant, together with his photograph, if possible;
- (4) Any grounds of defence the defendant might have had if he had appeared in obedience to a summons as certified to by the magistrate who made the provisional order; and
- (5) A certified copy of the entry in the marriage register, or the marriage certificate if the first cannot be obtained.

SIR, Governor-General's Office, Melbourne, 26th March, 1925.
WITH reference to previous correspondence relative to the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920, I have the honour, at the instance of my Prime Minister, to inform you that, as the Act in question has been made applicable to the Northern Territory of Australia and the Territories of Papua and Norfolk Island, the Commonwealth Government is of opinion that, if possible, arrangements should be made for the enforcement in the Mandated Territory of New Guinea of maintenance orders from the parts of His Majesty's Dominions to which the Act applies.

I should be glad if the consideration of His Majesty's Government could be given to the question of amending the Act to permit of such arrangements being made.

MY LORD, Downing Street, 4th June, 1925.
WITH reference to Sir John Idington's despatch No. 414 of the 6th of July, 1921,* and connected correspondence, I have the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, to be laid before your Ministers, the accompanying copy of a letter from the Clerk to the Odiham Justices regarding the extension to Canada of the provisions of the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920, together with a copy of the letter† sent in reply.

2. I would observe that the Act of 1920 has now been applied on reciprocal terms to all the Australian States (except Victoria) and also to New Zealand and the Union of South Africa, and, so far as I am aware, no difficulty has been experienced in the working of the system.

SIR,

Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920.

FROM time to time I have had applications made to me by wives of Canadian soldiers who were stationed in Aldershot and the vicinity during the War, for summonses against their husbands for deserting them and their children—the men having returned to Canada, leaving them behind.

I have had to tell them that the Canadian Government has not yet made reciprocal provisions for the enforcement within the Dominion of Canada, of Orders made in England under the above Act.

I shall be glad to know whether there is, in the near future, any likelihood that the Canadian Government will make reciprocal provisions, or whether it has definitely been "turned down" by them.

SIR, Downing Street, 3rd June, 1925.
I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Amery to inform you that your letter of the 13th of May* to the Home Office regarding the extension to Canada of the provisions of the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920, has been referred to this Department.

In reply I am to state that this is a matter in Canada for the several Provinces. So far as Mr. Amery is aware, no action has been taken by any of the Provincial Governments with a view to the passage of legislation reciprocal to the Act of 1920, and he is unable to say what prospect there is of any such legislation being passed in the future.

A copy of this correspondence is being sent to the Canadian Government.

MY LORD, Downing Street, 5th September, 1925.
I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Your Excellency's despatch No. 67 of the 26th March,† regarding the reciprocal enforcement of maintenance orders, and to request you to inform your Ministers that His Majesty's Government have given consideration to the possibility of introducing legislation to amend the Maintenance Orders (Facilities for Enforcement) Act, 1920, so as to enable reciprocity to be established between this country and Mandated Territories. So far, however, as they are aware, no definite instance has occurred in which the absence of such reciprocity has given rise to hardship to individuals, and in all the circumstances they would prefer that the question should stand over for the present for further consideration.

2. As regards the establishment of reciprocity between the Mandated Territory of New Guinea and any part of the Empire other than Great Britain and Ireland, this would appear to be a matter to be effected by direct arrangement, subject to the existence of appropriate legislation in New Guinea and such part of the Empire.

CORRESPONDENCE ARISING OUT OF THE RESOLUTIONS OF THE IMPERIAL WAR CONFERENCE, 1917.

RESOLUTION VIII.: CARE OF SOLDIERS' GRAVES.

The Conference, having considered the Minute addressed to the Prime Minister on the 15th March, 1917, by His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, concurs in the proposals made therein, and humbly prays His Majesty to constitute by Royal Charter an Imperial War Graves Commission for the purposes stated by His Royal Highness, and along the lines therein set forth as embodied in the draft charter submitted to the Conference. The Conference places on record its very deep appreciation of the generous action of the French Government in allotting in perpetuity the land in that country where our men are buried, and urges that similar arrangements should be made, if possible, in the terms of peace with all Governments—Ally, Enemy, or Neutral—for a similar concession in Gallipoli, Mesopotamia, Africa, and all other theatres of war. The Conference desires to record its grateful appreciation of the work already done by the Prince of Wales and his Committee in caring for the graves of those who have fallen in the common cause of the Empire, and its satisfaction that His Royal Highness has consented to become the President of the permanent Commission.

RESOLUTION XII.: CARE OF SOLDIERS' GRAVES.

That the Imperial War Graves Commission be requested as soon as possible after their appointment and organization to prepare an estimate of the probable cost of carrying on the work entrusted to them and to submit the same to the Governments of the United Kingdom and Oversea Dominions with their recommendation as to the proportion that should be borne by each.

IMPERIAL WAR CONFERENCE, 1918.

RESOLUTION I.: IMPERIAL WAR GRAVES COMMISSION.

The Conference desires to place on record its appreciation of the labours of the Imperial War Graves Commission and is in favour of the cost of carrying out the decisions of the Commission being borne by the respective Governments in proportion to the numbers of the graves of their dead.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE to THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

(No. 42.)

SIR, Downing Street, 9th February, 1925.
I HAVE the honour to refer to the correspondence terminating with Your Excellency's despatch No. 260 of the 7th July, 1924,* relative to the future care and maintenance of British military graves in the Irish Free State.

2. His Majesty's Government have noted with appreciation your Ministers' offer to take over the responsibility for all such graves in the Free State. Before deciding whether to avail themselves of it, however, they desire me to lay before your Government certain further particulars in regard to the financial aspect of the proposals made in my predecessor's despatch No. 115 of the 21st February, 1924.†

* No. 46 in Dominions No. 91. † No. 45 in Dominions No. 91.

3. Included among the obligations imposed upon the Imperial War Graves Commission by their Charter is that of placing headstones over the graves which fall to their care. It is not clear from your despatch under reference whether this service would be included among the responsibilities which your Ministers offer to accept, but it is an obligation which, in the absence of any other arrangement, the Commission would feel unable to evade.

4. It appears possible that your Ministers may have been moved to reject the suggestion that the Irish Free State should participate in the activities of the Imperial War Graves Commission by an imperfect acquaintance with the financial liabilities involved by such a step. His Majesty's Government, far from proposing that the Irish Free State should accept responsibility for such a proportion of the total expenses of the Commission as the number of war graves of Irishmen throughout the world bears to the whole number of war graves, intended to propose that the share of the Irish Free State should be ascertained by reference to the number of war graves situated in Free State Territory. According to an approximate estimate, which should be regarded as subject to revision in detail, it is calculated that on this basis the contribution of the Irish Free State to the funds of the Commission could not exceed £5,000 a year during the short time before the constructive work of the Commission is finished, and it is considered that the expenditure on maintenance thereafter to which the Irish Free State would be called on to contribute rateably should be a comparatively modest sum.

5. His Majesty's Government will be grateful if your Ministers should feel able to reconsider, in the light of the figures quoted above, their decision not to participate in the work of the Imperial War Graves Commission, and if I may be informed in due course whether they can now see their way to accepting the proposals outlined in Mr. Thomas's despatch of the 21st February, 1924.

RESOLUTION XV.: DOUBLE INCOME TAX.

The present system of Double Income Taxation within the Empire calls for review in relation—

- (i) to firms in the United Kingdom doing business with the Oversea Dominions, India, and the Colonies;
- (ii) to private individuals resident in the United Kingdom who have capital invested elsewhere in the Empire, or who depend upon remittances from elsewhere within the Empire, and
- (iii) to its influence on the investment of capital in the United Kingdom, the Dominions, and India, and to the effect of any change on the position of British capital invested abroad.

The Conference, therefore, urges that this matter should be taken in hand immediately after the conclusion of the War, and that an amendment of the law should be made which will remedy the present unsatisfactory position.

NEW ZEALAND.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE to THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

[Answered by No. 11.]

(No. 8.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 12th January, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to request Your Excellency to inform your Ministers that the attention of the Board of Inland Revenue has been called to the recommendation of the Royal Commission, appointed to inquire into the subject of Land and Income Taxation in New Zealand, concerning double taxation (recommendation (o) on page 6 of New Zealand Parliamentary Paper 1-B.5 of 1924).

2. If the New Zealand Government should decide, in pursuance of that recommendation, to introduce legislation complementary to Section 27 of the United Kingdom Finance Act 1920 (a copy of which was enclosed in Lord Milner's despatch Dominions No. 427 of the 4th October, 1920*) in regard to relief in respect of double income tax, the terms of such legislation would seem to require consideration in the light of that section, and in the circumstances the Board of Inland Revenue would be happy to co-operate, should the New Zealand Government so wish, in the preparation of the legislation required.

3. It may be observed, with reference to the proviso contained in the recommendation that the arrangements for relief in respect of double taxation should not operate to place British investors in New Zealand on a better footing than New Zealand investors, that if provision were made in New Zealand for the complementary relief recommended by the Royal Commission on Income Tax in paragraph 70 of their Report of the 11th March, 1920 (a copy of which was enclosed in Lord Milner's despatch Dominions No. 114 of the 24th of March, 1920†), the relief would not have that result, as the measure of the total relief to be given in this country and in New Zealand would be the lower of the two rates of tax; so that the investor, after allowance of the relief in both countries, could not bear less in all than the higher of the two rates to which he might be liable in either country before allowance of the relief.

(No. 88.)

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 13th March, 1925.

WITH reference to Your Excellency's despatch No. 72 of the 2nd April, 1924,* I have the honour to transmit to you, to be laid before your Ministers, the accompanying copy of a memorandum containing the observations of the Board of Inland Revenue on the statement by the Commonwealth Commissioner of Taxation on the subject of Double Income Tax forwarded in your despatch under reference.

2. The Board of Inland Revenue desire to express their thanks to the Federal Commissioner of Taxation for his careful consideration of their previous memorandum, and for the information conveyed in his statement.

I have, &c.,

L. S. AMERY.

Enclosure in No. 10.

NOTE BY THE BOARD OF INLAND REVENUE ON DESPATCH OF 2ND APRIL, 1924, FROM THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA, FORWARDING A STATEMENT BY THE COMMONWEALTH COMMISSIONER OF TAXATION ON THE SUBJECT OF DOUBLE INCOME TAX.

1. THE Board note from the observations which the Commonwealth Commissioner of Taxation makes in regard to paragraphs 3, 4 and 6 of their memorandum, that the methods of dealing, for the purposes of relief from Commonwealth tax, with differences between Commonwealth and United Kingdom assessments in relation to

- (a) admissible or inadmissible deductions from gross income and
- (b) basis of assessment,

differ from the methods adopted (on the recommendation of the Royal Commission on the Income Tax) for the purpose of relief from United Kingdom tax.

While this diversity of method is, perhaps, confusing to the taxpayer, it does not appear, if the principles adopted by the Commonwealth Authorities are correctly understood, that the result will be inequitable. It is not entirely clear, however, from the Commissioner's comments on paragraphs 3 and 4, whether the correct conclusions are drawn from his comments on paragraph 6. The comments on paragraphs 3 and 4 refer to the example given in paragraph 74 of the Report of the Royal Commission on the Income Tax, which was as follows:—

1st Year.		United Kingdom.		Dominion.
Tax before relief	...	£1,000	at 3s. 9d.	£600	at 1s. 6d.
Relief	...	£1,000	at 1s. 6d.	Nil.
Tax after relief	...	£1,000	at 2s. 3d.	£600	at 1s. 6d.
2nd Year.		United Kingdom.		Dominion.
Tax before relief	...	£300	at 3s. 0d.	£900	at 1s. 6d.
Relief	...	£300	at 1s. 6d.	Nil.
Tax after relief	...	£300	at 1s. 6d.	£900	at 1s. 6d.

The Commissioner with regard to this example says: "If the Commonwealth rates of tax in the two years involved rebate of tax, the rebate would be calculated on £600 in the first year and £300 in the second year, as these amounts represent the income falling to be doubly taxed."

If it were to be concluded from this statement that, because the United Kingdom assessment for the year two was £300 only, the Commonwealth could not allow relief on more than £300 of their assessment of £900 for the year two, the result would appear to be inequitable to the taxpayer. The taxpayer would obtain relief from Commonwealth tax on the amount of the Commonwealth assessment in years when that was less than the United Kingdom assessment, and only on an amount equivalent to the United Kingdom assessment in years when the Commonwealth assessment exceeded the United Kingdom assessment, and would rarely obtain, over a series of years, relief from Commonwealth tax on a total amount equivalent to the total Australian profits charged to United Kingdom tax.

It does not appear from the comments on paragraph 6 of the Board's memorandum that this result is intended. If those comments are correctly understood, it is assumed that the Commonwealth would allow relief on the whole of the assessment of £900 for the year two, provided it were shown either that the whole of that assessment formed part of the United Kingdom assessment of £1,000 for the year one, or that the whole of the £900 were charged to United Kingdom Income Tax at any time, either before the year one or after the year two.

2. With regard to the comments by the Commissioner of Taxation on paragraph 9 of the Board's memorandum, it is noted that certificates in the form suggested in paragraph 10 of the memorandum, together with details obtained from the taxpayer, have enabled the Commonwealth relief to be granted. It is observed, however, that the Commissioner suggests that the taxpayer should prepare dissected accounts which should be certified by the assessing authority to be those used in its assessment. Such certificates could not, apparently, serve any useful purpose unless the dissected accounts were at least compared and reconciled in detail by the assessing authority with the accounts produced to that authority as adjusted for Income Tax purposes. In these circumstances, and for the reasons indicated in paragraph 9 of their previous memorandum, the Board regret that they cannot see their way to arrange for such certificates to be given.

3. It appears from the Commissioner's comments on paragraph 13 of the Board's memorandum that paragraphs 12 and 13 of the memorandum have not been correctly understood. The Commissioner says:—"It is noticed that the United Kingdom relief from double taxation paid by a company on dividends distributed to shareholders who are not Australian residents is first granted to the Company, and is subsequently granted to the shareholder (paragraph 13), notwithstanding the fact that the Company in nearly every instance deducts the dividend tax from the dividends paid to the non-Australian residents."

This is not the case; to the extent that relief is granted to a Company it is not again granted by the Revenue to the shareholder. Moreover, relief in respect of the Australian dividend tax would only be granted to the Company if the Company did not deduct that tax from the dividends to absentee shareholders; as the Board understand the position, a company incorporated outside Australia rarely, if ever, deducts Australian tax from dividends, and would probably not be entitled to do so. Paragraph 13 dealt with the allowance of relief to shareholders resident in the United Kingdom of Companies which are not liable to United Kingdom Income Tax on their profits. Such Companies have no title to, and would not be allowed, relief in the United Kingdom.

With regard to the further comment that "the relief granted by the Board of Inland Revenue proceeds on the assumption that any tax paid by a Company is paid on behalf of the shareholders," the Board are aware that in certain cases a Dominion Income Tax paid by a Company on its profits is not, under the Dominion law, regarded as paid on behalf of the shareholders, but, in pursuance of the general intention of the scheme to allow relief to all persons who actually bear the burden of double taxation, the Board have taken into account the fact that, whether or not under the Dominion law the Dominion tax is paid by the Company on behalf of the shareholders, the payment of the Dominion tax by the Company is borne by the ordinary shareholders, and, in certain circumstances, by preference shareholders, in the sense that it diminishes the funds available for distribution by the Company as dividends.

4. The Board note the illustrative examples appended to the Commissioner's memorandum, which make clear the method of calculation of the Commonwealth rebate to a Company and to a shareholder in a Company.

7TH NOVEMBER. Confidential. My despatch 31st October, 1918, Dominions 628,* and subsequent correspondence regarding Resolution of Imperial War Conference, 1918, on the subject of the dye manufacturing industry. In view of representations received from British Dyestuffs Corporation, His Majesty's Government after careful consideration and in order to enable the Corporation to carry on business on ordinary commercial lines have expressed their readiness to withdraw their representatives from the Board of the Corporation and to terminate their existing rights of veto and control at the same time in effect selling to Corporation the Government's holding therein, subject to condition that Article of Association which provides that not more than 25 per cent. of shares should be held by foreigners is not altered and assurances being given that in all matters of technical information and research the Corporation will keep in touch with the Government. This proposal will have to be considered by general meeting of shareholders in connexion with the scheme of reconstruction.

In reaching this decision His Majesty's Government do not intend in any way to depart from policy embodied in Dyestuffs Import Regulation Act, 1920 (see my despatch 15th January, 1921, Dominions 29†), the necessity for which they regard as in no way diminished by these changes.—AMERY.

(23rd November, 1925.)

British Dyestuffs Corporation.

SIR F. HALL asked the President of the Board of Trade whether the Government has surrendered its interest in the British Dyestuffs Corporation; if so, upon what terms; and what steps will be taken to ensure that this country shall not in future find itself handicapped, as was the case during the Great War, owing to its dependence upon foreign countries for the supply of aniline dyes?

THE PRESIDENT OF THE BOARD OF TRADE (Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister): His Majesty's Government have indicated to the directors of the British Dyestuffs Corporation their willingness to dispose of their shares in the Corporation for the sum of £600,000, and to terminate their existing rights of veto and control on the conditions that the Corporation enters into an agreement that no more than 25 per cent. of its shares shall be held by foreigners, and that the Corporation will in all matters of technical information and research keep in touch with the Government in such manner as the President of the Board of Trade for the time being may direct. These arrangements, if approved by the shareholders, will give the Corporation the same freedom in the conduct of its undertaking as is enjoyed by the other dye-making companies in this country. The course taken is one which the Government believe, after full consideration, to be in the best interests, not merely of the particular company, but of the dye-making industry in this country as a whole. I may add, with regard to the last part of the question, that the Government have no intention of modifying the Dyestuffs (Import Regulation) Act.

Enclosure in No. 17.

SIR,

Treasury Chambers, 3rd March, 1925.

THE Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's Treasury have had under consideration the question of the payment of local rates on the residences in this country occupied by the High Commissioners for the British Dominions and they have decided that such a proportion of the rates as is levied in respect of the following matters shall be borne on the Vote for Rates on Government Property, viz.:—

- (a) Expenses of the County Council in connexion with Elementary and Higher Education; Police;
Relief of the Poor;
Baths and Washhouses Acts;
Burial Acts;
Public Libraries Acts;
Housing Acts;
Food and Drugs Acts;
Miscellaneous and Administrative Expenses.

The proportion of the rates falling to be borne by the High Commissioners will, therefore, be limited to such components of the rates as relate to:—

- (b) Expenses of the County Council in connexion with matters other than Elementary and Higher Education; including Equalization Charges;
Water charges;
House refuse: removal and disposal;
Sewerage and drainage;
Lighting, cleansing, repairing and maintenance of public streets and pavements.

With regard to the machinery for giving effect to this decision, My Lords have directed that Demands for Rates shall be dealt with by the Treasury Valuer, by whom payment of the claims of the local authorities will be made in the first instance in full. He will then furnish a statement of such payments to the Colonial Office showing the sum repayable by the High Commissioners respectively in respect of the proportion referred to at (b) above. On repayment of such sums to the Colonial Office they should be transferred to this Department for the credit of the Vote for Rates on Government Property.

The addresses of the houses to which this decision applies should be furnished to the Treasury Valuer who should also be given early intimation of any changes occurring from time to time in those addresses.

I am accordingly to request that in communicating this decision to the High Commissioners the Secretary of State for the Colonies will be so good as to ask High Commissioners to refer local authorities making any claims for rates upon them to the Treasury Valuer, whose address is 29, Abingdon Street, S.W.1. and in the event of High Commissioners having paid the rates for the current rating period that they be asked to send their receipts to the above-named officer in order that refundment may be made to them of the proportionate part of the rates relative to the matters mentioned at (a) above, calculated from 1st January, 1925.

I am, &c.,

G. L. BARSTOW.

Colonial Office.

MR. W. C. HANKINSON (COLONIAL OFFICE) to [MR. P. C. LARKIN.] [SIR JOSEPH COOK.] [SIR JAMES ALLEN.] [MR. J. S. SMIT.] [MR. J. MCNEILL.] [CAPTAIN V. GORDON.]

DEAR —,

Downing Street, 12th May, 1925.

WITH reference to Mr. Edgcumbe's letter of the 9th March* [To Mr. J. S. Smit only: to Sir E. Walton, which no doubt you will have seen,] Mr. Amery desires me to enclose a memorandum setting out the procedure proposed by the Treasury in regard to the exemption of the High Commissioners for the self-governing Dominions from certain forms of taxation in this country.

* No. 17.

The memorandum is, I think, self-explanatory; but if any doubtful points occur to you, perhaps you would let me know, and I will endeavour to have them cleared up.

We have been asked by the Treasury to notify formally to the various authorities concerned any change in your private address, and Mr. Amery would accordingly be glad if you would give instructions for any such change to be communicated to us, so that we may pass it on.

[To Mr. Larkin and Sir J. Cook only: I enclose a copy of a letter* which I have sent to the Agents-General for the [Canadian Provinces.] [Australian States.]]

Your sincerely,

W. C. HANKINSON.

Enclosure in No. 18.

PROCEDURE TO BE ADOPTED IN CONNEXION WITH THE EXEMPTION OF THE HIGH COMMISSIONERS FOR THE SELF-GOVERNING DOMINIONS FROM CERTAIN FORMS OF TAXATION IN THIS COUNTRY.

I. Income Tax.

It is proposed to include the necessary provisions under this head in the coming Finance Bill.

The relief to be given will be in respect of British Income Tax (i) on private remittances from abroad (ii) on income from British Government securities (iii) on income from foreign and colonial securities payable under deduction of tax in this country, and (iv) on the annual value of premises owned and occupied for official purposes.

On the passage of the necessary legislation this relief will take effect as from the year 1925-26, assessments in respect of previous years being payable in the ordinary course.

It is proposed that this relief should extend also to the High Commissioner for Southern Rhodesia, to the Agents-General for the Australian States and Canadian Provinces and, except in respect of (ii), income from British Government securities, to such members of the High Commissioners' and Agent-Generals' staffs as are ordinarily resident out of this country and resident here only for the performance of their official duties. In this connexion, it should be explained that exemption from Income Tax on British Government securities is at present accorded only to foreign Ambassadors and Ministers personally, and not to their staffs. But members of the staffs are normally entitled, as being not ordinarily resident in this country, to claim relief on Income Tax from certain British Government securities.

II. Customs Duties.

The following reliefs will be granted to the High Commissioners for the self-governing Dominions:—

(i) Exemption from examination of baggage and waiver of duty on any dutiable articles therein (a) on first arrival (when taking up their posts), (b) on subsequent arrivals (when returning from journeys abroad), on production of an official "Baggage Pass."

(ii) Delivery duty-free of packages imported for the personal use of the High Commissioner and that of his family.

Arrangements are being made for the issue of "Baggage Passes" to the present holders of the Office of High Commissioner. A new High Commissioner will be furnished with a Pass on application to the Colonial Office, and return of his predecessor's Pass.

In order to secure the benefit of (ii) above, the procedure proposed is that the High Commissioner should make a signed application to the Board of Customs stating formally that the goods are for his personal use and that of his family. It would facilitate the necessary Customs action if information could at the same time be given as to the port or place at which the goods are to be found and the name of the firm acting as agents in the matter.

The above arrangements come into force immediately.

* No. 19.

III. Establishment Licences.

Exemption is granted in respect of the following Licences:—Armorial Bearings Licences, Male Servant Licences, Dog Licences and Gun and Game Licences.

The London County Council are being asked to instruct their collectors to avoid demanding the usual declarations on which payment for Licence duty is invited and paid.

IV. Motor-Car Licence Duties.

Licensing Authorities are being notified by the Minister of Transport that the motor-cars owned by the High Commissioners are exempt from Motor-Car Licence Duty, and instructed that exempt licences should be issued to them on application.

On the next occasion of application for renewal or issue of a licence, the High Commissioners should apply for "exempt" licences.

V. Local Rates.

This is dealt with in the Treasury letter of the 3rd March (enclosed in Colonial Office letter of 9th March*).

DEAR —,

Downing Street, 12th May, 1925.

MR. AMERY desires me to inform you that, in connexion with Section 19 of the Finance Act, 1923 (which provided for the exemption from British Income Tax of the official emoluments of High Commissioners, Agents-General and their staffs) further consideration has recently been given to the position of High Commissioners and Agents-General in regard to Income Tax here.

Mr. Amery thinks you will like to know that it has now been decided to include, in the forthcoming Finance Bill, provision for the exemption of High Commissioners and Agents-General from British Income Tax (i) on private remittances from abroad (ii) on income from British Government securities (iii) on income from foreign and colonial securities payable under deduction of tax in this country, and (iv) on the annual value of premises owned and occupied for official purposes. On the passage of the necessary legislation this exemption will take effect as from the year 1925-26, assessments in respect of previous years being payable in the ordinary course.

It is proposed that the exemption should, except in respect of (ii) (income from British Government securities) extend also to such members of the High Commissioners' and Agents-Generals' staff as are ordinarily resident out of this country and resident here only for the performance of their official duties. Such members of the staffs are normally entitled, as being not ordinarily resident in this country, to claim relief on income from certain British Government securities.

Yours sincerely,

W. C. HANKINSON.

THE PRIVATE SECRETARY TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE, to [MR. P. C. LARKIN.] [SIR JOSEPH COOK.] [SIR JAMES ALLEN.] [MR. J. S. SMIT.] [MR. JAMES MCNEILL.] [CAPTAIN V. GORDON.]

DEAR —,

Downing Street, 15th July, 1925.

WITH reference to my letter of the 9th March,* concerning the payment of rates in this country, Mr. Amery desires me to let you know that further consideration has now been given to the question of the payment of rates on your and the other High Commissioners' offices, as distinct from private residences.

* No. 17.

The principle which, as you know, His Majesty's Government would wish to carry out is that, where a concession is given to Ambassadors and Ministers, an analogous concession should be given to the High Commissioners. In applying the principle here, it would seem proper that there should be a payment of rates made by the Treasury in respect of office accommodation required for the personal use of the High Commissioner and of the Secretariat and accounting staff of his office, but not in respect of accommodation required for other officials of the Dominion Governments who may be employed in this country, such as Trade Commissioners and others concerned in banking, shipping and emigration work, etc., or in respect of rooms used for commercial purposes. This differentiation would correspond to that actually in force in the case of foreign countries, since, so far as office accommodation is concerned, concessions in respect of rates are limited to the accommodation required for the diplomatic staffs, and are not given, for example, to Consuls.

In the circumstances, we gather that the Treasury are prepared, on learning that such an arrangement would be satisfactory to you, and to the other High Commissioners, to whom I am also writing, to make an allowance in respect of the rates on the High Commissioners' offices, on the lines set out in their letter of the 3rd March (see my letter of the 9th of March*). The only stipulation made by the Treasury is that the allowance in respect of the offices of any High Commissioner should not exceed that granted in respect of the Embassy of any first-class foreign Power. Subject to the general considerations set out above, the detailed arrangements in the case of each office would be left for discussion with the Treasury Valuer.

Yours very truly,

A. EDGCUMBE.

DEAR —,

Downing Street, 28th July, 1925.

[Not to Mr. Lemieux: With reference to my letter of the 12th May,†] I am desired by Mr. Amery to enclose a copy of a memorandum setting out (rather more fully) the arrangements in regard to exemption from Income Tax here for High Commissioners, Agents-General, and their staffs which have been brought into force by Section 26 of the Finance Act, 1925, of which a copy is enclosed. [To Sir J. Cook: I am sending a copy of the Memorandum to the Agents-General for the Australian States.] [To Mr. Larkin: I am sending a copy of the Memorandum to the Agents-General for Ontario, Nova Scotia and British Columbia in continuation of the letters of which I sent you copies on 12th May,‡ and also a copy to the newly-appointed Agent-General for Quebec in a letter marked "to await arrival."]

I am, &c.,

W. C. HANKINSON.

Enclosure in No. 21.

MEMORANDUM.

As far as Inland Revenue duties are concerned, the effect of Section 26 of the Finance Act, 1925, is as follows:—

* No. 17. † Nos. 18 and 19. ‡ No. 18.

"A High Commissioner or Agent-General will be entitled to relief from Income Tax under Schedule C, on any income which he may receive by way of interest on Government securities payable in the United Kingdom; this is a statutory relief which is given to the 'accredited Minister of any foreign State resident in the United Kingdom' by Rule 2 (c) of the Rules applicable to Schedule C.* The High Commissioner or Agent-General will also be entitled to the following reliefs from Income Tax, which an Ambassador of a foreign State enjoys by virtue of 'diplomatic privilege,' as a matter of International Law:—

- (a) under Schedule A, in respect of any property owned by him and occupied by him for official purposes;
- (b) under Schedule B, in respect of any land occupied by him which can properly be regarded as occupied for official purposes;
- (c) under Schedule C and D, in respect of any income from foreign or colonial investments payable in this country;
- (d) under Schedule D, in respect of any income arising outside this country, whether retained abroad or remitted here.

"The High Commissioner or Agent-General will also be entitled to total relief from Land Tax in respect of any property owned and occupied by him for official purposes.

"The foregoing reliefs are in addition to the relief which the High Commissioner or Agent-General already enjoys in respect of his official emoluments by virtue of Section 19 of the Finance Act, 1923.

"The members of the staff of the High Commissioner or Agent-General and the Official Agents to whom the section applies are the members and Agents who are certified by the High Commissioner, or Agent-General as the case may be, to be ordinarily resident outside Great Britain and Northern Ireland and to be resident solely for the purpose of their official duties. They will be entitled to all the above-mentioned reliefs which the section confers on the High Commissioner or Agent-General, with the exception of the relief under Schedule C, in respect of income from British Government securities. As is explained above, the latter is a statutory relief and is confined to the foreign Ambassador himself; it is therefore extended to the High Commissioner or Agent-General, but not to the members of their staffs.

"A member of the staff of a High Commissioner or Agent-General or an Official Agent would, however, be entitled, as being not ordinarily resident in Great Britain or Northern Ireland, to relief from Income Tax on the interest of certain British Government securities (e.g., 5 per cent. War Loan and 4 per cent. Funding Loan) which were issued subject to the condition that the interest thereon shall not be liable to tax so long as the securities are in the beneficial ownership of persons who are not ordinarily resident in Great Britain or Northern Ireland."

Enclosure 2 in No. 21.

FINANCE ACT, 1925.

(15-16 Geo. 5, Ch. 36.)

26. A High Commissioner or Agent-General within the meaning of Section 19 of the Finance Act, 1923 (which exempts from income tax the salaries of High Commissioners, Agents-General and their staffs), who is resident in Great Britain or Northern Ireland shall be entitled to the same immunity from income tax (including super-tax) and land tax as that to which an accredited Minister of a foreign state so resident is entitled, whether by virtue of any Act or otherwise and any person having or exercising any employment to which the said section nineteen applies shall be entitled to the same immunity from income tax (including super-tax) and land tax as that to which a member of the staff of an accredited Minister of a foreign state is entitled, whether by virtue of any Act or otherwise.

* Rule 2(c) of the Rules applicable to Schedule C. Income Tax Act, 1918, reads as follows:—

- 2. No tax shall be chargeable in respect of—

c. The stock, dividends or interest of any accredited minister of any foreign State resident in the United Kingdom: Provided that if the same stand in the name of a trustee, the property therein of any such minister shall be proved by the trustee to the special commissioners.

SIR,

Government House, St. John's, 7th January, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your predecessor's despatch Dominions No. 526 of the 6th November, 1924,* on the subject of certain questions connected with the law of British Nationality, and to inform you that my Ministers have no observations to offer on the provisions of the draft Bill.

2. My Ministers have considered the memorandum dealing with the two further proposals for the amendment of the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1914, and concur in the amendment of that Act in the manner indicated.

3. At present our Statute Book contains the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act with all amendments to date. Should it be decided by His Majesty's Government to amend the Act in the terms submitted my Ministers will arrange for the passing of the necessary amendments by the local Legislature.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to you herewith, with reference to your predecessor's despatch Dominions No. 526 of the 6th November, 1924,* copy of Minute from Ministers on the subject of the grant of naturalization to persons resident in mandated territory and the nationality of married women.

MINUTE No. 58.

WITH reference to His Excellency the Governor-General's Minute No. 48/1534 of the 27th November, 1924, on the subject of the grant of naturalization to persons resident in mandated territory and the nationality of married women, Ministers have the honour to state that they have no observations to make on these matters beyond expressing their concurrence in the proposals. Legislation already exists for the naturalization of persons in the mandated territory of South West Africa.

* No. 278 in Dominions No. 91.

In regard to the two further proposals mentioned in Mr. Thomas's despatch, Ministers have no comments to make on that referring to the acquisition of British nationality by children of the third generation born abroad of British parents during the War. On the question of British-born women not losing British nationality on marriage if and so long as they are debarred from acquiring the nationality of their husbands under the law of the latter's country, Ministers are in agreement with the proposed legislation to enable such women to retain their original nationality, provided it is clear that the principle of a woman acquiring the status of her husband on marriage is upheld, and that the proposed legislation is intended only to provide a nationality for women who would, in the circumstances described, become Stateless.

(No. 7.)

SIR,

Governor-General's Office, Melbourne, 19th January, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to inform you that my Prime Minister has invited my attention to the fact that, in connexion with the last Imperial Conference, the Committee, under the chairmanship of the Secretary of State for Home Affairs, appointed to consider a suggestion made by the Commonwealth Government that the British Nationality and Status of Aliens' Act be amended so as to permit of the grant of naturalization to persons resident in the territories mandated to the Imperial Government or the Dominions, recommended that the power of granting certificates of Imperial naturalization be extended so as to cover persons resident in "B" and "C" mandated territories and also in protectorates.

My Prime Minister has mentioned that in a joint memorandum prepared in the Home Office and the Colonial Office it was stated that "... the most convenient method of procedure would appear to be that, when next legislation amending the Act of 1914 is introduced, provision should at the same time be made enabling the Act to be applied, by Order of His Majesty in Council (or, in the case of territories mandated to Dominions, Order of the Governor-General in Council), to the territory in question, subject to such modifications and adaptations as may be necessary."

I am advised that the Commonwealth Government desires to introduce legislation which would enable residents in the Territory of New Guinea to become naturalized under the Commonwealth Nationality Act, but before taking that action would be glad to learn whether His Majesty's Government contemplates an early amendment of the British Act in the direction indicated.

I should be glad, therefore, if you would be so good as to inform me whether there is a definite prospect of the introduction of any such amending legislation into the British Parliament at an early date.

(Received 23rd March, 1925.)

(No. 20.)

SIR,

Governor-General's Office, Melbourne, 4th February, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to inform you that I am advised by my Prime Minister that the position of persons applying for naturalization in Australia, whose countries still regard them as retaining their original nationality even after naturalization in the Commonwealth, is stated by the Commonwealth law authorities to be that such persons, after taking the Oath of Allegiance and becoming naturalized British subjects, may be deemed, by virtue of the laws of the foreign country to which they belonged, to be subjects of that country, and thus possess a dual nationality.

For example, my Prime Minister informs me that in the Argentine Republic and in Switzerland nationality is not lost by naturalization abroad, and that in the countries mentioned hereunder the loss of original nationality is conditional upon the person receiving the consent of his Government:—

Germany. A German can retain his German nationality if, before becoming naturalized, he receives the written permission of his home State to do so.

* No. 278 in Dominions No. 91. † Columns 1188 to 1231: not reprinted. ‡ No. 24.

Greece. Nationality is not lost by naturalization abroad unless with the permission of the Government. Such permission is not granted if military obligations have not been performed.

Poland. Persons liable for military service can only acquire foreign nationality after they have received permission from the Ministry of War to do so.

Turkey. Nationality is not lost by naturalization abroad without authorization.

Belgium. Nationality is not lost unless it is renounced by a declaration made before the Belgian authorities in the manner prescribed.

I should be glad if you would be so good as to acquaint me, for the information of my Ministers, with the practice of His Majesty's Government in dealing with applications for naturalization by subjects of countries such as those referred to above, who would not be released, except in the circumstances mentioned, from allegiance to another country on becoming naturalized in Great Britain.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL TO THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 1st April, 1925.)

[Answered by No. 33.]

(No. 30.)

SIR,

Government House, Wellington, 23rd February, 1925.

WITH reference to your predecessor's despatch Dominions No. 526 of the 6th November last,* regarding the law of British nationality, I have the honour to inform you that my Ministers advise me that the New Zealand Parliament has not adopted Part 2 of British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, 1914, but on the contrary has adopted special legislation for New Zealand on the subject by the Act entitled "The British Nationality and Status of Aliens (in New Zealand) Act, 1923," which was reserved for His Majesty's assent and has duly received Royal approval.

2. The result is that, while New Zealand can grant the status of British nationality in New Zealand to foreigners, this Dominion's certificate of naturalization does not operate to create the status of British citizen in any other part of the Empire, and, conversely, naturalization in any other part of the Empire does not create the status of British nationality in New Zealand.

3. By Section 14 of the New Zealand Act its provisions are made applicable to Western Samoa with certain modifications. It is held that it is within the power of New Zealand, under its general power to legislate under a Mandate of the "C" class, so to enact.

4. The New Zealand Government does not desire that naturalization in Western Samoa should have any greater effect than a certificate of naturalization within the boundaries of New Zealand. Indeed, it would be extremely inconvenient if there were any difference between the effect of naturalization within New Zealand and within its mandatory territory.

5. For the above reasons, my Ministers do not desire that the provisions of the Imperial Act should be made applicable to the mandatory territory of Western Samoa.

6. With regard to the proposed amendments to Part 1 of the Imperial Act relating to the status by nationality of married women, whether in respect of marriage which has ceased to exist in fact though continuing in law, or in respect of marriage with a foreigner, the laws of whose country do not create a transfer by the wife of allegiance by marriage, the New Zealand Government will adopt any alteration of the Imperial Act which the Imperial Parliament passes, and will do so in the manner which has been adopted in the New Zealand Act, namely, by declaring by schedule that the provisions of the Imperial Act relating to legal status declared by the Imperial Act are part of the law of New Zealand.

UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE TO THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

TELEGRAM.

7TH MAY. His Majesty's Government have learnt with satisfaction decision of your Ministers to introduce legislation this session on question of nationality and status of aliens, including adoption of Part II of British Act of 1914, and they have studied with interest terms of Bill published in Gazette of 29th January.

It is noticed that whilst Union Bill re-enacts greater part of British Act of 1914 as amended up-to-date certain modifications and additions are proposed. Certain of these in opinion of Secretary of State for Home Affairs might possibly result in difficulties later on, particularly as regards securing uniformity of administration. For this reason he hopes that your Ministers will be able to consider following comments before wording of Union legislation is finally settled.

1. Clause 1 (b) (5) does not include amongst those who are deemed to be natural-born British subjects in Union persons whose birth has been allowed by Secretary of State here, on account of special circumstances, to be registered at British Consulate within two years after its occurrence.

Provisions of corresponding sub-section in British Act were in part temporary and number of persons affected is very small, but Secretary of State for Home Affairs trusts that Union legislation may be so worded that no doubt could be thrown on legal claim of persons in question to be considered natural-born British subjects in Union.

2. As regards Clause 2 (4) practice here is to issue certificate after decision to grant naturalization reached. Oath is thereupon taken by applicant and subscribed on back of certificate. It is found that Oath cannot conveniently be taken before issue of certificate. Secretary of State for Home Affairs accordingly thinks that your Ministers may find it useful to follow wording of Section 2 (4) of British Act which lays down that certificate of naturalization shall not take effect until Oath of Allegiance has been taken. Absence of any reference to date from which certificate is intended to take effect might possibly give rise to doubts as to date of its commencement.

3. As regards second proviso to Clause 12, Secretary of State for Home Affairs feels that certificate of Imperial naturalization should confer on grantee a legal title to British nationality which should be for life unless and until it is revoked for some good reason under statutory provision. For this reason he doubts whether it is desirable to insert provision which would render possible certificate of limited operation at discretion of Executive.

4. Secretary of State for Home Affairs assumes that intention of Clause 26 is to provide opportunity for rectifying any clerical error in certificate after it has been issued. Present wording would, however, suggest that this clause might be used for purpose of limiting effect of certificate in some way, and it is noticed in this connexion that marginal note to clause refers to revocation. Secretary of State for Home Affairs observes that practice here is to regard a certificate of naturalization once issued as incapable of alteration or amendment, and he would greatly prefer if Union Bill were so worded as to ensure similar practice there.

Secretary of State for Home Affairs has also asked me to call your Ministers' attention to two subsidiary points:—

(A) Provisos to Clause 1 of Bill as printed in Gazette though obviously intended to refer to whole of paragraph (b) of clause might possibly be read as relating to paragraph (c) only.

(B) If your Ministers decide to alter wording of Clause 2 (4) on lines indicated in (2) above it would seem desirable to insert provision in Clause 28 corresponding to Section 19 (1) (d) of British Act.

SIR,

Governor-General's Office, Melbourne, 19th March, 1925.

WITH reference to your predecessor's despatch dated 6th November, 1924, Dominions No. 526,* respecting certain suggested amendments of the British Nationality and Status of Aliens Act, I have the honour to inform you that I am advised by my Prime Minister that the Commonwealth Government concurs in the proposed amendments to enable

(a) persons resident in Protectorates and mandated territories to become naturalized;

(b) provision to be made for the re-admission of women to British nationality in cases where the married state, though subsisting in law, has to all practical purposes come to an end, and

(c) facilities to be provided for the acquisition of British nationality by children of the third generation born abroad of British parents during the war.

With regard to the proposal that provision be made whereby a British-born woman shall not on marriage lose her British nationality, if and so long as she does not acquire the nationality of her husband under the law of his country, the Commonwealth Government after having given careful consideration to this question, is of the opinion that it would be very undesirable to depart from the important principle embodied in the existing law, viz., that the nationality of a married woman is determined by that of her husband, and, consequently, that the proposal should not be adopted.

SIR,

Downing Street, 23rd June, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Your Excellency's despatch No. 30 of the 23rd of February* on the subject of the law of British nationality, and to request you to inform your Ministers that the views expressed in paragraphs 1-5 of the despatch are noted. It will be observed that these views are met by the wording of Clause 9A (3) in the draft British Nationality and Status of Aliens Bill which provides that Part II of the Imperial Act can only be extended to a territory mandated to a Dominion if the Dominion itself has adopted Part II.

2. It is gathered that Ministers have no observations on the proposal as to children of the third generation.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

(7th December, 1925.)

Canada (Naturalization Law).

MR. SOMERVILLE asked the Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs whether he will approach the Dominion Government of Canada with a view to shortening the period of five years' residence in Canada now necessary, according to the Agreement of 1914 between the Imperial and Canadian Governments, for Canadians who had become naturalized in the United States but had returned to Canada before they could again become British subjects throughout the Empire; and whether he is aware that Canada desires to shorten the five years' period?

THE UNDER-SECRETARY OF STATE FOR COLONIAL AFFAIRS (Mr. Ormsby-Gore): In order to effect any alteration in the conditions on which certificates of Imperial naturalization in Canada or elsewhere may be granted, legislation here would be necessary after consultation with the Governments of all the Dominions, and, in addition, legislation would be necessary in the Parliament of any Dominion which desired to adopt the change. His Majesty's Government are aware that this matter has been discussed in the Canadian House of Commons, but they have received no intimation from the Canadian Government that they desire that the period of five years' residence, which is a necessary qualification for the grant of a certificate of Imperial naturalization, should be shortened.

IMPERIAL ECONOMIC CONFERENCE, 1923.

Summary of Conclusions [Cmd. 1990]: Record of Proceedings [Cmd. 2009.]

Note.—The numbering of the Resolutions follows that employed in [Cmd. 1990] and [Cmd. 2009].

1. OVERSEA SETTLEMENT WITHIN THE EMPIRE.

It was decided to adopt the following Resolution:—

This Imperial Economic Conference approves the report of the Committee appointed to consider questions relating to oversea settlement.* The Conference endorses the recommendations of the Committee, and notes with satisfaction the arrangements as recorded in the report which have been arrived at, or are in contemplation, with a view to improving the facilities for settlement within the Empire.

The Conference takes this opportunity of reaffirming its sense of the importance of the policy of oversea settlement to the well-being of the Empire.

* See pages 136-150 of [Cmd. 2009].

Correspondence relating to Oversea Settlement is printed in Dominions No. 89.

2. CO-OPERATION IN FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE TO IMPERIAL DEVELOPMENT.

It was agreed that the scheme recommended by the Committee on Co-operation in Financial Assistance to Imperial Development be adopted. The Report of the Committee reads as follows:—

The Committee on Financial Co-operation recommends for adoption by the Conference the following scheme, which was submitted to the Committee by the representatives of His Majesty's Government.

The suggestion which the Imperial Government make is that in order to facilitate the anticipation of work which otherwise would not be taken in hand for some years they should give a contribution towards the interest charges on loans raised for capital expenditure of this kind by public-utility undertakings (viz., communications, power, lighting, water, drainage, irrigation, &c.). These undertakings might be under either public or private control or management.

The assistance would be in respect of expenditure on orders placed in this country, and would be applicable only to schemes approved by the Dominion or Central Government concerned and certified by it to be in anticipation of normal expenditure. Payment would be made to the Dominion or Central Government, which would be responsible for payment to the ultimate recipient.

It is suggested that the maximum grant should be three-quarters of the interest charges for a period of five years.

In order to qualify for the Imperial contribution a scheme must be accepted by the Imperial Government within the next three years. The approval on behalf of the Imperial Government would be given after consultation with the Treasury, the Colonial or India Office, and the Board of Trade.

It would be understood that priority will be given to schemes involving the earliest placing of orders.

(See pages 178-188 of Dominions No. 91.)

Secretariat Note.—No correspondence took place in 1925 on the subject of this Resolution.

3. IMPERIAL PREFERENCE.

(i) Tariff Preference.

It was decided to adopt the following Resolution:—

This Imperial Economic Conference, holding that, especially in present circumstances, all possible means should be taken to develop the resources of the Empire and trade between the Empire countries; desires to reaffirm the Resolution on the subject of Imperial Preference passed by the Imperial War Conference of 1917.

Further, as regards Imperial Preference under the United Kingdom Customs Tariff to Empire goods, His Majesty's Government intimated that they intended to submit to Parliament the following proposals:—

1ST MAY. Following for Prime Minister from my Prime Minister:—

Begins: My Government most appreciative of action indicated in Budget statement to increase preferences. Action will have great effect in Australia and will do incalculable good. We would, however, have greatly preferred that increased preferences should operate immediately and would strongly urge reconsideration. If impracticable for your Government to acquiesce in our wishes in regard to all preferences would ask that dried fruits should be specially considered. My Government, relying on your undertaking to give effect to the recommendations of the Economic Conference in so far as they did not involve new duties, has recently taken steps which have led to a complete reorganization of the dried fruit industry which has placed it on a new basis, and should result in increased settlement and great assistance to migration proposals in which our Governments are both interested. Position, however, will be seriously imperilled if the present season's pack(s) do(es) not enjoy contemplated benefits as the present time is the most critical period in the solution of problem of dried fruit industry. 461 tons of new season's fruit now in London, 10,000 tons will arrive within the next two or three weeks, balance will practically all be shipped from Australia within the next month or six weeks. Financial position of industry here makes it essential that realization should take place as promptly as possible after arrival of fruit. If preference deferred until 1st July, market meantime likely to be inactive, fruit must be placed in bond resulting in heavy expense to growers for storage and interest. Knowledge of trade that large quantity of Australian fruit held in bond until 1st July also likely to adversely affect prices.

Would earnestly urge that increased preferences should operate immediately, otherwise very little benefit will accrue to the Commonwealth this year. Ends.

TELEGRAM.

FOLLOWING from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister:—

Begins: I much regret that I have been unable to send earlier reply to your telegram of the 1st May,* urging that the increased preferences to be accorded to Empire produce should become immediately operative or, failing this, that the increased preference on dried fruits should take effect immediately.

My colleagues and I have never weakened in our intention to make the increased preferences discussed at the Imperial Conference effective at the earliest opportunity and this opportunity is afforded by the present Budget.

In normal course the Finance Bill does not become law until August and it was very largely in view of the delay which would otherwise occur in bringing the increased preferences into operation that decided me to expedite consideration of the Finance Bill on this occasion to ensure its becoming law by 1st July. The present position is that under the law governing our financial procedure the increased preferences cannot become effective until the Finance Bill has passed into law. Thus any action such as is suggested could only be taken on an extra-legal basis which, you will appreciate, would present considerable Parliamentary difficulties.

Nevertheless, upon receipt of your telegram the Chancellor of the Exchequer and I immediately caused an analysis to be made of the duties levied upon dried fruits during the past two years in order to ascertain whether the facts relating to these years tended to show that postponement until 1st July would inflict such serious hardship as to justify exceptional action. This investigation showed that bulk of dried fruits imported from Australia did not pass into consumption and pay import duties until after end of June.

The Secretary of State for the Colonies considered this point with Mr. McDougall, who urged that during two years in question owners were holding fruit back during early months in hopes of rise in price. Accordingly, further investigations were made into figures relating to clearances for the years 1920 to 1922: these, however, reflect same feature as those for later years; bulk of Australian dried fruits do not pay duty until after June.

About the time when I received your telegram I received requests similar to yours from other parts of Empire. Unless discrimination were to be made all increased preferences would therefore necessarily be involved.

But the investigation we caused to be made into the statistics to ascertain whether there was case for exceptionally expediting any particular preference increase showed that no such discrimination could with justice be made.

Whilst I regret that in circumstances above explained I cannot see my way to bringing the increase of preferences into effect earlier I sincerely hope as a result of examining past statistics that the comparatively short delay will not entail results feared by Australian fruit growers. Message ends.

[Answered by No. 46.]

REPRESENTATIONS have been made to His Majesty's Government by trade interests here which are affected by item 105F in revised Commonwealth tariff recently introduced that it is feared this item will have prohibitive effect on imports of cotton tweeds and lower priced piece-goods containing wool.

As regards cotton tweeds, which term presumably includes various descriptions of cotton suitings, it is pointed out that price ranges from 1s. 3d. to 2s. per lineal yard 27 inches wide, i.e., per three-fourths of a square yard, and that new duty on goods in question (which have not hitherto been dutiable) reaches in certain cases nearly 100 per cent. ad valorem.

It is further represented that the manufacture of this material is a new trade for which machinery and plant have been specially installed, that it forms the main output of a small number of firms, and that there is no market other than Australia. Although, therefore, this forms a comparatively small item in the whole volume of trade with Australia, its loss would bring exceptional hardship to the firms concerned.

As regards woollen piece-goods it is represented that effect of duty of 1s. per square yard will alone amount to 1s. 6d. per lineal yard of a cloth 54 inches in width which is the prevailing standard, while effect of total new duty will be to double that previously leviable on cloths of 2s. or less per lineal yard, and to increase materially duty leviable on cloths of 3s. and 4s. per lineal yard.

His Majesty's Government appreciate that in both cases new duty on foreign goods is nearly double that on British, but it is represented that the new duty on these classes of British goods is so high that trade will, in fact, be impossible so that preference is ineffective. In these circumstances and especially as it appears that these two classes of goods are treated exceptionally as compared with other classes, His Majesty's Government hope that the matter may receive further consideration. If it is found impossible to make any change His Majesty's Government would be grateful if they could be placed in a position to explain to the trades affected the considerations which have influenced the Commonwealth Government in the matter.—AMERY.

REFERENCE my telegram of 14th instant* as to affect of proposed Commonwealth tariff on cotton tweeds and cheap woollens, similar representations have now been made to His Majesty's Government by Leicester hosiery trade in respect of affect of item 110 (B) (1) on cotton and woollen underwear and bathing costumes. It is stated that these goods have hitherto been dutiable at 40 per cent. ad valorem. Under new proposals cotton goods will pay 1s. each and 30 per cent., which on articles worth 20s. per dozen works out at 18s. per dozen instead of 8s. as hitherto. Woollen goods worth 60s. per dozen will under new proposals pay 48s. per dozen instead of 24s. as hitherto. Interests concerned point out that in this case also the affect of combining a specific with an ad valorem rate results in classes of goods referred to being treated exceptionally in comparison with remaining items of new tariff.—AMERY.

12TH OCTOBER. Your telegram of 14th September.† Increased duties on cotton tweeds and low-priced woollens. Prime Minister advises that prior to introduction of the new duties the Australian weaving industry was inadequately protected from overseas competition especially in regard to the cheaper lines of woollens resulting in about one-third of the looms in Australia being idle. The reason why previous protection was inadequate was that woollen piece-goods made from shoddy and other lines being sold at below cost of production were being imported into Australia to the detriment of Australian weavers. Cotton tweeds were also making great inroads in the Australian woollen industry, hence the necessity for increased protection against such goods. Commonwealth Government after mature consideration decided to impose additional duties.—STONEHAVEN.

12TH OCTOBER. Your telegram of 19th September.* Increased duties on knitted goods Item No. 110 (b). Prime Minister advises that prior to the introduction of the new duties Australian knitting industry languished mainly owing to the unfair overseas competition. Inquiries showed that overseas exporters were selling to Australia at very low prices as well as sacrificing stocks at the end of the season. Number of Australian knitters rendered bankrupt through such unfair trade. As Australia produces the necessary raw materials for this secondary industry Commonwealth Government decided that adequate protection must be provided, hence increased rates.—STONEHAVEN.

[Answered by No. 49.]

PRIVATE and Personal. 24th April. Board of Trade have seen Press report of debate in Assembly, 22nd April, which appears to indicate that Union Government's proposals for maximum and minimum tariff rates involve possibility of maximum tariff rates being charged on certain classes of goods imported from this country while, under commercial conventions to be made with foreign countries, minimum tariff rates would be charged on same classes of goods from those countries. Board of Trade point out that latter rates would apply not only to imports from foreign countries with which conventions made but also to those from other foreign countries to which, under existing Treaties to which Union is party, Union is bound to accord most-favoured-nation treatment, see, for example, Italian Commercial Treaty, 1883.

Press report does not make clear whether policy of Union Government in this respect has been settled, and, in particular, whether consequential effect resulting from right to most-favoured-nation treatment in Union possessed by certain foreign countries had been appreciated. Could you ascertain real position confidentially?

You may find it helpful to know that, when similar point arose in Canada in 1923 in connexion with Franco-Canadian Commercial Convention, Canadian Government made special provision in legislation bringing Convention into force for giving its advantages to United Kingdom as well as to foreign countries entitled to most-favoured-nation treatment.—SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES.

28TH APRIL. Secret. Your telegram of 24th April.* Customs tariff. Difficult for me to obtain information at present as Ministers throughout appear to have taken no one into their confidence. There is no doubt that present intention of the Union Government is to place Great Britain on the same footing as foreign countries as regards imposition of maximum rate(s) under the new tariff, the minimum rates only to be granted as a quid pro quo, and I doubt whether there is any chance of their agreeing to a modification in this policy. Have reason to believe that consequences of entering into agreements for granting minimum tariff rate to foreign countries were only partially realized by the Government when tariff was first drafted. The question has been raised in the House during Budget debate, and Minister of Finance may reply when he introduces Ways and Means motion next Monday. Will wire summary of his statement and keep you informed of any future developments.

I understand that when financial situation began to improve some months ago and it became certain that the financial year would end with a substantial surplus, Minister of Finance decided not to proceed with the introduction of the new tariff, but this course was strongly opposed by Cresswell, whose party are believers in high protection as solution of the unemployment problem. Nationalists saw in the new tariff opportunity for inducing foreign countries to recognize independent status of South Africa to which they attach so much importance, consequently decision of Minister of Finance was overridden.

Nature of tariff is probably largely determined by prepossessions of Board of Trade and Industry, to which was entrusted the task of preparing it. Two of its members are young Dutch South Africans graduated in Economics of the American Universities and currently (?) reported to be much under the influence of the local American Consul and American Trade Commissioner. The other two are Fahey, an Irish Canadian, formerly a Member of the Labour Party, and said to be violently anti-British in sentiments, and H. E. S. Freemantle, whose history will be known to you. I have reason to believe that the latter was reluctant to sign Board's recommendations. There has been a good deal of mystery over Board's Report, on which tariff is based, but Opposition have prevailed on Government to permit of its publication, and copies will be sent to you by next mail.—GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

SIR,

I AM directed by the Minister of Health to inform you that at the Imperial Economic Conference in 1923 the following Resolution was passed:—

"(1) That this Imperial Economic Conference reaffirms the principle that in all Government contracts effective preference be given to goods made and materials produced within the Empire, except where undertakings entered into prior to this Conference preclude such a course or special circumstances render it undesirable or unnecessary.

"(2) That, so far as practicable, efforts be made to ensure that the materials used in carrying out contracts be of Empire production.

"(3) That State, provincial and local government authorities should be encouraged to take note of the foregoing Resolutions."

The Government will be glad if the matter is considered by your Authority with a view to giving effect to this Resolution, subject to the condition that, in view of the present special circumstances with regard to unemployment, no alteration should be made in the policy laid down in Circular 400 of the 15th May, 1923, with regard to the placing of contracts in this country.

I am, &c.,

W. A. ROBINSON,
Secretary.

SIR,

I AM directed by the Minister of Health to inform you that the Government have decided that, as regards all works in respect of which grants are given expressly because of unemployment by the Unemployment Grants Committee or by any Government Department, it shall be a condition of the grant that all contracts for or incidental to the works are to be placed in this country.

This follows a similar condition with regard to schemes in respect of which guarantees are given under the Trade Facilities Act.

The Government also urge that, in view of present conditions, the same principle should be adopted, in the absence of special circumstances, in the case of all contracts in respect of works carried out by Local Authorities, whether or not the expenditure on the works is assisted by grants from the National Exchequer or from the Road Fund.

A copy of this Circular should be handed to the Financial Officer of the Authority.

SIR,

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch No. 47 of the 13th February,* transmitting copies of an extract from the proceedings of the Imperial Economic Conference, 1923, containing the record of discussions, and a resolution adopted, on the subject of Imperial Preference in Public Contracts.

2. My Ministers desire me to state that effective preference to Empire manufactures and productions is given in Section 47 of the Order in Council of 1898, which provides that:—

"No Customs duties levied on any articles produced or manufactured in any part of Her Majesty's Dominions or in any British Protectorate and imported into Southern Rhodesia shall exceed in amount the duties levied on such articles according to the tariff in force in the South African Customs Union at the commencement of this Order, or the tariff contained in the Customs Union Convention concluded between the Colony, the Orange Free State, and Natal, in May, 1898, whichever are the higher."

Under this provision of the law the proportion of British goods imported into Southern Rhodesia averages over 70 per cent. of the total imports.

SIR,

State Government House, Melbourne, 24th April, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch No. 57 of the 13th February last,* respecting a resolution adopted by the Imperial Economic Conference, 1923, on the subject of Imperial Preference in Public Contracts.

2. My Premier informs me that in view of the fact that this country is yet in its infancy and needs development by every means possible, the strong policy of this Government, in common with many which preceded it, is to encourage trade in goods made and materials produced in Victoria. As, however, it is the aim of my Ministers to foster trade within the Empire, Imperial preference is always placed next to Australian preference. In this connexion the following statement of the value of Victorian trade in imports from the United Kingdom during recent years may be of interest:—

1920	13,498,551
1921	27,118,215
1922	18,835,097
1923	24,657,303
1924	22,925,761

The figures given for the year 1924 represent 46 per cent. of the whole of the imports, and if to these be added the trade with other parts of the Empire the total would be increased by several millions of pounds.

SIR,

Government House, Sydney, 8th July, 1925.

WITH reference to your despatch Dominions No. 57 of the 13th February,† and subsequent correspondence, on the subject of Imperial Preference in Public Contracts, I have the honour to append hereto copy of a minute which I have received from my Premier:—

"With reference to Colonial Office despatch, Dominions No. 57 of 13th February last,† enclosing copies of an extract from the Proceedings of the Imperial Economic Conference, 1923, on the subject of Imperial Preference in Public Contracts, the Premier begs leave to inform His Excellency that Ministers note with pleasure that His Majesty's Government adhere to the Resolution. As His Excellency is aware, the New South Wales Government has, for some time past, drawn the attention of the Imperial authorities to the necessity for the grant of preference to Australian products, so far as Imperial contracts are concerned, if the system of migration which is in operation is to become effective. The action of the Imperial Government is, therefore, viewed with satisfaction by Ministers.

* Nos. 52 and 53. † No. 52. ‡ No. 53.

With regard to the desire of the Secretary of State for the Colonies to learn of any action which this Government may have taken, or be able to take, in pursuance of the Resolution, the Premier will be glad if His Excellency will advise Mr. Amery that since the year 1915 the policy of the Government of New South Wales has been to give a 10 per cent. preference to British-made products over the products of other countries outside Australia, the preference being inclusive of Customs duty preference. It has been the experience of Ministers, however, that, notwithstanding the existence of this preference—which in the case of a great number of articles is more than covered by the Customs tariff preference, the latter being high,—the prices of articles manufactured in Great Britain do not compare favourably with those manufactured in other countries. It will, therefore, be seen that if the grant of preference to goods of English manufacture is to become thoroughly effective, it will be necessary for English manufacturers to produce the goods on competitive lines, so that the minimum amount of additional expense may be associated with the expenditure of public money."

BOARD OF TRADE,
Great George Street, S.W. 1.

MINISTRY OF HEALTH,
Whitehall, S.W. 1.

28th October, 1925.

DEAR SIR,

ALL in the country are anxious to do what lies within their power to improve British trade and to help employment.

It will be generally agreed that there is an obvious way in which the men and women of this country can help individually. By buying British goods, they will stimulate production, give employment; and, by enlarging the output of our factories, enable them to produce more cheaply and compete more effectively. By increasing their purchases of British goods in the Home market they will reduce the volume of foreign imports and improve the trade balance, thereby enabling this country to invest more in the development of new markets. By increasing the purchases of Empire goods in the Home market, they will enable the countries of the British Empire to buy more from the Mother Country.

Every man and woman in Britain can help in these ways. Every purchase helps; and if all join in a common effort the stimulus to British trade, Home and Imperial, will be great and immediate. In many quarters people have already shown that they appreciate the need and the possibilities. But there can be no doubt that a national movement to help British trade by buying British goods will be greatly quickened, if a suitable occasion is taken which will focus attention at once upon the need and the opportunity for meeting it.

Such an occasion offers itself as the Christmas season approaches. We, therefore, venture to ask you to consider whether it will be possible to organize in your District a British Shopping Week before Christmas? If a Shopping Week, devoted particularly to a display of British Home and Empire products, could be held in the cities and towns of this country, it would afford to their inhabitants an opportunity of helping the trade and employment of this country which would appeal to the British people, and of which we believe they would be eager to take advantage.

Should you decide to give favourable consideration to our proposal we would venture further to suggest that you should communicate with your local Chamber of Commerce or any similar bodies which may exist in your locality and obtain their co-operation.

Yours faithfully,

P. CUNLIFFE LISTER.
NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN.

The Chairman of the Urban District Council. (Also sent to Town Councils.)

(4) FURTHER STEPS FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF MUTUAL TRADE.

(A) Imperial Co-operation in respect of Commercial Intelligence.

It was decided to adopt the following Resolutions:—

(i) Commercial Diplomatic and Consular Services.

"This Imperial Economic Conference takes note of the offer of His Majesty's Government to place the services of His Majesty's Commercial Diplomatic Officers in Foreign countries at the disposal of the Governments of the Dominions and India and of the Colonies and Protectorates in the same way and to the same extent as the services of His Majesty's Trade Commissioners within the Empire are already at their disposal. It notes that His Majesty's Government propose that as regards countries outside of Europe the Governments should utilize direct the services of Commercial Diplomatic Officers or of senior Consular Officers where no Commercial Diplomatic Officers have been appointed, but that communications which it is proposed to address to Commercial Diplomatic Officers in European countries should be transmitted in the first instance to the Department of Overseas Trade."

"The Conference, recognizing the importance of all possible steps being taken to strengthen the mutual co-operation of the several parts of the Empire in matters of commercial intelligence with a view to the development of Empire trade, welcomes the arrangements proposed by His Majesty's Government."

"It also welcomes the offer of the Governments of the Dominions which have appointed Trade Commissioners in countries overseas to make a similar arrangement for the utilization of those officers by Governments of other parts of the Empire."

"The Conference further recommends that, when two or more Governments of the Empire maintain commercial representatives in the same country, an endeavour should be made to arrange that the offices of these representatives should be in the same building or in close proximity, in order to facilitate all possible co-operation between such representatives in their work on behalf of Empire Trade."

(ii.) Commercial Travellers' Samples.

This Imperial Economic Conference proposes that articles liable to duty imported into any part of the British Empire as samples or specimens by commercial travellers representing manufacturers or traders established in any other part of the British Empire should be temporarily admitted free of duty, subject to such persons complying with the laws and regulations and also the Customs formalities established to assure the re-exportation or deposit in bond of the articles, or payment of the prescribed Customs duties if not re-exported or deposited within the prescribed period. But the foregoing privilege should not extend to articles which owing to their quantity or value, cannot be considered as samples, or which, owing to their nature, could not be identified upon re-exportation.

The marks, stamps, or seals placed upon such samples by the Customs authorities of any part of the Empire at the time of exportation, and the officially tested list of such samples containing a full description thereof, including, in the case of goods liable to ad valorem duty, a statement of their value, should be accepted by the Customs officials of any other part of the Empire as establishing their character as samples and exempting them from inspection, except so far as may be necessary to establish that the samples produced are those enumerated in the list.

The Customs authorities of that part of the Empire into which the samples are brought may, however, affix a supplementary mark to such samples or lists in special cases where they may think this precaution necessary.

In cases where the regulations require the provisional payment of the duties or deposits for such samples on entry a receipt for such payment should be given, and the duties or deposits should be reimbursed at any Custom house at which the samples may be produced with a view to re-exportation.

(iii.) Trade Catalogues.

This Imperial Economic Conference proposes that, where freer admission of catalogues and price-lists is not provided for, single copies of trade catalogues and price-lists of firms having an established place of business within the Empire, sent by post, or with consignments of goods, from any part of the British Empire, to business firms in any other part of the British Empire, should be admitted free of duty, provided that they are the trade catalogues or price-lists of firms or persons having no established place of business in the territory to which they are sent.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 5th January, 1925.)

(No. 326.)

SIR, Governor-General's Office, Melbourne, 20th November, 1924.

WITH reference to your predecessor's despatch dated 24th March, 1924, Dominions No. 135,* relative to the desire of His Majesty's Government to make reciprocal arrangements with the Commonwealth Government for facilities for the admission of commercial travellers' samples, trade catalogues and price lists, in accordance with the Resolutions of the Imperial Economic Conference thereon, I have the honour to inform you that I am advised by my Prime Minister that, with regard to travellers' samples, Section 162 of the Commonwealth Customs Act, 1901-1923, limits the period for which duty may be retained on deposit to six months; otherwise the procedure adopted in Australia in respect to the importation of travellers' samples seems to substantially meet with the desires of His Majesty's Government and is as follows:—

Travellers' samples dutiable under the tariff are admitted on deposit of duty for six months (Section 162, Customs Act).

The importer makes application to deposit in accordance with form 47† (in duplicate) of the Customs Regulations, a copy of which is forwarded herewith.

If the goods are liable to ad valorem duties, documentary evidence of value must be produced.

The goods will be examined by an officer before delivery.

The importer may obtain a triplicate copy of form 47, which will be impressed with a stamp as follows:—

"Travellers' Samples."

"The importer may obtain a refund of this deposit on exportation of the goods at any port in Australia within six months, on identification of the samples, and surrender of this document, and the passing of an export entry."

If, however, any modification of Commonwealth practice is desired, consideration will gladly be given by my Ministers to proposals from His Majesty's Government.

With regard to trade catalogues and price lists my Prime Minister informs me that it is not possible to comply with the Resolution of the Conference respecting the duty thereon without an amendment of the Tariff Act. It is proposed, however, to place the matter before the Tariff Board as required by Statute and to invite Parliament at an early opportunity to make the necessary alteration in the tariff.

I AM directed by the High Commissioner to refer to the Resolutions of the Imperial Economic Conference 1923 regarding the treatment in the Customs of Commercial Travellers' Samples, and to state that our Department of Finance would be glad to learn whether it is proposed that the grant of reciprocal concessions should be extended to all the British Dominions, Colonies and Protectorates, and, in particular, whether the Dominion of Canada desires to conclude an agreement.

Further, I am to bring under your notice the terms of the second paragraph of Resolution II of the Imperial Economic Conference as under, with a view to ascertaining whether the Dominions are prepared to accept any marks, stamps, or seals placed by the Irish Free State Customs authorities on exported samples, and any lists officially attested by those authorities for the purposes indicated.

"The marks, stamps, or seals placed upon such samples by the Customs authorities of any part of the Empire at the time of exportation, and the officially attested list of such samples containing a full description thereof, including, in the case of goods liable to ad valorem duty, a statement of their value, should be accepted by the Customs Officials of any other part of the Empire as establishing their character as samples and exempting them from inspection, except so far as may be necessary to establish that the samples produced are those enumerated in the list."

(i) Shipping.

(a) Imperial Shipping Committee.

It was agreed to adopt the following Resolutions:—

(1)

That this Imperial Economic Conference desires to convey to Sir Halford Mackinder, as Chairman of the Imperial Shipping Committee, and to the members of that Committee, an expression of its appreciation of the very excellent work which they have done during the period of the Committee's existence, both in the interests of the commercial and producing communities, and of British citizens generally.

(2)

That this Imperial Economic Conference is of opinion:—

(1) That the work accomplished by the Imperial Shipping Committee is convincing proof of the wisdom of its establishment, and that it is of the highest importance to the Empire that this work should continue.

(2) That it is therefore desirable to maintain the Committee on its present basis, deriving authority from, and responsible to, the Governments represented in the Imperial Conference.

(See pages 212-213 of Dominions No. 91.)

Secretariat Note.—The following report of the Imperial Shipping Committee was sent to the Dominions during 1925:—

It was agreed that the following Resolution be adopted—

This Imperial Economic Conference having examined the Rules relating to Bills of Lading recommended by the International Conference on Maritime Law held at Brussels in October, 1922, and embodied in the Carriage of Goods by Sea Bill now before the British Parliament, is of opinion that in all essential principles they are based upon the Canadian Water Carriage of Goods Act, 1910, and the Report of the Imperial Shipping Committee, 1921, and, believing that there is a good prospect of international agreement in regard to bills of lading on this basis which would be of benefit to every part of the Empire, considers that these rules can be recommended for adoption by the Governments and Parliaments of the Empire.

[MY LORD,] [SIR,]

Downing Street, 7th September, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to request [Your Excellency] [you] to invite the attention of your Ministers to my predecessor's despatch Dominions No. 102 of the 5th March, 1924,* which enclosed copies of a resolution of the Imperial Economic Conference, 1923, recommending the adoption of the Rules relating to Bills of Lading drawn up at the International Conference on Maritime Law held at Brussels in October, 1922. Effect has been given to these Rules (with my slight modifications) in this country by the Carriage of Goods by Sea Act, 1924, copies of which were enclosed in my predecessor's despatch Dominions No. 435 of the 3rd September, 1924†; similar legislation has also been passed in the Commonwealth of Australia (Sea Carriage of Goods Act No. 22 of 1924).

2. The Rules recommended by the Conference at Brussels in 1922, with minor drafting amendments introduced at a similar Conference in 1923, have been embodied in a draft Convention,‡ copies of which are enclosed, together with the Protocol§ of signature, which has already been signed on behalf of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. It is understood to be the intention of the Belgian Government, provided sufficient signatures are obtained, to invite the contracting parties concerned to ratify the Convention. In this connexion it may be observed that Bills to enable effect to be given to the Rules contained in the draft Convention are now under consideration in India, and also in the United States of America and the Netherlands.

3. His Majesty's Government accordingly hope that with a view to securing uniformity of legislation on this matter not only throughout the Empire, but in all the maritime countries of the world, your Ministers may see their way to give further consideration to the question of introducing legislation to provide for the adoption of these Rules.

[To Irish Free State only: 4. In this connexion I would invite reference to paragraph 4 of your despatch No. 205 of the 19th July, 1923,§ relating to special provisions in regard to the carriage of goods between ports in the Irish Free State and ports in Great Britain and Northern Ireland.]

Income Tax—Empire Shipping Industry.

REFERRING to your letter of the 15th August last 536/24/6202, relative to the above subject, I have to report that an examination of the Report of the Imperial Economic Conference held in London at the close of the year 1923 shows that the Shipping Taxation Committee recommended and the Conference adopted a proposal which may be summarized as follows:—

- (a) All Empire shipping businesses should pay income tax to the taxing authorities of those parts of the Empire where revenue is derived by the business.

* See pages 346-350 of [Cmd. 2009]. † No. 337 in Dominions No. 91.

- (b) The basis for ascertaining the taxable income should be the trading accounts of the business for the operations of each trading year.
(c) The trading accounts of the business should be furnished to the taxing authority of the country in which the owner of the business resides, i.e., the country in which the business is directed and controlled.
(d) The taxing authority to which the accounts are submitted shall determine from the accounts the profit or loss of the business for the year.
(e) Each taxing authority should then levy its income tax on an amount of profit, if any, which bears the same proportion to the total profit as the gross revenue derived by the business in the relevant country bears to the total gross revenue of the business.

The full text of the recommendations is set out on pages 346 to 350 of the Imperial Economic Conference Report.

2. The proposals are, prima facie, reasonable. They involve, however, some uniform system for ascertaining the profits of the business. Opinions differ widely as to what are profits. If, therefore, a uniform system of ascertaining profits is considered essential, special legislation by all adhering countries would be necessary, as existing income tax legislation throughout the Empire provides for different methods of ascertaining taxable income in the different parts of the Empire. The preparation of such legislation would involve more work and expense than the situation warrants.

3. It is suggested that uniform legislation to ascertain profits might not, perhaps, be essential, and that the essence of the recommendations of the Shipping Taxation Committee of the Imperial Economic Conference could be carried into effect under existing legislation in the countries concerned in the following manner, viz.:—

- (i) A shipping business deriving gross revenue from shipping operations in two or more parts of the Empire should submit to the taxation authority in each of those parts of the Empire a certified copy of its balance sheet, and of its profit and loss and trading accounts for each income year, in respect of the whole of its shipping operations in all parts of the world.
(ii) Each separate taxing authority of the Empire concerned should then ascertain from the accounts, what would be the taxable income, if any, under its own law for the whole of the shipping operations mentioned in (i), if its law applied thereto, and should calculate the percentage of that taxable income to the total gross shipping income of the business from all parts of the world.
(iii) The percentage ascertained as in (ii) should then be applied to the gross shipping income derived by the business from the country concerned, to ascertain the part, if any, of that gross income which should be treated as the amount upon which the relevant country should levy its income tax, and the tax should be levied accordingly.

4. The foregoing proposals would allow each taxing authority to work independently of all others, and render unnecessary any discussion between the various authorities in the event of any one or more authorities desiring to amend its income tax legislation as affecting shipping businesses.

5. The proposals would also remove what at present appears to be an undesirable feature of the scheme of the Shipping Taxation Committee of the Imperial Economic Conference, viz., the necessity for the taxing authority which is charged with the ascertaining of the profits, to advise all other taxing authorities of the percentage which the profits bear to gross revenue. This would involve some cost to the authority making the calculations, and at the same time it would not overcome the difficulty pointed out in paragraph (2) of this memorandum as to variations in methods of determining the profits for purposes of taxation.

6. On the other hand, the present movement is inspired by the shipping industry for its own relief, and it is thought that this is full justification for expecting the shipping businesses concerned to undertake the very trifling additional work involved, viz., the preparation of sufficient copies of balance sheets and profit and loss and trading accounts each year, to give effect to the proposals now submitted.

Commissioner of Taxation.

[Answered by No. 87.]

(No. 33.)

SIR,

Downing Street, 19th March, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch No. 29 of the 26th August, 1924,* on the subject of the recommendations of the Imperial Economic Conference, 1923, relating to Shipping Taxation.

2. It appears to the Board of Inland Revenue, to whom a copy of your despatch was sent, that some misconception may have arisen as to the intention of the recommendations of the Imperial Economic Conference, which were referred to in paragraph 3 of my predecessor's despatch Dominions No. 297 of the 30th of June, 1924.† These recommendations are in no way affected by the difference, referred to in the enclosure to your despatch, between the principles governing the taxation of profits in the United Kingdom and the Commonwealth respectively. On the contrary, the recommendations recognize the distinctions of principle, and put forward certain practical proposals designed to facilitate the ascertainment of the non-resident shipowner's assessable profits, with the minimum of trouble and friction, without impairing the jurisdiction of the Government concerned.

3. The question whether these proposals could be adopted in Queensland without amendment of the existing law is, of course, entirely a matter for your Government; but the Board of Inland Revenue observe that section 17(1) of the Queensland Income Tax Act of 1924 provides that the basis for computing the assessable profits of a non-resident shipowner shall be $7\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. of the amount of fares or freight in respect of passengers' goods, etc., shipped in Queensland, "if such income cannot, in the opinion of the Commissioner, be otherwise satisfactorily determined." The Act does not appear to specify on what basis the income might be "otherwise satisfactorily determined," and the question would therefore appear to arise whether a rate computed by the Revenue Authority of the country of residence of the non-resident shipowner or charterer, as representing the rate of profit per cent. on that shipowner's or charterer's total earnings wherever arising can be regarded by the Queensland authorities as a satisfactory measure of the rate of profit per cent. on that portion of the total earnings which arise in Queensland.

4. His Majesty's Government hope that, in the light of these observations, the Queensland Government will feel able to give further consideration to the recommendations of the Imperial Economic Conference on this subject which, as explained above, were particularly directed to an improvement in administrative machinery. (See paragraphs 13-14 of the report of the Shipping Taxation Committee of the Conference on page 349 of the enclosure to my predecessor's despatch referred to above.)

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Your Excellency's despatch No. 3 of the 13th January† regarding the recommendations of the Imperial Economic Conference, 1923, on the subject of Shipping Taxation, and to transmit to you, to be laid before your Ministers, a copy of a memorandum prepared by the Board of Inland Revenue on the question.

2. It is noted that the letter from the Federal Commissioner of Taxation, enclosed in your despatch under acknowledgment, whilst describing the proposals made by the Imperial Economic Conference as prima facie reasonable, comments later on with regard to certain details of those proposals and makes alternative suggestions. It would, however, appear from the enclosed memorandum that Mr. Ewing's alternative scheme would not overcome the difficulties which the scheme recommended by the Conference is designed to meet.

3. In the circumstances His Majesty's Government greatly hope that on reconsideration your Ministers may find themselves able to accept the Conference proposals, which have already been endorsed by the Government of New Zealand and the Government of India.

Enclosure in No. 83.

INCOME TAX.

PROFITS OF BRITISH SHIPOWNERS WITHIN THE EMPIRE.

Note by the Board of Inland Revenue on a Report of the 27th November, 1924, by the Commissioner of Taxation of the Commonwealth of Australia.

A REFERENCE to the Report of the Shipping Taxation Committee of the Imperial Economic Conference (page 346 of the Proceedings of the Conference) shows that the problem with which they were confronted arose out of the fact that the nature of the shipowner's trade "is such that he is faced with peculiarly difficult questions in any attempt to segregate profits or losses arising in each country in which he trades." (Paragraph 8.)

In point of fact it is usually a practical impossibility for a shipowner to prove with any exactitude the annual profits which he makes in any particular place in which he may carry on his business.

2. The difficulty had been avoided in various parts of the Empire by the adoption of an arbitrary basis of assessment—statutory percentage of freights, fares, etc.

The Committee, having in paragraph 13 of their Report pointed out the disadvantages of the use of an arbitrary basis of assessment, proceeded to suggest "practical administrative measures" for dealing with the problem.

3. It is evident that the Committee clearly realized that there was not a uniform system for ascertaining profits throughout the Empire (see paragraph 8 of their Report), and that they accordingly proposed that the certificate mentioned in paragraph 14 (b) (1) should show "the ratio of the profits of any accounting period as computed according to the Income Tax law of the last-named country," i.e., the country in which the shipowner resides. This is also made clear by the words which then follow in brackets, making an exception in regard to one item of expenditure, namely, interest. This exception is without doubt due to the fact that interest is frequently a very important item in the shipowner's accounts, and where, for example, as in this country, annual interest is not allowable as a deduction in the computation of liability to income tax, the certificate given would often be quite inappropriate for use in a Dominion where interest is allowable as a deduction, unless provision was made for the necessary adjustment in respect of the interest. On the other hand, while the taxing authority for the country of residence would be able to deal with a clearly-marked item like interest, it would be impracticable for that authority to compute the profits in all respects according to the laws of each taxing authority in the Empire within whose jurisdiction the shipowner might go.

4. As is pointed out above, the primary difficulty is the practical impossibility of ascertaining with exactitude the profits which the shipowner makes in the various places where he trades. The most that can be done in this connexion is to ensure a result which will be reasonably accurate, and this result would seem to be produced by the proposals put forward by the Committee and adopted by the Imperial Economic Conference.

5. With regard to the point which the Commissioner makes in paragraph 5 of his Report, as to the trouble and cost given to the taxing authority furnishing the certificate to the shipowner, the bulk of these certificates will have to be furnished by the officers of this Board and with regard to these, no particular difficulty is expected. The percentage of profit can be readily calculated from the computations already made for purposes of income tax in this country.

6. The alternative proposal which the Commissioner puts forward would appear to leave the shipowner in a position which would be no better, if not in some respects worse, than at present. It seems difficult to justify a proposal which would involve a world-wide shipping business in furnishing full accounts of the whole of its operations to the taxing authority of every part of the Empire in which its ships may call. But it seems even more important to observe that this would not be an end of the matter so far as the shipowner is concerned. He would have to agree with each taxing authority a computation of the total profits of his business, in accordance with the laws and ordinances of each place, in order to ascertain the ratio which is to be applied to the gross shipping income derived from each country. In the case of companies doing a world-wide trade, this would certainly be regarded as a very heavy burden. It was, indeed, as much to avoid burdens of this kind as to avoid the unfairness of assessments upon an arbitrary basis, that the matter was brought by the Imperial Shipping Committee to the notice of the Governments of the Empire, and it was to both of these points that the recommendations of the Imperial Economic Conference were directed.

7. It is clear, therefore, that the scheme suggested by the Commissioner is not one which would commend itself to the taxpayers concerned.

8. The Commissioner's objection to the scheme recommended by the Imperial Economic Conference seems to rest primarily on the fact that there is no uniform system in the Empire for ascertaining assessable profits generally; he evidently fears that the scheme would not provide a sufficiently accurate measure of the taxable profits in the countries concerned. But it may be pointed out that no scheme of this kind can produce more than an approximate result and that the scheme suggested by the Commissioner himself would not appear to secure a result materially more accurate than that which is obtained, with the minimum of trouble and friction, under the scheme of the Imperial Economic Conference.

9. For the foregoing reasons the scheme put forward by the Commissioner appears to be unacceptable as an alternative to the scheme recommended by the Imperial Economic Conference.

SIR,

Government House, Brisbane, 4th July, 1925.

WITH reference to your despatch No. 33 of the 19th March, 1925,* and to previous correspondence relating to Shipping Taxation, I have the honour to forward herewith a copy of a letter I have received from the Honourable the Premier, dated the 10th June, embodying the text of a further report from the Queensland Commissioner of Taxes. In a later communication, dated the 2nd instant, the Queensland Government endorses the views of the Commissioner.

2. I have not sent a copy of this despatch to His Excellency the Governor-General.

I have, &c.,

MATTHEW NATHAN,

Governor.

Enclosure in No. 87.

Premier's Department, Brisbane,

10th June, 1925.

SIR,

ADVERTING to the despatch dated the 19th March last, which Your Excellency received from the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies, respecting Shipping Taxation, I have the honour to append hereto the text of a further report which has been received from the Queensland Commissioner of Taxes in regard thereto:—

"It still appears to me that the object of the proposal is that the tax-paying Shipping Company will eventually obtain a certificate from this State with regard to taxation paid here on the basis suggested, with the final object of obtaining the relief from double taxation in the Mother Country as indicated in the third paragraph of my communication of the 21st August, as above referred to.

The question as to whether the relative provision—Section 17 of the Income Tax Act, 1924—should be amended to conform with this proposal, is, of course, one for the Government of this State. As, however, it can scarcely be claimed that an all-round rate of 7½ per cent. on gross earnings is an excessive profit on which to base taxation for the purposes of this State, and, as it would not be equitable to ask this State to forgo a proportionate part of such income because, for instance, there were industrial upheavals in other Dominions or the Mother Country adversely affecting the total profits of the ship owner concerned, I am unable to recommend that the law should be amended in accordance with the suggestion as per the report of the Proceedings of the Imperial Economic Conference of 1923, relating to shipping communications and other shipping questions.

In conclusion, I may say that such a ratio of profits computed by the Revenue Authority of the country of residence of the non-resident ship owner could not be regarded generally as an otherwise satisfactory determination of profits as provided for in Section 17, and my experience has been that ship owners largely have refused to submit for the consideration of this Dominion's Taxing Authorities their world-wide Profit and Loss Accounts and Balance Sheets for the determination of profits on the basis indicated in Section 17 above referred to, as an alternative to which is the arbitrary basis of 7½ per cent."

I have, &c.,

W. N. GILLIES,

Premier.

Brisbane.

It was decided to adopt the following Resolutions:—

(1) That the British Government should circulate to the Dominions and India a statement showing the present anticipated operational performances of rigid airships and in the future should circulate regularly up-to-date information of the progress of the Burney airship proposals in order that consideration of Empire participation in these or future airship proposals might be facilitated.

(2) That the British Government should prepare a draft procedure designed on a reciprocal basis to secure more rapid and more extensive interchange of information in regard to civil aeronautics and should submit this for the consideration of the other Governments of the Empire with a view to general adoption.

(3) That having regard to post-war developments, any British overseas countries which have no up-to-date experience of air photography and contemplate the use of air survey, would be well advised, whenever possible to consult other Empire Governments having such experience before accepting estimates or schemes providing for its use.

SIR,

Government House, Ottawa, 21st January, 1925.

WITH reference to your despatch Dominions No. 592 of the 23rd December last,‡ regarding the suggested procedure for the exchange of information relating to civil aeronautics, I have the honour to point out that in the enclosure to my despatch No. 413 of the 30th September§ the Intelligence Officer, Royal Canadian Air Force, was named as Liaison Officer for civil aeronautics.

In regard to the proposal to begin the exchange of news letters immediately, I would refer to the second paragraph of the letter of the Acting Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs, where the opinion was stated that there was not sufficient information to justify the sending of a monthly letter and that the civil section of the quarterly liaison letter now sent to the other Dominions would be amplified and used for this purpose. This is now forwarded to the Air Staffs of all the self-governing Dominions and India, and an extra copy of the civil section will in future be sent direct to the officers named in your despatch and to others who may be nominated later as Liaison Officers for this purpose.

MINUTE No. 94.

MINISTERS have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of His Excellency the Governor-General's Minute No. 59/90 of the 16th instant, transmitting despatch No. 592, dated 23rd December, 1924, from the Secretary of State for the Colonies regarding the nomination of liaison officers for Canada, India and Great Britain in connexion with the scheme for the exchange of information relating to civil aeronautics.

Ministers have the honour to inform His Excellency that they concur in the proposals set forth in the second and third paragraphs of the despatch referred to above in regard to the exchange of "News Letters" between liaison officers and the immediate notification of "Accident" information due to dangerous defects in aircraft, and have arranged to give effect to the procedure suggested.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 23rd March, 1925.)

(No. 23.)

SIR, Governor-General's Office, Melbourne, 5th February, 1925.
WITH reference to Lord Arnold's despatch dated 15th August, 1924, Dominions No. 385,† relative to the Resolutions of the Imperial Economic Conference on the subject of air communications, I have the honour to inform you that I am advised by my Prime Minister that the Commonwealth Government considers that the adoption of the recommendations of the Conference held at the British Air Ministry on 9th February, 1924, will ensure a more satisfactory interchange of aeronautical information as between the International Commission for Air Navigation, the British Air Ministry and the Dominions than is at present the case. The proposals of the Conference are, therefore, concurred in.

* No. 349 in Dominions No. 91. † No. 344 in Dominions No. 91.

My Prime Minister further states that the Commonwealth civil aviation authorities already forward to the Air Ministry and International Commission for Air Navigation much of the information referred to in the draft procedure and appendices forwarded with the despatch under reference, e.g.:—

- (1) Statistical tables relating to the operations of regular air services are forwarded each month.
- (2) General reports on civil aviation in Australia as issued.
- (3) News letters on subjects of general interest at frequent intervals.
- (4) Statistical tables of licences and certificates issued and withdrawn, &c., monthly.
- (5) Amendments and additions to the registers of civil air-craft, pilots, and ground engineers, monthly.
- (6) Notices to airmen, relative to aerodromes and emergency landing grounds as issued.

Action is being taken for the collation and regular transmission of additional information in accordance with the forms annexed to the draft procedure, and of such other particulars relating to the progress of civil aviation in Australia as should be of interest to the Air Ministry and other British Dominions.

This reply has been delayed in the anticipation that it would be possible to forward therewith the particulars requested in the draft Air Ministry questionnaire, but, owing to the wide scope of the questions included therein, and pressure of work on more urgent matters, the document is not yet complete. It will be forwarded to the Air Ministry, however, at an early date.

relating to civil aeronautics within the Empire, I have the honour, at the instance of my Prime Minister, to inform you that the Controller of Civil Aviation, Department of Defence, Melbourne, has been nominated to act as Liaison Officer in Australia for the purposes of the scheme.

With regard to paragraph 3 of your despatch, the Commonwealth Government concurs in the suggestion of the Government of India that information concerning dangerous defects in aircraft which may be disclosed by accidents or otherwise should be exchanged between the Liaison Officers in a special news letter to be written immediately they come to notice. (iii) Cables and Wireless.

It was agreed that the following Resolutions be adopted:—

(a) That this Imperial Economic Conference affirms the importance of establishing as quickly as possible an efficient Imperial Service of Wireless Communication, and is of opinion that the several Governments of the Empire should take immediate action to remove any difficulties which are now delaying the accomplishment of this, while providing adequate safeguards against the subordination of public to private interests.

(b) That representatives of the Dominions and India should be associated in the work of the Imperial Communications Committee when questions of interest to them are under consideration.

(c) That in view of the fact that the Dominions interested in the Pacific cable have for a long time pressed for the provision of a State-owned connecting link across the Atlantic, all possible support should be given by the Governments of the Empire to the State-owned Atlantic cable route which has now been provided.

(d) That in any concessions given in the British Empire to private enterprise in respect of cable or wireless services (including broadcasting stations), preference should be accorded to British Companies of any part of the Empire.

(P.W. 203/25.)

TELEGRAM FROM VICEROY, DEPARTMENT OF INDUSTRIES AND LABOUR, DELHI, to SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA, DATED 16TH JANUARY, 1925.

40 PT. Your telegram dated 1st May, 1924, No. 1305, respecting Empire Wireless, and in continuation of our reply thereto No. 56 P.T. of 23, dated 8th May, 1924. Following situation has now arisen in India:—

First. No private enterprise in India is willing to undertake the erection and operation of super-station, since Indian-Radio-Telegraph Company, which were the only applicants for concession to erect and operate super-station in accordance with our draft agreement of 1st February, 1924, have now withdrawn application.

Second. While not finally abandoning the idea of super-station as ultimate solution of Indian requirements, we have been compelled to conclusion that the proposal must remain in abeyance for the present.

Third. Indian Radio-Telegraph Company has acquired full right to all Marconi and associated patents in India, and has now applied for licence to erect and operate beam station in India for communication with the United Kingdom in the first instance.

Fourth. In order that possibility of the beam system for India may be fully tried out, we propose to grant such licence, subject to agreement which provides for the establishment of service within nine months from date on which the Government approve the detailed plan of Indian stations, and requires service capable of 30,000 paid words of five letters each way every twenty-four hours. Agreement grants initial licence for ten years, to be renewed for subsequent periods of five years, provided that the service is satisfactory to the Government. Government will retain power to purchase station and service at expiration of initial ten years and each subsequent period of five years. Otherwise, agreement follows material lines of our original draft agreement of 1st February, 1924.

2. Before finally entering into agreement we desire assurance that the Imperial Government will arrange for the erection of suitable reciprocating station in the United Kingdom, as indicated in your telegram dated 1st May, 1924. Please reply very urgently, in order to enable us to negotiate finally with the Company.

TELEGRAM FROM SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA, TO VICEROY, INDUSTRIES
DEPARTMENT, DATED 24TH JANUARY, 1925.

236. Your telegram 16th January 40 P.T. Imperial Wireless. Postmaster-General confirms undertaking as to beam stations communicated in my predecessor's telegram 1st May last. Survey already made for site for beam station here to communicate with Indian station, and order for erection will be given to Marconi Company immediately upon intimation that Indian station has been definitely arranged for. English station is to be capable of daily average each way of 72,000 words of five letters, representing 56,000 paid words. See clauses 6 and 17 of agreement with Marconi Company 30th July last, sent to you with my P.W. Secretary's letter 26th August.

17TH MARCH. With reference to previous correspondence regarding the question of a high-power wireless telegraphy station in the Pacific, my Government desires to bring to the notice of His Majesty's Government special advantage(s) of erection of such station in New Zealand at site of Arapuni electric power station in North Island. Arapuni is over 50 miles from the nearest coast line and the country is quite suitable for extensive antennae system. Ample power is available at Arapuni for station of 4,000 to 5,000 kilowatts or higher if required. Location of station at the site of the source of power would obviate the risk of breakdown in transmission line.—FERGUSON.

SIR,

Government House, Wellington, 28th January, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to inform you that your predecessor's despatch Confidential (2) of the 25th August, 1924,* on the subject of Wireless Telegraphy System, was duly referred to my Ministers, who have given careful consideration to the Report of the Wireless Sub-Committee which accompanied it.

2. In replying to the despatch my Prime Minister informs me that no understanding has been reached with the Admiralty relative to the modernization of the wireless stations at Awanui and Apia, and that it is not considered desirable to modernize the Awanui station at its present site.

3. When a definite policy is arrived at in connexion with the establishment of a high-power wireless transmitting station, the question of modernizing Awanui and Apia can be more properly dealt with. It is proposed that such a high-power station would incorporate the work performed by the Awanui station, and the latter station would then be abolished. The type of transmitter to be employed at the proposed high-power station for the transmission of traffic to Apia and other Island stations will determine the nature of the plant required at Apia.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

(7th April, 1925.)

Imperial Wireless.

MR. T. THOMSON asked the Postmaster-General what stage has been reached in the promotion of his scheme to provide an efficient Imperial wireless service; and when it will be in operation?

SIR W. MITCHELL-THOMSON: The answer to this question is rather long, but, perhaps, in view of the importance of the matter, and of previous questions that have been asked on the subject, the House will bear with me while I read it.

The high-power station which is in course of erection at Rugby is expected to be completed about November next.

Sites for the beam stations for communication with Canada and South Africa have been placed at the disposal of the Marconi Company, and the stations are due to be completed early in October. Sites for the beam stations for communication with India and Australia have been submitted to the Company for approval, and those stations should be completed within nine months of the actual provision of the sites.

The corresponding beam stations in the Dominions are in various stages of progress. The latest reports indicate that the South African and Canadian stations will be completed about the same time as the corresponding stations here. The stations in India and Australia will probably not be ready before the end of this year, or the early part of next year.

The Dominions have been invited to nominate representatives to a permanent committee under the chairmanship of the Assistant Postmaster-General, to consider practical details of working the services, including such matters as routing of messages and tariffs.

YOUR telegram 23rd May.* Sites for transmitting and receiving stations for wireless communication with Australia on beam system have been selected and their suitability from technical point of view has been concurred in by Marconi Company. Arrangements for purchase of sites nearly completed and provided no unforeseen difficulties arise it is hoped to hand over sites to Company during June in which case contractors must complete stations by March next.—AMERY.

Downing Street, 24th July, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [you,] for the information of your Ministers, copies of a Report by a special Sub-Committee of the Imperial Communications Committee on the Strategical Value of Short Wave and Beam Wireless Telegraph Stations.

2. As will be seen from the first and second paragraphs, the Report reviews the present situation in the light of recent technical developments and amends to some extent the opinions expressed in a former Report (which was enclosed in my predecessor's Secret despatch of the 22nd of October*) and in my predecessor's Confidential telegram of the 1st of May, 1924.† [To Newfoundland only: addressed to the Governors-General of Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, New Zealand, and the Union of South Africa, a copy of which is enclosed.]

REPORT OF SUB-COMMITTEE ON THE STRATEGICAL VALUE OF SHORT WAVE AND BEAM WIRELESS TELEGRAPH STATIONS.

IN a despatch dated 22nd October, 1924,* addressed to the Governors-General of Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, New Zealand, Union of South Africa, and to the Governor of Newfoundland, the Secretary of State for the Colonies conveyed to the Dominion Governments the views of the Imperial Communications Committee (I.C.C. paper No. 790) concerning the strategical importance of beam stations for Imperial Communications. Expressions of opinion on this subject were also contained in the Secretary of State's Confidential telegram dated 1st May, 1924.†

The Imperial Communications Committee have recently received from the Wireless Telegraph Board a memorandum reviewing the present situation with regard to the beam system and amending to some extent the opinion expressed in the despatch and telegram referred to above, on the possible strategical applications of this system. These amendments are based on the technical developments which have taken place during the preceding twelve months.

* No. 395 in Dominions No. 91. † No. 364 in Dominions No. 91.

The memorandum, which deals with broadcasting (i.e., "All-round" as opposed to "Directional" transmission), Hours of Working and Deliberate Jamming, may be summarized as follows:—

Broadcasting.

It is considered that insufficient data are available at present to attempt any forecast as to the ranges which would be obtained with broadcasting short waves. On the other hand, the use of short waves for broadcasting is possibly unnecessary and undesirable, since the medium-power stations already in existence, or projected, together with the high-power stations at Rugby and that projected at Singapore cover all essential areas.

Hours of Working.

Apart from broadcasting, the question of hours of working relates only to the point to point service, and the situation is altered essentially by the success which has attended the use of the still shorter waves for daylight working.

The Marconi Company anticipate that the use of reflectors and an optimum wavelength (a) according to the daylight—dark condition of the route will give the signal-static ratio, (b) which will guarantee a 24-hour service.* Recent tests by the Company have shown that at certain times of the year there are prospects of obtaining 24-hour communication, but it has yet to be established that this can be maintained throughout the year. The experience of amateurs indicates that on certain wavelengths there are pronounced seasonal variations in communication. It remains to be seen whether these can be overcome by the use of selected wavelengths.

Subject to the above being established the strategical value of the beam and short wave stations for point to point communication will be equal, or possibly superior, to that of the super long wave stations, apart from the question of immunity from interference, which is dealt with below.

Deliberate Jamming.

With regard to the relative immunity from intentional interference of long waves using the most selective and directional receiving apparatus, and short waves using selective receiving gear, but depending on the reflector for directional effects, it is considered that the former, i.e., the long waves, enjoy immunity considerably in excess of short waves. It is pointed out, however, that the employment by an enemy of long wave jamming stations will not necessarily involve interference with his own communications, since by suitably siting the receiving stations such interference can be avoided. Reflector reception is not the only means by which directional reception of short waves can be achieved, and the problem is therefore reduced to determining whether the reception of short waves can be rendered as directionally selective as that of long waves. The latter certainly presents less difficulty than the former, but it would be unwise to assume that equality in this connexion cannot be ultimately achieved.

General Remarks.

The Services fully appreciate the possibilities of the short wave and beam systems, and the great importance of ascertaining as soon as possible whether these systems can be considered as applicable for strategical purposes. With this in view experiments are now in progress and it is hoped that as a result of these experiments, and the data which should be available when the beam stations now in course of erection commence working, a more definite opinion as to the strategical value of the system can be given at the end of the present year. It is pointed out, however, that until the beam stations have been operating for twelve months it is not possible to determine what seasonal variations will occur and whether these can be overcome.

Conclusion.

Broadcasting.—The strategical value of short wave and beam stations is not necessarily determined by their utility or otherwise for broadcasting purposes.*

* Note.—(a) Optimum wavelength is that wavelength which gives the best results at the time during which communication is taking place.

(b) Signal-static ratio is the ratio of the strength of the received signals to that of the interference caused by atmospherics.

Point to point.—When it is proved that:—

- (1) the range and hours of working of the beam stations are comparable with those of long wave stations.
- (2) methods of directional reception of equal selectivity to those now employed with long waves can be obtained, beam and short wave stations may then be regarded as of equal value strategically with long wave super stations for communication between Great Britain and the various parts of the Empire.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Extract from a Speech by the Postmaster-General, 20th July, 1925.

ONE more word on the very important subject of Imperial wireless communications. Until about a year ago it was the policy both of the Imperial Government and of the Dominion Governments to provide Imperial wireless communication by means of high-power stations. It was in accordance with this policy that Rugby station was started, and is now practically complete. I daresay Members have seen the twelve masts from the railway. There are twelve masts, each 820 feet high. So far as one can say, when it is finished it will, under suitable conditions, be able to transmit messages practically to any part of the globe. The installation of plant is actually going on now, and I think the station ought to be ready for trials in November. After that arrangement had been made, and after certain of the Dominions had started work on their high-power stations, the Marconi Company produced a short-wave directional system of transmission, commonly called the beam system, which, they claimed, would provide adequate service for a limited number of hours with a much smaller capital expenditure. His Majesty's Government and the Governments of Australia, Canada, India and South Africa decided to give the beam system a trial, and an agreement was accordingly made with the Marconi Company in July of last year for the erection of beam stations in this country for communication with corresponding stations in the Dominions.

The Company, however, subsequently came to the conclusion that for technical reasons the original scheme of concentrating all the four sending stations on one site and the four receiving stations on the other site was impracticable, and, accordingly, different arrangements were made, and another agreement was entered into providing for the erection of two groups of two stations each, one group in the south-west of England, at Bodmin and at Bridgwater, for communication with Canada and South Africa, and the other group on the East Coast for communication with India and Australia. There were considerable difficulties, technical and other, in finding suitable sites. But eventually sites were found at Bodmin and Bridgwater. They were handed over to the Company on the 6th April, and the Company tell me that considerable progress has been made in connexion with the erection of the masts and buildings at Bodmin, and that work is proceeding on the excavations of the foundations for the masts at Bridgwater. The stations are due to be completed, under the terms of the contract, by the 6th October. The sites for the sending and receiving stations for India and Australia also presented considerable technical difficulties, but they have been finally settled at Grimsby and Skegness. The necessary legal formalities are just being completed for their transfer, and I have actually placed the order for the stations with the Marconi Company in anticipation of the completion of the legal formalities. Under this contract the stations are to be completed within nine months.

It may interest the Committee to know what is happening to the corresponding stations in the Dominions. They are in various stages of progress. The masts and buildings of the beam station in Canada, which is near Montreal, have been completed, and that station is expected to be ready about the same time as the corresponding station in this country. The beam station in South Africa, situated near Cape Town, is expected to be ready for trials about the end of September. The station in Australia, which will be situated near Melbourne, is due to be completed in January next. The beam station in India will probably not be ready before the middle of next year at soonest. As I said to the House some little time ago, a permanent working committee (including representatives of the Dominions) under the Chairmanship of my Noble Friend, Lord Wolmer, has been appointed to advise on the practical question of routing traffic, rates, tariffs, and the rest. That Committee is at work now, and is, I am told by my Noble Friend, progressing satisfactorily.

[Answered by No. 118.]

15TH DECEMBER. Following for Prime Minister from my Prime Minister:—

Begins: I desire again to bring to your notice the position in connexion with (?) establishment at an early date of wireless communications between Great Britain and Australia.

As you are aware Mr. Mason Allard, one of the Government directors of Amalgamated Wireless, Limited, proceeded to Great Britain in order to complete arrangements for inauguration of the service and particularly to stress the importance of Australian control of terminal station in Great Britain. Reports from him, I regret to say, point to the conclusion that your postal department is not in favour of Australian control and that our repeated request that Australian service should be under our own administration may not be acceded to.

A great deal of time has elapsed since the Commonwealth Government first went into the matter of wireless communications and took action with a view to early establishment of a reciprocal service. This country by reason of its geographical position cannot afford to risk economic and other consequences which must ensue from neglect to provide the most up-to-date means of communication. My Government regards the matter in the most serious light, and is anxious to press on in every way possible with completion of a wireless service to Great Britain. This we believe can (?)most (?) efficiently be done by Australia controlling her own reciprocal station in Great Britain, and I urge most strongly that your Government should accede to our request. I will not attempt again to set out in detail the arguments for adoption of the course of action which I now advocate. The views of my Government have been fully stated in previous communications. Our request seems to be a perfectly reasonable and equitable one inasmuch as what we ask has already been granted to another Dominion, and wireless communication between Great Britain and foreign countries is conducted on principles similar to those which we desire shall be applied in the case of Australia. I am loath to stress this point but it certainly would seem that in a matter so vital to every phase of national and economic life a large and important part of the British Empire is entitled to be placed in at least as good a position as a foreign country.

The objection has been raised that the granting of this concession to Australia would possibly be taken as a precedent and pave the way to similar concessions to a number of independent companies, thus making it impossible to secure the co-ordination essential in British Wireless Services. I think, however, that large outlying portions of the British Empire are entitled from the nature of the case to differential treatment, and an independent company could not cite Australia as a precedent to obtain equal advantages.

* No. 114.

I regard it as essential that the management and technical control of stations at both ends should be in the same hands if the maximum efficiency is to be attained.

My Government would gladly assist in ensuring that your postal department is accorded all information and facilities necessary to achieve a proper degree of co-ordination between the services with terminals in Great Britain. A due meed of co-operation has always been and will continue to be extended by this Government in matters wherein Great Britain and Australia are mutually interested, and in a matter of such vital national importance as wireless it is inconceivable that obstacles in the way of development of the best possible inter-Empire service could not be removed. May I then ask that your Government take this matter up in the spirit in which we put it forward, and endeavour to overcome the difficulties which are apparently presenting themselves to the granting of Australian control over her wireless terminal(s) in your country. S. M. BRUCE. Ends.

FOLLOWING from Prime Minister for your Prime Minister:—

Begins: Your telegram of 15th December.‡ Imperial Government cordially reciprocates desire of Commonwealth Government for early establishment of up-to-date wireless service between Great Britain and Australia, and is confident that the measures which they have taken will achieve that object. I would remind you that British Government policy of retaining Imperial Wireless Stations in Great Britain in the hands of the State, acting through the Post Office, was communicated to your Government by telegram dated 10th April, 1924,§ and in your telegram of 12th July, 1924,|| you asked that the British station for communication with Australia should be proceeded with immediately. The policy then adopted was endorsed by present Government and has not since been modified. Both our Governments have proceeded on this basis and have entered into contracts for the stations required for Australian Service.

decision of the British or Dominion Government concerned. We understand Commonwealth Government have decided in favour of concentrating all services in hands of Australian Wireless Company. British Government have decided upon similar concentration in hands of the Post Office. We see considerable objection to granting licence to each Dominion to operate a service in Great Britain, and we think your Government would probably take the same view of a proposal that the British Post Office or a British Company should operate the Australian terminal of the Anglo-Australian wireless service. I presume you have seen letter which I addressed to representative of Australian Wireless Company in which reasons for British Government's policy are explained more fully.

You have been misinformed in stating that the British Government has adopted a different policy as regards one Dominion. Policy explained above applies to wireless services with all Dominions and Colonies. As regards some foreign countries, licences are granted under appropriate conditions to British Companies to conduct wireless services with foreign countries, but no foreign wireless company has been or would be licensed.

While I regret that there should be a difference of view between your Government and mine on this question, I feel sure that it will not be allowed to prejudice the harmonious and efficient operation of the Anglo-Australian Service, as soon as the completion of our respective stations enables us to open it. Ends.

[MY LORD,] [SIR,]

Downing Street, 23rd December, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to request [Your Excellency] [you] to inform your Ministers that the Post Office high-power wireless station at Rugby is now being used experimentally, and is expected to be ready for commercial working early in the New Year. It is anticipated that the station will have a world-wide range, and its opening will thus provide a means of broadcasting messages by wireless telegraphy for simultaneous reception throughout the world. His Majesty's Government propose that the station should be used for the transmission of the British official news bulletins, which are at present broadcast from the Leafeld station; and the increase thus effected in the range of this service will, it is hoped, be attended with good results.

2. The inadequacy of the existing wireless facilities for the distribution of British news and commercial intelligence in distant parts of the world has frequently been criticized by travellers, and there have been complaints that the lack of a station in this country sufficiently powerful for the conduct of such a service has left a clear field for the distribution of news and commercial intelligence from French, German and American high-power stations. His Majesty's Government trust that the establishment of the Rugby station will remove the ground for complaint in this respect.

3. In particular, the opening of the Rugby station will afford an opportunity of extending to world-wide range a service, which has for some time past been conducted from the Post Office station at Northolt, for the distribution to European countries of messages containing commercial information, exchange quotations, and cotton, metal and other market prices. These messages are despatched by certain agencies, including Reuters; and, with the exception of a few news messages in clear language, they are transmitted in a special code, copies of which are deposited with the Post Office. The Companies concerned derive their revenue from the subscriptions paid by the recipients. In some cases the messages are picked up by the Companies' agents themselves; in others they are received by public wireless telegraph stations and transferred to the Companies' agents, by whom they are either decoded and distributed by telephone or telegraph, or, alternatively, re-transmitted by wireless to subscribers. The subscribers are provided with copies of the special code, which is changed periodically.

* No. 120. † No. 133.

4. I am informed that this service has been attended with a considerable measure of success, and that representations have been received in favour of the provision of a similar service from Rugby. It is obviously of advantage that British prices and commercial information should be distributed throughout the world from Rugby, rather than that foreign prices and information should be received from high-power stations in other countries, which are developing services of the kind. His Majesty's Government have decided, therefore, to provide facilities for such a service at Rugby for any responsible agency which desires them and is prepared to observe the conditions prescribed. These conditions will be in accordance with Article LXVII ter, of the International Telegraph Regulations adopted at the recent Conference of the Telegraph Union at Paris, the main provisions of which may be summarized as follows:—

- (a) The service will be limited to messages, in code or in clear language, containing news or information of a political, commercial or public character, and will not be used for private or personal telegrams.
- (b) The service will be open to any responsible agency which complies with the conditions prescribed by the Administrations concerned.
- (c) The sending Administration will obtain from the senders and communicate to each receiving Administration the addresses of the proposed recipients in its territory.
- (d) The receiving Administration will be free to decide whether or not the addressees proposed by the sender shall receive the messages, and, if so, under what conditions.
- (e) Each receiving Administration will take appropriate measures to ensure as far as possible that only stations authorized to receive the service make use of the messages.
- (f) The sending and receiving Administrations will respectively fix and collect from the senders or receivers their own fees for transmission or reception as the case may be.
- (g) The receipts will not be included in the international accounts.
- (h) The agencies participating may be required to deposit with the Administrations concerned copies of any codes used.

5. It will, of course, rest with the Government of every country to determine whether the reception of the proposed messages from Rugby should be permitted within its territory, and, if so, on what conditions: that is to say, whether the messages should be received at Government or other public wireless telegraph stations, or whether licences should be issued for their private reception, and in either case what charges should be paid by the agency for the service. It will be necessary for any agency which proposes to despatch such messages from Rugby to make its own arrangements with the Administrations of the countries in which the messages are to be received.

6. The use of Rugby for the world-wide service described above has been discussed by the Committee on Imperial Wireless Services, and fears have been expressed by certain of the Dominion representatives

(i) that the conditions proposed would not ensure effective control over reception, and (ii) that the scheme would divert traffic from the beam wireless services which are shortly to be opened.

7. With regard to the first point, His Majesty's Government are advised—and this view is confirmed by experience of the service from Northolt—that the prescribed conditions will afford adequate safeguards against illicit reception. It will obviously be in the interests of the agencies to make their coded messages as difficult as possible for unauthorized persons to decipher, and His Majesty's Government propose also to require agencies to undertake not to supply copies of their special codes to any persons other than those authorized for the purpose in each receiving country. Any news messages which may be transmitted in clear language will necessarily be exposed to the same risk of illicit reception as normally attends the wireless transmission of such messages; and if they should be picked up and published without authority, the question of infringement of copyright would arise.

8. With regard to the second point, His Majesty's Government are advised that the beam stations which are being erected in this country would not be suitable for a broadcasting service of world-wide range such as is to be conducted from Rugby. It is understood, however, that the views of the Dominion Wireless Companies which are represented on the Committee would be met to a considerable extent if the Dominion Governments should decide that the reception of the messages in question in their territory should be entrusted exclusively to those Companies. This is, of course, a matter which is solely for each Government to decide, but your Ministers may like to know that the weight of opinion on the Committee was in favour of limiting reception wherever possible to the beam stations.

9. His Majesty's Government propose that the service should be inaugurated early in the New Year.

(Canada. No. 59.)

(Commonwealth of Australia. No. 44.)

(Union of South Africa. No. 28.)

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 9th February, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to request Your Excellency to inform your Ministers that, in connexion with the forthcoming opening of Imperial Wireless Services between this country and Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, the Union of South Africa, and India, the Postmaster-General proposes to appoint a Standing Committee to advise on matters of detail and routine which may arise out of the conduct of these services.

2. It is not intended that the appointment of this Committee should interfere in any way with the present arrangement whereby main questions of policy are dealt with by the Imperial Communications Committee and (in accordance with the recommendations of the Imperial Economic Conference) representatives of the Dominions and India are invited to take part in the work of that Committee when questions of interest to them are under discussion; but there will be numerous matters, such as the routing of messages, hours of working, tariffs, and the institution of new classes of cheap telegrams, in which it will be necessary for agreement to be reached between the authorities respectively operating the stations in this country and the overseas stations. Prompt decisions in these matters will often be necessary, and it is thought that the efficient operation of the services would be much facilitated if it could be arranged for the Dominions concerned, and India, to be represented on the Standing Committee, for under such an arrangement it would doubtless often be possible, by means of full discussion in the Committee, to reach a settlement without the delay entailed by consultation by telegram or letter with the overseas Government or Governments concerned.

3. In view of these considerations it is hoped that your Ministers will agree to be represented on the Standing Committee, and if so, the Postmaster-General would be glad if not more than two representatives could be nominated for this purpose.

4. In this connexion, the Postmaster-General has suggested that, inasmuch as the wireless services in [Canada] [the Commonwealth of Australia] [the Union of South Africa] will be operated by a private company and not directly by the Government, it might be desirable that a London representative of the Company concerned should, if this is practicable, be appointed as one of the representatives of [the Dominion] [the Commonwealth of Australia] [the Union of South Africa]; but he realizes that this question, and the question whether one or two representatives should be appointed, are, of course, entirely matters for the decision of your Ministers.

5. I may add that the Postmaster-General proposes to authorize the Committee to consult with representatives of the Pacific Cable Board, or of the Cable Companies, on specific occasions, if this is thought desirable.

6. Similar despatches are being addressed to the Governors-General of [the Commonwealth of Australia and the Union of South Africa] [Canada and the Union of South Africa] [Canada and the Commonwealth of Australia] and the Secretary of State for India is being asked to nominate a representative, or representatives, of India upon the Committee.

SIR, Downing Street, 19th February, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to Your Excellency, to be laid before your Ministers, the accompanying copies of despatches* which have been addressed to the Governors-General of Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, and the Union of South Africa regarding a proposal to appoint a Standing Committee to advise on matters of detail and routine which may arise out of the conduct of the Imperial Wireless Services to be opened between this country and those Dominions.

2. Although perhaps the matters with which the Committee will deal may not be of direct interest to New Zealand, at any rate in the first instance, it is thought, in view of the possibility of the eventual establishment of a direct wireless service between this country and New Zealand, that it might be of advantage if the New Zealand Government were associated with the work of the Committee from its inception.

3. If, therefore, your Ministers consider such representation to be desirable, the Postmaster-General would welcome the nomination of not more than two representatives of New Zealand upon the Standing Committee.

I have, &c.,

[My Lord,] [Sir,]

Downing Street, 10th July, 1925.

WITH reference to previous correspondence regarding the draft Convention of the proposed Universal Electrical Communications Union, I have the honour to request [Your Excellency] [you] to inform your Ministers that the desirability of the formulation of regulations of a technical nature for the conduct of Imperial wireless communications has recently been under consideration.

2. As the result of discussion at the Imperial Communications Committee it was agreed to appoint a Sub-Committee with the following terms of reference:—

"(a) to draft technical wireless regulations which, while applicable in the first instance to Great Britain and Northern Ireland, might be suitable for adoption by the other Governments of the Empire; (b) to render a preliminary report at an early date indicating the subject matter on which it is proposed to frame regulations."

3. As your Ministers will be aware negotiations have been proceeding during the past six years regarding the possibility of the formulation of an International Convention and Regulations to govern the conduct of electrical communications generally. The following summary of these negotiations and of the course of events which have led to the setting up of the above Sub-Committee may, however, be of interest:—

* No. 136. † No. 124.

(i) At the close of the Great War there was in existence a Committee consisting of representatives of the four great Allied Powers, the United States, France, Great Britain and Italy whose task had been to co-ordinate all wireless questions and ensure the smooth working of the wireless and visual signalling communications of the Allies in the war. This Committee drew up a draft containing the amendments, then considered necessary, to the Service Regulations attached to the Radio Convention of 1912.

(ii) In submitting their final report this Committee (generally known as the EU—F—GB—I Committee) recommended that the existing Radio Convention of 1912 and the Telegraph Convention of St. Petersburg (1908 Revision) should be combined into one Convention and completed with Service regulations to cover all forms of signalling, wire, wireless, and visual.

(iii) The Committee further recommended that His Majesty's Government should be requested to draw up a draft of such a Combined Convention and regulations to form a basis for discussion.

(iv) Although this last recommendation was never officially adopted by all the Governments concerned, nevertheless it was thought desirable to formulate the views of His Majesty's Government in the form of a combined convention and set of regulations such as that suggested by the EU—F—GB—I Committee, and this was accordingly done by a Committee of the General Post Office in 1920.

(v) During the preparation of the Treaty of Versailles, the following agreement was reached by the Supreme Allied Council of Five:—

"The Principal Allied and Associated Powers shall, as soon as possible, arrange for the convoking of an International Congress to consider all international aspects of communication by land telegraphs, cables, or wireless telegraphy and to make recommendations to the Principal Allied and Associated Powers with a view to providing the entire world with adequate facilities of this nature on a fair and equitable basis."

(vi) It must be remembered that, apart from the new state of affairs arising out of the war, it was originally intended that the International Telegraph Convention should be revised at Paris by the invitation of the French Government and also that the International Radio-telegraph Convention should be amended at Washington at the invitation of the United States Government, which latter was not a signatory to the first-mentioned Convention.

(vii) As a result of the decision of the Supreme Council a preliminary conference was held in Washington in the Autumn of 1920, at which the United States produced proposals based on the amendments to the Radio Convention prepared by the EU—F—GB—I Committee. On the other hand, the French Government formulated proposals based entirely on the Telegraph Convention.

(viii) One of the first agreements reached at Washington was that it was desirable to formulate a Combined Convention and Service Regulations covering all forms of signalling, consequently, the British draft of 1920 (see (iv) above) was adopted as the chief basis of discussion.

(ix) Certain highly technical questions, which the Washington Conference felt incompetent to discuss, were left to a special technical Committee to be called by the French Government in Paris as soon as possible. This technical Committee met in Paris in 1921 and the result of their deliberations has been embodied in the Revised Washington Draft which was circulated by the Berne Bureau. Copies of this draft were enclosed in the Duke of Devonshire's despatch [Not to Irish Free State: Dominions No. 44 of the 5th February, 1923.*] [To Irish Free State: No. 635 of the 5th of November, 1923.†]

(x) So far the work had been conducted by the Allied and Associated Powers, and it was hoped that the French Government would be in a position to call a World Conference in the spring of the present year. With this end in view the Washington proposals had been revised by various Post Office Committees in this country, but owing to a divergence of views on the part of the French and United States Governments, a combined wire and radio conference is, for the present, not to be held. A line telegraph conference is, however, to be held in Paris opening on the 1st of September, 1925, and it is possible that a radiotelegraph conference in accordance with the provisions of the International Radiotelegraph Convention 1912 will be held in Washington in the spring of 1926.

(xi) A Post Office Committee has been at work for some time on the preparation of regulations for the telegraph conference to be held in Paris.

(xii) Six years have already elapsed and there are still no radio regulations suitable to modern wireless communications. The 1912 Convention was based almost entirely on the then limited use of wireless for shipping only. In the meanwhile the United States Department of Commerce has held three National Radio Conferences and has recommended regulations for the United States of America.

4. I enclose copies of the Preliminary Report which has now been prepared by the Sub-Committee of the Imperial Communications Committee in accordance with the second part of its terms of reference showing in summarized form the subject matter on which it is proposed to frame regulations. In this connexion it should be mentioned that whilst some of the titles of subject matter for regulations mentioned in the Report (e.g., secrecy of correspondence and the divulgence of intercepted messages) are set out in very general terms, the proposed regulations will deal with the subjects indicated from a technical standpoint alone and not from the point of view of questions of policy or procedure which are matters for administrative decision.

5. It appears to His Majesty's Government that, if Regulations can be framed which whilst applicable in the first instance (in accordance with the terms of reference to the Sub-Committee) to Great Britain and Northern Ireland only, are in fact suitable for adoption by other Governments of the Empire, the existence of such Regulations would be of great use both in relation to Imperial wireless communications generally, and particularly in determining the attitude of those of the Governments which are represented at the International Radio Conference when it takes place.

6. His Majesty's Government would accordingly welcome the co-operation of your Government as far as may be practicable in the preparation of the regulations, and I should be glad to learn whether your Ministers consider that the subject matter, as set out in the enclosed Preliminary Report, is sufficiently comprehensive or whether there are any additional subjects which they think should be dealt with in the regulations.

7. In the meantime the Sub-Committee is proceeding with the preparation of detailed regulations on the various subjects dealt with in the Preliminary Report, and these will be communicated, as soon as they are complete, for your Ministers' consideration.

8. While these detailed regulations are in preparation the Sub-Committee would appreciate the opportunity of consulting any officers whom your Ministers may appoint for the purpose; including, of course, any officers who may be temporarily in this country.

[To Canada, Australia, New Zealand and Union of South Africa: 9. In this connexion it has been suggested that certain of the Dominion representatives on the standing Advisory Committee on Imperial Wireless Services (see my despatch [To Canada: of the 9th February, No. 59*] [To Australia: of the 9th February, No. 44*] [To New Zealand: of the 19th February, No. 29†] [To Union of South Africa: of the 9th February, No. 28*] and connected correspondence) might be in a position to advise regarding the technical regulations suitable to the Dominions which they represent, and I should therefore be glad to learn whether your Ministers would desire that either of the [Canadian] [Australian] [New Zealand] [Union] representatives on the Advisory Committee should be invited to attend the Sub-Committee meetings.]

[9.] [10.] While the procedure outlined above has been thought to be the most suitable and convenient for the immediate formulation of technical Regulations, His Majesty's Government would be quite prepared to consider the summoning of an Imperial Wireless Conference if the progress of the work of the Sub-Committee and circumstances generally should permit of such a Conference being held before the Radiotelegraph Conference meets in Washington (see paragraph 3 (x) above).

I have, &c.,

L. S. AMERY.

PRELIMINARY REPORT OF THE SUB-COMMITTEE ON TECHNICAL WIRELESS REGULATIONS.

THE Sub-Committee was assembled in accordance with the decision of the Imperial Communications Committee at their Forty-fifth Meeting held on 28th January, 1925, when it was agreed:—

To re-constitute the Post Office Committee, of which Group Captain L. F. Blandy, C.B., is Chairman, as a Sub-Committee of the Imperial Communications Committee, with power to add to its numbers as required, with the following terms of reference—

- (a) To draft technical wireless regulations, which, while applicable in the first instance to Great Britain and Northern Ireland, might be suitable for adoption by the other Governments of the Empire;
- (b) To render a preliminary report at an early date indicating the subject matter on which it is proposed to frame regulations.

The composition of the Sub-Committee is given in Appendix I.

In accordance with item (b) of their terms of reference the Sub-Committee recommend that the subject matter on which it is proposed to frame regulations should be as shown in Appendix II.

The Sub-Committee further recommends that if the Imperial Communications Committee approve the above recommendation and communicate their approval to the other Governments of the Empire, the latter should be invited to submit any suggestions for additional subject matter on which they consider regulations should be framed.

Signed on behalf of the Sub-Committee,

L. F. BLANDY,
Chairman.

WITH reference to my Confidential despatch of the 29th of June† on the subject of the accession of Southern Rhodesia to the International Telegraph Convention and with special reference to the second paragraph of that despatch regarding the draft Convention of the proposed Universal Electrical Communications Union, I have the honour to request you to inform your Ministers that the desirability of the formulation of regulations of a technical nature for the conduct of Imperial wireless communications has recently been under consideration.

2. As the result of discussion at the Imperial Communications Committee it was agreed to appoint a Sub-Committee with the following terms of reference:—“(a) to draft technical wireless regulations which, while applicable in the first instance to Great Britain and Northern Ireland, might be suitable for adoption by the other Governments of the Empire; (b) to render a preliminary report at an early date indicating the subject matter on which it is proposed to frame regulations.”

3. Negotiations have been proceeding for some years regarding the possibility of the formulation of an International Convention and Regulations to govern the conduct of electrical communications generally. The following summary of these negotiations and of the course of events which have led to the setting up of the above Sub-Committee may be of interest:—

(i) At the close of the Great War there was in existence a Committee consisting of representatives of the four great Allied Powers, the United States, France, Great Britain and Italy, whose task had been to co-ordinate all wireless questions and ensure the smooth working of the wireless and visual signalling communications of the Allies in the war. (viii) One of the first agreements reached at Washington was that it was desirable to formulate a Combined Convention and Service Regulations covering all forms of signalling; consequently, the British draft of 1920 (see (iv) above) was adopted as the chief basis of discussion.

(ix) Certain highly technical questions, which the Washington Conference felt incompetent to discuss, were left to a special technical Committee to be called by the French Government in Paris as soon as possible. This technical Committee met in Paris in 1921 and the result of their deliberations has been embodied in the Revised Washington Draft which was circulated by the Berne Bureau. Copies of this draft were enclosed in my despatch under reference.

(x) So far the work had been conducted by the Allied and Associated Powers, and it was hoped that the French Government would be in a position to call a World Conference in the spring of the present year. With this end in view the Washington Proposals had been revised by various Post Office Committees in this country, but owing to a divergence of views on the part of the French and United States Governments, a combined wire and radio conference is, for the present, not to be held. A line telegraph conference is, however, to be held in Paris opening on the 1st of September, 1925, and it is possible that a radiotelegraph conference in accordance with the provisions of the International Radiotelegraph Convention 1912 will be held in Washington in the spring of 1926.

(xi) A Post Office Committee has been at work for some time on the preparation of regulations for the telegraph conference to be held in Paris.

(xii) Six years have already elapsed and there are still no radio regulations suitable to modern wireless communications. The 1912 Convention was based almost entirely on the then limited use of wireless for shipping only. In the meanwhile the United States Department of Commerce have held three National Radio Conferences and have recommended regulations for the United States of America.

4. I enclose copies of the Preliminary Report* which has now been prepared by the Sub-Committee of the Imperial Communications Committee in accordance with the second part of its terms of reference showing in summarized form the subject matter on which it is proposed to frame regulations. In this connexion it should be mentioned that whilst some of the titles of subject matter for regulations mentioned in the Report (e.g., secrecy of correspondence and the divulgence of intercepted messages) are set out in very general terms, the proposed regulations will deal with the subjects indicated from a technical standpoint alone and not from the point of view of questions of policy or procedure which are matters for administrative decision.

* Enclosure in No. 139.

5. It appears to His Majesty's Government that, if Regulations can be framed which whilst applicable in the first instance (in accordance with the terms of reference to the Sub-Committee) to Great Britain and Northern Ireland only, are in fact suitable for adoption by other Governments of the Empire, the existence of such Regulations would be of great use both in relation to Imperial wireless communications generally, and particularly in determining the attitude of those of the Governments which are represented at the International Radio Conference when it takes place.

6. His Majesty's Government would accordingly welcome the co-operation of your Government as far as may be practicable in the preparation of the regulations, and I should be glad to learn whether your Ministers consider that the subject matter, as set out in the enclosed Preliminary Report, is sufficiently comprehensive or whether there are any additional subjects which they think should be dealt with in the regulations.

7. In the meantime the Sub-Committee is proceeding with the preparation of detailed regulations on the various subjects dealt with in the Preliminary Report, and these will be communicated to your Ministers as soon as they are complete.

8. While these detailed regulations are in preparation the Sub-Committee would appreciate the opportunity of consulting any officers who may be temporarily in this country whom your Ministers may appoint for the purpose.

9. The procedure outlined above has been thought to be the most suitable and convenient for the immediate formulation of technical Regulations, but His Majesty's Government would be quite prepared to consider the summoning of an Imperial Wireless Conference if the progress of the work of the Sub-Committee and circumstances generally should permit of such a Conference being held before the Radio-telegraph Conference meets in Washington (see paragraph 3 (x) above).

SIR, Government House, St. John's, 24th September, 1925.
I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch Dominions No. 284, Confidential, of the 10th July last,† on the subject of the formulation of regulations for the conduct of Imperial wireless communications, and to inform you that my Ministers are willing to co-operate with His Majesty's Government in every possible way. It is considered that the preliminary report completely covers the subject, and this Government have no additional suggestions to offer.

2. In this Colony wireless communications consist of messages to and from ships at sea, and as such are handled exclusively by the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company, Limited, of Canada. There is no wireless communication with the mainland. My Ministers therefore have no officers whom they desire to appoint in connexion with the preparation of the detailed regulations.

Enclosure in No. 146.

FROM DEPARTMENT OF EXTERNAL AFFAIRS TO GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S SECRETARY.

(Confidential.)

SIR, Ottawa, 14th October, 1925.
WITH reference to a Confidential despatch from the Secretary of State for the Colonies to the Governor-General, dated the 10th July, 1925, Dominions No. 284, on the subject of the forthcoming International Radio Conference, I have the honour to state that the Department of Marine and Fisheries has carefully considered the representations contained in the said despatch and has noted with approval that a Sub-Committee of the Imperial Communications Committee has been appointed to draft technical regulations applicable to Great Britain and Northern Ireland in connexion with the forthcoming International Radio Conference, and also the suggestion that these regulations might be so drafted as to cover the requirements of the Dominions. This suggestion is heartily concurred in by the Department of Marine and Fisheries in so far as regulations affecting radio in the Dominion of Canada are concerned.

The proposed outline of the subject matter for these regulations included in Appendix 2 appears to be adequate and covers the different points in which Canada is likely to be interested. It is observed in this connexion that a copy of these regulations will be communicated for the information of this Government as soon as possible.

As regards representation on the technical drafting Committee, it is a matter of regret that the Canadian representatives on the standing Advisory Committee on Imperial Wireless Services are not sufficiently well posted on the different technical questions to be able to give any definite advice to the Sub-Committee. In the event, however, that one of the technical officers should be proceeding to England in the near future, the Department of Marine and Fisheries will be very glad to make arrangements for him to discuss with the Sub-Committee the many technical points which are likely to affect Canada.

With regard to the proposal that an Imperial Wireless Conference be held prior to the next Radio Conference, the view of the Department of Marine and Fisheries is that having regard to the International Radio situation such a conference would be eminently desirable, and it is respectfully suggested that a suitable date for the same would be any time between the 1st December and the 1st February next. Such conference would, in the opinion of that Department, present a welcome opportunity to discuss the radio requirements of this Dominion in detail and to adjust and modify the same, so far as such is possible, with the requirements of the Imperial Government and the Governments of the other Dominions.

I am to request that His Excellency may be humbly moved to inform the Secretary of State for Dominion Affairs in the sense of the foregoing.

I have, &c.,

Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your Confidential despatch of the 1st of August* on the subject of the appointment of a Sub-Committee of the Imperial Communications Committee to draft technical wireless regulations.

SIR,

Government House, Wellington, 6th October, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to inform you that my Ministers advise me that they are of the opinion that the list of subjects as set out in the Preliminary Report of the Sub-Committee of the Imperial Communications Committee, copies of which were enclosed in your Confidential despatch, Dominions No. 234, of the 10th July,† is sufficiently comprehensive, and that it covers all phases of wireless work in which this Dominion is interested. It is noted that a copy of the Draft Regulations will be submitted for consideration.

2. With regard to the desire of the Sub-Committee to consult any Dominion officers while the detailed regulations are in preparation, Ministers regret that at present there is no opportunity of taking advantage of the offer. The Dominion representatives on the Advisory Committee of Imperial Wireless Services are not conversant with the technical requirements of New Zealand, and therefore it is unlikely that any material assistance could be rendered by them.

3. My Government note that it is possible that an International Radio-telegraph Conference will be held at Washington in the spring of 1926 and that, if circumstances permit, an Imperial Wireless Conference will be summoned prior to the meeting of the International Radio-telegraph Conference.

4. In order that the Committee may be conversant with New Zealand requirements in the matter of mobile radio-telegraph stations, I enclose copies of the following documents:—

- (I) The Shipping and Seamen Amendment Act, 1924.
- (II) The Shipping and Seamen Act Wireless Regulations, 1925.
- (III) The Wireless Telegraph Regulations for Ship Stations, 1914 (made under the Post and Telegraph Amendment Act, 1911).
- (IV) Proposed amendments, about to be gazetted, to the Regulations referred to in (III).

(D) RECIPROCAL ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS, INCLUDING ARBITRATION AWARDS.

It was decided to adopt the following Resolution:—

This Imperial Economic Conference take note of the action already taken in many parts of the Empire to carry into effect the proposal contained in Resolution XXV of the Imperial Conference, 1911, with regard to mutual arrangements with a view to the enforcement in one part of the Empire of judgments and orders of the courts of justice in another part, including judgments or orders for the enforcement of commercial arbitration awards. While it is recognized that in certain Dominions these matters come within the scope of Provincial or State Governments whose freedom of action could not be bound by any decision of the Dominion or Central Government, the general view of the Imperial Economic Conference is that a universal arrangement throughout the Empire for the reciprocal enforcement of judgments, including arbitration awards, could not fail to be valuable and advantageous to trade and commerce, and is accordingly an object at which the different parts of the Empire should aim.

[Answered by Nos. 152 and 153.]

YOUR despatch of 23rd January, No. 14.* Reciprocal enforcement of judgments. Difficulty has arisen over exclusion of Northern Ireland from definition of United Kingdom in Section 3 Sub-section 1 of Administration of Justice Act, 1924. Conditions precedent to issue of Order in Council here as laid down in Section 14(1) of Imperial Act are that reciprocal provision shall have been made by oversea Legislature concerned for enforcement within that part of His Majesty's Dominions of judgments obtained in High Court of England, Court of Session Scotland and High Court in Ireland. Expression "High Court in Ireland" by virtue of Adaptation of Enactments Order in Council, 1923, passed under Irish Free State Consequential Provisions Act, 1922, must now, for purposes of Imperial Act, be taken to mean High Court "in Ireland exclusive of Irish Free State," i.e., High Court in Northern Ireland.

In the circumstances, best course would appear to be if your Ministers agree for a Proclamation to be made under Section 4(2) of New South Wales Act extending Act to Northern Ireland. On receipt of information that such Proclamation has been issued steps would be taken for issue of Order in Council here under Section 14 of 1920 Act for extension of that Act to New South Wales.—SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES.

Government House, Sydney, 16th July, 1925.

WITH reference to your telegraphic despatch of the 2nd May,† regarding the question of the reciprocal enforcement of judgments between Northern Ireland and New South Wales, I have the honour to refer to my telegram of the 11th instant,‡ intimating that it is thought that there is objection to the course suggested in your cable of the 2nd May.†

2. In further explanation of my telegraphic despatch cited above, I have the honour to state that Ministers request me to inform you that the Assistant Law Officer of the Crown has expressed the opinion that the Governor could not be properly advised to adopt the course suggested, as a condition precedent to the issue of the proposed Proclamation is that the Governor should be satisfied that reciprocal provisions have been made by the legislature in that part of His Majesty's Dominions to which the Act is to be applied, and that in this case there is no evidence that any reciprocal provisions have been made by the Legislature of Northern Ireland. In view of this, the Assistant Law Officer considered that the practical course to adopt would be to amend the Act by providing that Part II thereof shall apply to Northern Ireland. The late Attorney-General agreed with this view, and my present Ministers concur. The Parliamentary draftsman has prepared an amending Bill, which is to be introduced into Parliament at the earliest opportunity.

3. Arrangements for the establishment of reciprocity in this matter have been entered into by my Government with the Colonies of Malta and Fiji; and I annex hereto copies of the Proclamations* issued for the purpose of applying Part II of the New South Wales Administration of Justice Act to Malta and Fiji.

I have, &c.,

Secretariat Note.—Despatches were sent to the Dominions, Australian States and Southern Rhodesia on the 22nd May, 1925, transmitting copies of Orders in Council dated the 2nd May, 1925, extending Part II of the Administration of Justice Act, 1920, to Norfolk Island, the Northern Territory of Australia and New Guinea (21692/25).

(G) CUSTOMS FORMALITIES.

(i) Valuation of Goods for Customs Duty Purposes.

It was decided to adopt the following Resolutions:—

Form A.

"A common form of invoice and certificate for use by exporters having been adopted by Australia, New Zealand, the Union of South Africa, and Newfoundland, as well as by a number of Colonies, the Conference strongly recommends, in the general interests of inter-Imperial trade, that the early adoption of an identical form may be sympathetically considered by all the other Governments throughout the Empire which levy duty on a system similar to that in force in the above-mentioned parts of the Empire."

"The Conference understands that legislation to give effect to the recommendations of the Imperial Customs Conference has already been passed in Australia and New Zealand, and ventures to urge the passing of similar legislation in every case in which such may prove to be necessary."

Form B.

"The Conference has had before it a form of invoice and certificate which has been prepared as suitable for use in those parts of the Empire which levy duty on the invoice value of goods imported from other parts of the Empire, and require for this purpose a certified statement made by the exporter of the goods."

"The Conference strongly recommends, in the interests of inter-Imperial trade, the early adoption by all parts of the Empire which levy duty on the system in question of the form annexed to this Resolution."

Certificate in Regard to Postal Packages.

"The attention of the Conference has been drawn to the short form of certificate prepared by the Imperial Customs Conference, 1921, for use as establishing the origin of goods sent by parcel post from the United Kingdom."

"It understands that this form has already been adopted by a number of the Dominions and Colonies, and considers that in the interests of inter-Imperial trade the adoption of a similar form is desirable in the case of parcels arriving in one part of the Empire from another part."

"The Conference therefore strongly recommends that, in the case of parcels sent by parcel post, the contents of which are of small value and are not merchandise for sale, the following short form of certificate should be adopted at an early date by all parts of the Empire concerned, as providing satisfactory evidence of the origin of the goods in cases where the production of such evidence entitles the goods to entry at a lower rate of duty than would otherwise obtain:—

"The contents of this package are not merchandise for sale, and every article herein, to the extent of at least one-fourth of its present value, is bonâ fide the produce or manufacture of....."

"Dated at.....this.....day of.....19....."

.....Sender."

(ii) International Conference on Customs Formalities.

It was decided to adopt the following Resolution:—

"That the Conference should take note of the work accomplished by the recent League of Nations International Conference on Customs and other Similar Formalities (the 15th October to 3rd November, 1923), and that the conclusions of that Conference should be recommended for favourable consideration to the various Empire Governments concerned."

Note.—Correspondence relating to (ii) above is contained in Dominions No. 94.

[Answered by No. 155.]

Your telegram 20th December,* Confidential. Please give following personal message to your Prime Minister from President of the Board of Trade and myself:—

Begins: Representations made to us by Federation of British Industries and Association of Chambers of Commerce indicate that proposed new Commonwealth Regulations, of which we have received details from Trade Commissioner, are causing much apprehension amongst important British exporting industries.

We are advised that concession which allowed 50 per cent. in certain cases instead of 75 per cent. of the value of goods to be British in order to qualify for preference will be altogether nullified in many industries if 100 per cent. Empire material is insisted on, and in effect exporters of goods of a kind made in Australia will in most cases only secure preference if they can prove 75 per cent.

It will be quite impossible for a large number of manufacturers to attain this standard. Specific instances of difficulties could be furnished if desired.

Whatever may be ultimate decision we hope that you will be able to postpone application of new regulations beyond date originally proposed so as to give time to British exporters to become fully acquainted with Commonwealth regulations before shipping. You will appreciate that goods loading here for Australia even to-day may not arrive before 1st April. Ends.

It was decided to adopt the following Resolutions:—

Resolution I.

"This Imperial Economic Conference recommends the adoption of the first of the two schemes for the future of the Imperial Institute and the Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau proposed in the Report of the Imperial Institute Committee of Enquiry, 1923, subject to the following modifications:—

"(i) That in order to ensure that the reconstituted Imperial Institute may in future undertake in its laboratories only preliminary investigations of raw materials for the purpose of ascertaining their possible commercial value, and to ensure that investigation or research of a more extensive kind may be referred to the appropriate authority, whether in this country or elsewhere in the Empire, there shall be formed a small Committee of the Governing Body, to be known as the 'Laboratory Committee,' consisting of the Comptroller-General of the Department of Overseas Trade (or his nominee), the Secretary of the Scientific and Industrial Research Department (or his nominee), and a Fellow of the Royal Society, being a representative of that society on the governing body of the Imperial Institute, who will supervise the laboratory work of the Institute and report thereon from time to time to the governing body."

"(ii) That with a view to ensuring that in future the reconstituted Institute may have expert assistance in regard to finance—e.g., in establishment matters—a representative of His Majesty's Treasury be added to the new governing body and to the new Managing Committee proposed in paragraphs 100 and 101 of the Report of the Imperial Institute Committee of Inquiry."

Resolution II.

"This Imperial Economic Conference approves the estimate of the cost of maintaining the reconstituted Institute as set out in paragraph 5 of the memorandum by the Secretary of State for the Colonies submitted to the Conference (I.E.C. (23) -18); and suggests that in order that the sum of £8,000, which is proposed as an annual contribution from the Dominions and India, may be obtained, the Ministerial representatives of the Dominions and of India advise their respective Legislatures to contribute the following annual amounts for a period of five years:—

Canada	2,000
Commonwealth of Australia	2,000
New Zealand	1,200
Union of South Africa	1,200
India	1,200
Irish Free State	200
Newfoundland	200 "

Resolution III.

"This Imperial Economic Conference take note of the memorandum on the co-ordination of research bearing upon Industry and the suggestions for its development submitted by the Department of Scientific and Industrial Research in consultation with the Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries and other Departments, and they are of opinion that all possible steps should be taken to encourage the exchange of scientific and technical information between the various parts of the Empire, and the co-operation of the official and other organizations engaged in research for the solution of problems of common interest."

SIR,

Downing Street, 10th January, 1925.

WITH reference to my predecessor's despatch No. 437 of the 21st October,* I have the honour to request you to inform your Ministers that His Majesty's Government have had under consideration the financial arrangements necessary in order to continue the work of the Imperial Institute pending the passage of the Bill to provide for the re-organization of the Institute which His Majesty's Government have decided to re-introduce into Parliament at the earliest opportunity.

2. Contributions from the Colonies not possessing responsible Government and Protectorates amounting to more than the sum of £8,000 recommended by the Imperial Economic Conference, 1923, have already been received; and the Colonies and Protectorates concerned have been invited also to make a further contribution towards the additional sum required for the upkeep of the Exhibition Galleries of the Institute.

3. His Majesty's Government have also paid to the Institute an advance of £3,000 in respect of their contribution; and they would be glad to learn whether your Ministers would agree to authorise payment to the Institute for the current year 1924-25 of the amount of £250 proposed in your despatch No. 43 of the 22nd of February,† as a contribution on behalf of Southern Rhodesia.

SIR JAMES ALLEN (HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR NEW ZEALAND) to MR. AMERY.

[Answered by No. 167.]

New Zealand Government Offices, Strand,
London, W.C. 2, 9th March, 1925.

DEAR AMERY,

1. I HAVE received from the Secretary of the Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau a print of the Imperial Institute Bill, 1925, and of the Memorandum on the Financial Resolution. No doubt these have been sent to me as I am a member of the Bureau, but I am somewhat surprised that copies have not been sent by the Colonial Office, and I am wondering whether my fellow High Commissioners have received prints.

2. I have looked through the Bill and I am going to suggest a few alterations, which I hope may be effected without bringing them up for discussion in the House.

3. Imperial Institute Trustees.—I think it is a mistake not to include in the Board of Trustees a representative of the Oversea Dominions, say one, nominated by the High Commissioners in London. We have had experience of this kind of representation on the Board of the British Empire Exhibition, and I think the time is ripe for the High Commissioners to select one from amongst them to sit on the Board of Trustees of the Imperial Institute, unless it could be arranged for all to become members of that Board.

4. In the Memorandum on Financial Resolution there is a note to the effect that it is proposed that the Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau should become Chairman of the Advisory Council for Minerals in the reconstructed Institute. In the second Schedule of the Bill the Board of Governors is empowered, with the consent of the responsible Minister, to make rules for constituting Advisory Councils or Committees, of which one shall be an Advisory Council on Minerals, and it seems to me that to make the appointment suggested in the note to the Memorandum would supersede the authority of the Board of Governors. Again, if a Chairman of one Advisory Council is paid and others are not paid an anomaly will be created.

5. I am anxious regarding the appointment of a Director. Apparently no provision is made in the Bill for that appointment, and I suggest that it should rest with the Board of Governors. That an appointment is to be made should be made known not only here but in the Dominions, because it may be that in the Oversea Dominions there may be men qualified to fill the position.

6. To-night I am going to Edinburgh for a couple of days. Towards the end of the week I will ring you up in the hope of being able to make an appointment to see you on Imperial Institute matters.

Believe me,
Yours sincerely,
J. ALLEN.

SIR,

Governor-General's Office, Cape Town, 20th February, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to transmit to you herewith, with reference to your despatch No. 390 of the 29th December, 1924,* copy of Minute from Ministers on the subject of the payment by the Union Government of its contribution to the Imperial Institute, recommended by the Imperial Economic Conference, viz., £1,200.

I have, &c.,

Governor-General.

Enclosure in No. 166.

Prime Minister's Office, 19th February, 1925.

MINUTE No. 140.

MINISTERS have the honour to acknowledge the receipt of His Excellency the Governor-General's Minute No. 73/56 of the 27th January, 1925, covering copy of a despatch No. 390 of the 29th December, 1924, received from the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies, relative to the payment by the Union Government of its contribution to the Imperial Institute recommended by the Imperial Economic Conference, viz., £1,200.

Ministers desire to inform His Excellency that the Union's contribution was contingent upon (a) the amalgamation of the Institute and the Imperial [Mineral] Resources Bureau and (b) the passing of the necessary legislation to give effect thereto, neither of which has yet been effected.

Ministers are, however, instructing the High Commissioner for the Union in London to pay over to the competent authorities the contribution for the year 1924-25 provided he receives assurances that the agreement arrived at at the Imperial Conference as regards the amalgamation will be given effect to at an early date.

Ministers are doubtful whether the retention of the Exhibition Galleries is desirable, and in any case are not prepared to contribute further funds towards the upkeep of the Institute in excess of the amount agreed upon at the Economic Conference.

Ministers would be glad if the Imperial Authorities could be advised that the Union Government cannot undertake to make any further contributions to the Imperial Institute until the amalgamation of the Institute and the Imperial [Mineral] Resources Bureau is effected.

No. 167.

MR. ORMSBY-GORE to SIR JAMES ALLEN (HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR NEW ZEALAND).

DEAR SIR JAMES ALLEN,

Downing Street, 23rd March, 1925.

As I daresay you are aware, the Secretary of State has just started on his journey to Iraq. Before he left the Office, however, he asked me to write to you regarding certain points which you raised in your letter of the 9th March,† in connexion with the Imperial Institute Bill now before Parliament.

I understand that, when you called here on the 12th of March, Mr. Amery said that he was personally in favour of the amendments which you suggested should be made in the Bill, and that he would ask me, as being in charge of the Bill in the

* No. 460 in Dominions No. 91. † No. 165.

Commons, to consider the possibility of securing their incorporation during its passage, if in my judgment this could be safely done without delaying its progress through the House.

So far, the progress of the Bill has been very satisfactory and, as you may have seen, it has now passed its second reading. I am convinced, however, that it would be fatal, in the interests of the early passing of the Bill, for the Government to propose or to introduce amendments at this late stage. The present Bill is substantially an agreed measure. In the first place, it embodies the scheme of settlement arrived at after protracted negotiations at the time of the Imperial Economic Conference, together with the necessary modifications in the text resulting from the late Government's decision that the Exhibition Galleries should be retained for their original purpose. Secondly, the Bill is (with the necessary alterations as to dates) in exactly the same form as when it left the House of Lords last summer, including those amendments which were made during its passage there to meet the wishes of Lord Islington, Lord Emmott, and others who are interested in the Institute. In consequence, we are justified I think in regarding the Bill which the present Government has re-introduced as generally acceptable to all parties in Parliament. Moreover, no important amendments, however desirable in themselves, could very well be inserted at this stage unless and until we had obtained the consent of the Governments of the Dominions and India. Even if we were to communicate with Oversea Governments by telegraph, the delay that would thereby inevitably be involved would result in our having to give up all hope of the Bill becoming law in the immediate future. I may add that the Committee stage is to commence on Wednesday, 25th March, and it is essential in the financial interests of the Institute that the Bill should receive the Royal Assent as soon after the close of the present financial year as possible.

Apart, however, from these obvious difficulties in the way of amending the Bill at this stage, there are certain difficulties in the actual amendments which you suggest in your letter. I will deal with the various points in their order.

You propose that the Bill should provide for the representation of the Dominions among the Imperial Institute Trustees, and suggest that for this purpose one representative might be nominated by the High Commissioners in London. I believe that it might not be difficult to make such an arrangement provided that all the Dominion Governments contributed to the maintenance of the Institute, but it so happens that at present not all are ready to contribute, and this might not improbably cause complications.

As regards the appointment of a Director. The regulations at present in force were so framed as to reserve the appointment of Director to the Secretary of State while giving the Council power to make other appointments. I do not know what the arrangement will be between the Responsible Minister and the new Governing Body as regards appointments to the Staff, but I feel sure that he would regard it as necessary to keep some control over this important appointment, and I think you will agree that this is really essential. No steps can, of course, be taken to fill the post until the Bill becomes law, but candidates from the Dominions, India and the Colonies, as well as from this country will, of course, be eligible.

I now come to the arrangements that have been made in connexion with the Chairmanship of the new Advisory Council for Minerals. The prospective appointment of Sir Richard Redmayne to this post is part of the general settlement that was arrived at last year with the Governors of the Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau. As you are aware, the Governors of the Bureau accepted the new régime with considerable reluctance, and the arrangements that have been made for setting up an Advisory Council for Minerals and for the representation of the ex-Governors of the Bureau on the new Governing Body of the Institute were made by way of compromise to secure their acquiescence in the amalgamation of the Bureau with the Institute. I am afraid that it would be fatal at this stage to suggest any upsetting of the compromise which was arrived at not without difficulty last year.

Yours sincerely,

W. ORMSBY-GORE.

SIR,

Governor's Office, Salisbury (Rhodesia), 3rd March, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your despatch No. 16 of the 10th January* on the subject of the financial arrangements necessary in order to continue the work of the Imperial Institute pending the passage of the Bill to provide for the re-organization of the Institute which His Majesty's Government have decided to introduce into Parliament.

2. In reply to the third paragraph of your despatch I am informed by my Ministers that the High Commissioner for Southern Rhodesia in London has been instructed to pay to the Imperial Institute the subsidy of £250 for the financial year ending 31st March, 1925, as a contribution on behalf of this Colony.

15488

No. 169.

MR. ORMSBY-GORE to SIR JAMES ALLEN (HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR NEW ZEALAND).

DEAR SIR JAMES ALLEN,

Downing Street, 3rd April, 1925.

As I promised when you called here the other day, I have given consideration to the various points which you raised in connexion with the Imperial Institute Bill.

First of all, as regards Sir Richard Redmayne's prospective appointment. As I explained in my letter of the 23rd March,† the arrangement for establishing an Advisory Council for Minerals was made by way of a compromise to secure the acquiescence of the Governors of the Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau in the proposed scheme for amalgamation with the Institute. Quite apart from this aspect of the matter, it was, I understand, the view of the late Government that, having regard to the very special interests of this country in the development of the mineral resources of the Empire, it would be advisable that these interests should be officially represented on the new Advisory Council for Minerals (as now on the Board of Governors of the Mineral Resources Bureau) by Sir Richard Redmayne and, on the assumptions (a) that he would be appointed Chairman of the Council, (b) that a salary of £1,000 would be suitable remuneration for him as British Member and Chairman, that he should receive from Imperial funds one half of that amount in respect of his duties as British Member. I may also add that in contemplating this arrangement the late Government took cognizance of the fact that, when Sir Richard Redmayne left the Home Office after nineteen years' service there, to become Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Mineral Resources Bureau, he voluntarily sacrificed his pension rights, doubtless in the expectation that his new employment in the Bureau would be permanent. However that may be, the present Government feel that it would be inequitable that one who has rendered such conspicuous service to the State as Sir Richard Redmayne should be allowed to suffer by reason of the modification of policy as regards the Bureau, which could not be foreseen at the time when he agreed to accept the post.

Apart from these considerations, there can be little doubt that if, at this late stage, there were to be any breach on our part of the settlement arrived at last year with the Governors of the Bureau, we could no longer rely on their assent to the Bill, without which the position in Parliament would, I can assure you, be hopeless. In these circumstances, I am afraid that no hope can be held out of our reconsidering the arrangement that has been made in regard to Sir Richard Redmayne's appointment.

* No. 162. † No. 167.

I have also considered your suggestion that the representation of the Dominions on the Governing Body of the Institute should be increased. The future composition of the Board of Governors was, as you are aware, considered at the Imperial Economic Conference which, in this respect, adopted the recommendations of the Committee of Inquiry, of which you and I were members. Last year, however, during the passage of the Bill through the House of Lords, some additions were made to the Governing Body. As a result, the second Schedule to the Bill now provides for a Board of Governors numbering in all 27, including seven representatives of the Dominions and India, six representatives of various Government Departments in this country, and three to be appointed by the Secretary of State, who it is intended shall represent the Colonies and Protectorates. The remaining members will be representatives of scientific and commercial interests to be appointed by the Responsible Minister, who will be the President of the Board. The Board of Governors is already a rather unwieldy body, and I feel sure that you will agree with me that it is not desirable that its numbers should be still further increased. As you know, the Colonies and Protectorates have now for a number of years been bearing more than their proportionate share of the expenses of the Institute, and, even under the new régime, it is contemplated that Colonial Governments should contribute an annual sum of money equal to the total of the combined contributions of all the Dominions and India. Yet, on the new Governing Body, the Colonies and Protectorates are to have only three representatives as compared with seven for the Dominions and India. It seems to me, therefore, that if the Dominion representation on the new Governing Body were to be increased, a very substantial corresponding increase in the Colonial representation would also be necessary.

I, of course, appreciate your view of any proposals to allocate space in the Imperial Institute building for the purpose of housing the exhibits of the Imperial War Museum, or to give the London University further accommodation in the building. Once the Bill has been passed in its present form, nothing can be done to dispose of any accommodation in the Institute building, without the consent of the New Governing Body, of which you will be a Member.

I may perhaps add that there seems to have been some misunderstanding about your receipt of a copy of the Bill, as I see that copies were sent from the Colonial Office to you and to the other High Commissioners on the 6th March,* immediately after its introduction into Parliament.

Yours sincerely,
W. ORMSBY-GORE.

Attached to 15488

SIR JAMES ALLEN (HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR NEW ZEALAND) to MR. ORMSBY-GORE.

New Zealand Government Offices, Strand,

DEAR MR. ORMSBY-GORE, London, W.C. 2, 9th April, 1925.

1. I HAVE received your letter of the 2nd [3rd] instant† regarding the Imperial Institute Bill.

2. As to the compromise to which you allude in the third paragraph of your letter, all I have to say is that I know nothing about it. I desire to make it quite clear that I have no objection to Sir Richard Redmayne, and if his appointment were subject to the votes of those with whom the appointment lay, I should probably give him my vote. What I object to is the principle. It seems to me that the arrangement is a contravention of an authority conferred by the Bill.

3. You refer to a suggestion of mine, that the representation of the Dominions on the Governing Body of the Institute should be increased, but I am afraid you must have written under a misapprehension. The Bill provides that the Board of Governors shall have amongst its members one representative of each of the Overseas Dominions, but, on the other hand, it does not provide for the representation of the Overseas Dominions on the Board of the Imperial Institute Trustees, and the suggestion had reference to an addition to the Trustees, as you will see in the third paragraph of my letter to Mr. Amery of the 9th March.‡ I sincerely hope that it is not too late to introduce such amendment as will provide for a representative of the Overseas Dominions to be nominated by the High Commissioners in London to sit on the Board of Trustees.

* 10123/25: not printed. † No. 169. ‡ No. 165.

4. With reference to the concluding paragraph of your letter, unfortunately there has been a misunderstanding in this office. A copy of the Bill sent by the Colonial Office reached me a day after the copy furnished by the Imperial Mineral Resources Bureau. I regret that an error has been made.

Yours sincerely,
J. ALLEN.

SIR,

Governor's Office, Salisbury, Southern Rhodesia, 16th July, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to refer to your predecessor's despatch No. 129 of 11th April, 1924,* under cover of which were forwarded copies of an extract from the proceedings of the Imperial Economic Conference relating to co-operation for Technical Research and Information.

2. My Ministers have requested me to submit the following observations on your suggestions as to the mode of co-operation in technical research:—

- (1) The Government of Southern Rhodesia is prepared to constitute a Board composed of the senior technical officers of the Agricultural and Veterinary Departments, with power to add to its number, and having its headquarters at Salisbury.
- (2) The functions of the Board would be to arrange for and supervise the actual execution of research in this Colony, to co-operate with the Department of Scientific and Technical Information in the conduct of research, to receive and supply scientific and technical information, and to engage in the development of the natural resources of this Colony.
- (3) The Government of Southern Rhodesia request that the Department of Scientific and Technical Information should recognize the Board as a research organization.

I have, &c.,

SIR,

Downing Street, 16th December, 1925.

WITH reference to my despatch No. 405 of the 17th of October,* on the subject of co-operation in Technical Research, I have the honour to request you to inform your Ministers that the Department of Scientific and Industrial Research has no general responsibility in connexion with agricultural and veterinary research to which your despatch No. 237 of the 16th of July† particularly referred, and that, in consequence, I communicated with the Minister of Agriculture and Fisheries who has observed that he notes with interest the steps taken by the Government of Southern Rhodesia in this matter and will be happy to arrange for any practicable measure of co-operation with your Government.

2. The Minister states, however, that on being informed of the reply of your Ministers to my despatch No. 393 of the 12th of October,‡ he will be in a better position to consider detailed proposals for co-operation in agricultural research, and, moreover, that it may be preferable that such proposals should be left for discussion at the conference which is contemplated in 1927.

3. Meanwhile, your Ministers may like to see the enclosed Report§ of the Intelligence Department of the Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries for 1921-1924, of which the first part contains an account of the organization of Agricultural Research in England and Wales and of the work done.

(K) IMMUNITY OF STATE ENTERPRISES.

It was decided that the following Resolutions be adopted:—

I.

"This Imperial Economic Conference, so far as it is competent for its members without prejudice to the rights of the States or Provinces of a self-governing Dominion, agrees with the recommendation of the Committee on the Liability of Dominion and Foreign Governments, &c., to United Kingdom taxation expressed in the following terms, viz.:—

"Any Government within the Empire, so far as it engages in trade, shall be treated as liable to the taxation of any other country within the Empire in which it may either own property in connexion with trade or make trade profits; the liability of the United Kingdom Government or any Dominion Government so far as engaged in trade shall be co-extensive with the liability of a private trading corporation in similar circumstances."

"It is agreed that each of the several Parliaments of Great Britain, the Dominions, and India shall be invited to enact at the earliest opportunity a declaration that the general and particular provisions of its Acts or ordinances imposing taxation shall be deemed to apply to any commercial or industrial enterprise carried on by or on behalf of any other such Governments in the same manner in all respects as if it were carried on by or on behalf of a subject of the British Crown. It is not contemplated that such legislation should have retrospective effect for any year prior to 1924."

"This Conference further agrees that, as soon as possible after the passing of the aforesaid legislation, negotiations should be opened with the Governments of foreign countries, in accordance with the recommendations of the aforesaid Committee, with a view to reciprocal agreement between those countries and the Empire to the following effect: If or when the Government of a foreign country carries on trade in the United Kingdom or in a Dominion, and if or when the Government of a country within the British Empire carries on trade in a foreign country, the trading Government shall not, in its character as such, be treated as entitled to any sovereign immunity from taxation either directly, or through the claim of superiority to the jurisdiction of municipal Courts; nor shall a Government so trading be treated as entitled to any sovereign immunity from taxation in respect of property in the other country concerned which it may own or hold in a trading capacity or in connexion with trade."

"It is understood that, as the Committee recommended, it would be a proviso to the whole agreement that it should be without prejudice to the national interests of a sovereign State in any emergency of war."

II.

"The Conference further recommends that the draft convention on the immunity of State-owned ships adopted by the meeting of the International Maritime Committee held at Gothenberg in August last, and amended after consultation between the British Admiralty and Board of Trade, should be adopted throughout the Empire as the basis on which an international convention might be concluded. This amended draft is as follows:—

Immunity of State-owned Ships.

(Amended Draft: October 26, 1923.)

"Article 1.—Vessels owned or operated by States for trading purposes, cargoes owned by them and cargo and passengers carried on such vessels and the States owning or operating such vessels shall be subjected in respect of claims relating to the operation of such vessels or to such cargoes to the same rules of legal liability (i.e., liability to be sued for payment) and to the same obligations as those applicable to private vessels, persons or cargo.

"Article 2.—Such liabilities shall be enforceable by the tribunals having jurisdiction over and by the procedure applicable to a privately-owned ship or cargo or the owner thereof."

"Article 3.—Ships of war, State Yachts, Surveying Vessels, Hospital Ships and other vessels owned or operated by States and employed on other than trading purposes shall continue to enjoy the respective privileges and immunities hitherto enjoyed by them by the comity of nations. Liabilities against such ships in respect of collisions or salvage claims shall, however, be enforceable, but only by action before the competent tribunals of the State owning or operating such vessels; and no such vessel shall be liable to arrest. Similarly, State-owned cargo carried for non-commercial purposes in ships owned or operated by the State shall not be subject to seizure, but shall be liable to process of Law, but only in the Courts of the State owning such vessels.

"Article 4.—The provisions of this Convention will be applied in every contracting State in all cases where the claimant is a citizen of one of the contracting States, provided always that nothing in this Convention shall prevent any of the contracting States from settling by its own laws the rights allowed to its own citizens before its own Courts.

"Article 5.—This Convention shall not be binding on a belligerent State in respect of claims arising during the period of belligerency."

I HAVE the honour to refer to your predecessor's Confidential despatch of the 7th August last,* transmitting, to be laid before my Ministers, copies of an extract from the Proceedings of the Imperial Economic Conference, 1923, and inviting attention to the immunity from taxation of State enterprises as set out on pages 523-4.

2. The Hon. the Premier has addressed a memorandum to me dated 23rd December last (of which I enclose a copy), intimating with reference to paragraph 3 of your Confidential despatch under acknowledgment that, in the opinion of the Government of Western Australia, it is preferable that no taxation of any kind should be levied by any Government upon the property of any other Government within the Empire.

3. You will possibly consider that this is not a very satisfactory reply, and as Mr. Collier will shortly arrive in England, you may see fit to mention the matter to him personally.

4. I am forwarding a copy of this despatch to His Excellency the Governor-General in accordance with the instructions contained in your telegram received through the office of His Excellency the Governor of New South Wales on the 17th inst.

Enclosure in No. 190.

The Treasury,

19th January, 1925.

QUESTION OF IMMUNITY FROM TAXATION OF STATE ENTERPRISES.

IN pursuance of Resolutions of the Imperial Economic Conference of 1923, the British Government is desirous of ascertaining whether Dominion and State Governments within the Empire are prepared to take the necessary legislative steps to render State enterprises liable to taxation in any other country within the Empire in which such enterprises may operate.

It is stated that the Governments of New Zealand and the Union of South Africa have expressed willingness to take such action providing Great Britain reciprocates, and, in the event of all Dominions agreeing, it is the intention, afterwards, to open similar negotiations with Foreign Governments.

The Premier's Office referred the question to the Treasurer in September last for consideration.

In a report obtained from Mr. Whiddon, Commissioner of Taxation, under date 10th November, 1924, he states:—

1. If the principle were adopted by New South Wales there appears much to be gained from a revenue point of view and little to lose, as none of our enterprises extend beyond the borders of New South Wales, and the only possibility of a hit back is in regard to Wheat Pools, Butter Pools, etc., selling produce abroad.

2. So far as is known, no Government other than the Commonwealth carries on any industrial enterprise in New South Wales except with respect to shipping. At present the Commonwealth Line, the Canadian Government Line, and two American Government Lines trade to New South Wales, and the proposal would give this State the right to tax all outward freights of these Lines.

3. The proposal would appear to make profits of the Pacific Cable Board, Commonwealth Bank, and Post, Telegraph and Telephone Departments subject to taxation by New South Wales.

4. The proposal also empowers Land Tax to be imposed on property owned by a Government for purposes of any industrial enterprise. Other States will, apparently, be empowered to impose their land taxes on such Federal Government property in Australia, but whether that power will extend, in the absence of a general land tax in this State, to New South Wales Public Authorities imposing Municipal rates, etc., is not clear. The principle aimed at in the proposal of putting a Government engaged in trading on the same footing as a private trading corporation would, if it is to be consistently applied, confer that power.

Mr. Whiddon apparently takes the view that this State's enterprises would not be taxable by the Commonwealth except when operating in Federal Territory. Whilst this is probably the correct interpretation of the Resolutions of the Imperial Economic Conference, it is questionable whether the Commonwealth, if it is realized that the proposal would have this effect, would agree to its adoption without some quid pro quo from the States, such as the right to tax all profits from Railways and Tramways, etc., etc.

The following replies have been received by the Premier from the Commonwealth and other States:—

Commonwealth.

That the British Government has been informed that it is considered that there is at present no necessity so far as the Commonwealth is concerned to legislate in the direction recommended by the Conference.

Tasmania.

Asking what attitude New South Wales proposes to adopt.

Queensland.

Is prepared to adopt the recommendations if the Commonwealth and States do so.

Victoria.

That important principles are involved, and it appears to that Government that the whole subject should be discussed at a Premiers' Conference before coming to a decision.

As the Commonwealth Government is not prepared at present to adopt the proposals of the Conference, it is questionable whether it would be advisable for any individual State to do so. In any case it appears desirable that uniform action should be taken by the States, and it is, therefore, suggested that the question be discussed at the next Conference of Premiers.

If the Treasurer approves of this suggestion, a copy of this Minute, together with a copy of Mr. Whiddon's report, might be forwarded for the information of the Premier.

B. S. STEVENS,

Director.

P.S.—Western Australia has replied to the Colonial Office that in its opinion it is preferable that no taxation of any kind should be levied by any Government upon the property of any other Government within the Empire.

MINUTE No. 957.

MINISTERS have the honour to refer to their Minute 826 of 14th October, 1924, on the subject of the immunity from taxation of State enterprises and to inform His Excellency the Governor-General that provision has been made in the new Income Tax Law of the Union for the exemption from tax of any revenues accruing to other Governments from Union sources, save such revenues as are derived from State trading.

* No. 197. † No. 465 in Dominions No. 91. ‡ No. 469 in Dominions No. 91.

The relative provision, viz., Section 10 (1) (a) of the Income Tax Act No. 40 of 1925, reads as follows:—

"There shall be exempt from this tax—the revenues of the Government of the Union; the revenues of any provincial administration within the Union and any revenues or receipts derived from Union sources by the Imperial Government or by the Governments of other States, including other Dominions or any British Colony or possession other than revenues or receipts derived by the Imperial Government or the Government of any Dominion or British Colony or possession from any trade of any kind carried on within the Union."

Ministers have the honour to request that His Excellency may be pleased to acquaint His Majesty's Government of the fact.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of your telegram of the 28th November* regarding the question of the immunity from taxation of State enterprises and of State-owned ships.

2. With reference to the latter part of your telegram, I shall be glad if you will invite the attention of your Ministers to my despatch Dominions No. 363 of the 19th August,† from which it will be seen that the required legislation in the matter of the immunity of State enterprises has already been passed in this country. Similar legislation has also been passed in the Union of South Africa, as set out in the despatch‡ from the Governor-General of the Union, a copy of which is enclosed.

3. A copy of the despatch from the Governor-General of the Union of South Africa is also being sent to the Governors-General of Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, New Zealand, and the Irish Free State, and to the Officers Administering the Governments of Southern Rhodesia and the Australian States.

5. IMPERIAL POLICY WITH REGARD TO THE IMPORT AND EXPORT OF LIVE STOCK.

After consideration of this question, the Imperial Economic Conference decided that steps should be taken to promote inter-Imperial trade in pedigree stock throughout the Empire as a whole on reciprocal terms, subject always to satisfactory precautions being taken against the introduction of disease.

It was further agreed that a conference should be arranged between representatives of His Majesty's Government and the Canadian Government to consider the question of the administrative interpretation of the terms of "The Importation of Animals Act, 1922."

MINISTRY OF AGRICULTURE AND FISHERIES.

MEMORANDUM of conditions under which the Minister is prepared to consider applications (under Section 1 of the Importation of Pedigree Animals Act, 1925), for the landing in Great Britain of Pedigree Animals.

1. Section 1 (1) of the Importation of Pedigree Animals Act, 1925, enables the Minister to make Orders authorizing, subject to the conditions prescribed in such Orders, the landing of cattle, sheep, goats or swine brought from any part of His Majesty's Dominions, which are shown to the Minister's satisfaction to be there registered as pedigree stock in a herd or flock book recognized by him after consultation with the Royal Agricultural Society of England and the Highland and Agricultural Society of Scotland, to be landed in Great Britain without being subject to Part I of the Third Schedule to the Diseases of Animals Act, 1894 (slaughter at the port of landing), but subject to Part II of that Schedule (Quarantine).

2. The Act of 1925 also provides that no such Order may be made except with respect to animals brought from a part of the Dominions in which pedigree animals from Great Britain are allowed to be landed either unconditionally or subject to conditions (including rates of import duty) which in the opinion of the Minister are not unduly restrictive.

3. Before authorizing the landing of any animal under the Act of 1925 the Minister will require to be satisfied in the case of each application that the above-mentioned conditions are complied with, and also that no risk of the introduction of disease would be entailed by the conditions existing in that part of His Majesty's Dominions from which the animal is proposed to be imported. A certificate will be required from the Government of the exporting country as to the freedom from disease immediately before shipment, both of the animals and of the country from which they are brought. The certificate in the case of cattle should show that each animal has been submitted to the tuberculin test within one month immediately prior to shipment, and has shown no re-action. The temperature charts should be attached to the requisite certificate in cases where the sub-cutaneous tuberculin test was carried out. In cases where the intradermal, or intrapalpebral, or ophthalmic tests have been carried out (either independently or in conjunction with the sub-cutaneous test) an accurate description of the re-action, if any, should be inserted on the certificate.

4. The landing of the animals, if authorized, will be subject to the provisions of the Special Order of the Minister authorizing the landing and regulating the detention and isolation of the animals at a quarantine station at the port of landing to be defined by the Order and imposing strict requirements as to inspection of the animals during quarantine, and the cleansing and disinfection of the premises, etc. No forage or litter that have been in contact with the animals to be imported may be landed. The Ministry will reserve to itself the right to re-test any cattle in the quarantine station in any case in which it considers such a test necessary.

5. In the case of each importation, a period of quarantine will be specifically imposed by the Order authorizing the landing, which will not usually be less than 28 days, and which, in certain cases, would be extended to six months.

6. It rests with the importer to make the necessary arrangements for the acquisition of premises to be used as a quarantine station (subject to the approval of such premises by the Ministry) and for the care of the animals, and to defray all expenses connected with the importation and with the detention of the animals during the period of quarantine, except the expenses incurred in the veterinary supervision of the animals during that period, which would be undertaken by the Ministry without charge, provided that the port is one at which a Veterinary Inspector of the Ministry is stationed.

7. The premises selected for quarantine must meet the requirements of the Ministry as regards structure and suitability, and be in close proximity to the wharf at which the animals are landed. Definite arrangements for shipment should in no case be made until authority for the importation has been granted by the Minister and the place of quarantine approved.

8. In no case will the Ministry accept any liability for any loss occasioned at any time by the death or illness of any animal imported under the Act, or by any accident or injury to any such animal. No compensation is payable under the Diseases of Animals Acts in respect of any animal which, having been allowed to be landed under the Act of 1925, is slaughtered in a quarantine station by reason of its being diseased or suspected of disease or of its having been exposed to the infection of any disease.

July, 1925.

6. IMPERIAL POLICY WITH REGARD TO FORESTRY.

7. WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION.

It was decided to adopt the following Resolutions:—

Resolution I.

Non-Resident Workmen.

"That this Imperial Economic Conference, taking note of the existing restrictions in the Workmen's Compensation laws of certain parts of the British Empire on the payment of benefits to workmen and their dependents on the ground of non-residence in the State in which the accident happened, and having regard to the tendency of such restrictions to discourage movement within the Empire, is of opinion that no British subject who is permanently incapacitated, and no dependent of a British subject who has been killed, by accident due to his employment in any part of the Empire should be excluded from any benefit to which he would otherwise be entitled under the Workmen's Compensation law of that part of the Empire on the ground of his removal to or residence in another part of the Empire."

Resolution II.

Seamen.

"That this Imperial Economic Conference, having had its attention drawn to cases where British sailors injured by accident while serving on ships registered in some part of the Empire have had no claim to compensation owing to the law of that part of the Empire being restricted, in its application to seamen, to accidents occurring within territorial waters or other limited area, is of opinion that the Government of any such part of the Empire should ensure that the benefits of its compensation law will extend to all accidents to seamen serving on ships registered within such part of the Empire wherever the ship may be when the accident takes place. And, furthermore, the Conference invites the Government of any British Colony or Protectorate where there is a register of shipping, but where legislation giving compensation rights to seamen does not at present exist, to consider the adoption of such legislation."

Resolution III.

Aliens.

"That this Imperial Economic Conference, taking note of the disabilities imposed under the Workmen's Compensation laws of certain foreign countries on British subjects residing in those countries and their dependents, invites each Government of the Empire, regard being had to its own particular conditions, to consider the possibility of adopting in workmen's compensation legislation the principle of reciprocity—that is that the benefits of such legislation should be accorded to subjects of foreign countries upon the condition that and to the extent to which such foreign countries accorded reciprocal treatment to British subjects."

The Conference notes in adopting the foregoing Resolutions that in certain of the Dominions workmen's compensation falls wholly or partially within provincial or State jurisdiction, and is in those cases and to that extent outside the control of the Dominion Government.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

SIR, Government House, Ottawa, 24th March, 1925.
 WITH reference to Mr. Thomas's despatch No. 155 of the 2nd April, 1924,* in which the hope of His Majesty's Government was expressed that the principles embodied in Resolutions I and II of the Imperial Economic Conference might prove acceptable to the Canadian Provinces, I have the honour to inform you that the matter having been brought to the attention of the several Provincial Governments, their replies,† copies of which are herewith enclosed, have now been received.

I have, &c.,

BYNG OF VIMY.

ANNEXURE.

Workmen's Compensation.

Replies of Canadian Provincial Governments on Resolutions of Imperial Economic Conference.

(A.) RESOLUTION I. NON-RESIDENT WORKMEN AND DEPENDENTS.

(i) Ontario.—Non-resident dependents of deceased workmen are entitled to compensation only if the law of the country where they reside makes reciprocal provision for residents in Ontario, and then only to compensation on the scale in force in such country. This principle is regarded as reasonable, and no change is proposed.

Non-resident workmen's compensation does not depend on residence: but it is the practice to commute a workman's compensation, when he ceases to reside in Ontario and returns to his native country, on a scale more approximating to the scale in force in that country than to the Ontario scale. (Section 43 of the Ontario Act.)

(ii) Quebec.—The recommendations of the Conference would require modifications which are not considered opportune.

(iii) New Brunswick.—Sends copies of legislation without comment. The legislation provides in the case of non-resident workmen for compensation to be reduced to the scale of the country of residence; and in the case of dependents, for compensation regarded as adequate on the basis of the cost of living in such country.

(iv) Nova Scotia.—Non-resident workmen and dependents are granted compensation on the scale in force in their country of residence: this principle is regarded as reasonable, and it is the business of the country concerned to increase its scale of compensation.

(v) Prince Edward Island.—No compensation legislation is in force.

(vi) Manitoba.—No restriction imposed on the amount of compensation payable to workmen or dependents on account of non-residence, provided that reciprocity exists.

(vii) British Columbia.—No restriction is imposed on the ground of non-residence in the case of workmen. Amount payable to non-resident dependents may, however, be reduced to an amount regarded as adequate in view of conditions and cost of living in the country of residence. This provision is regarded as fair. Reciprocity is not required.

(viii) Alberta.—Sends legislation without comment. No restriction is imposed on the ground of non-residence in the case either of workmen or dependents. But Section 35 of Workmen's Compensation Act (Consolidated) provides that it shall be conclusively presumed that a workman has, at the expiry of two years (in the case of a British subject) after his arrival in Canada, no dependents except father and/or mother save dependents residing in Canada.

* No. 495 in Dominions No. 91. † Not printed; summary of replies printed as Annexure.

(ix) Saskatchewan.—Legislation contains no provisions discriminating against dependents residing out of Saskatchewan.

(B.) RESOLUTION II. SEAMEN.

(i) Ontario.—The present law provides for compensation in respect of accidents outside Ontario either (a) if employer's principal place of business and workman's residence is in Ontario, and workman's employment outside has lasted less than six months, or (b) if accident happens on a vessel, and workman's residence is in Ontario, and his employment requires service partly inside and partly outside Ontario. (Section 6 of Ontario Act.) These provisions have covered practically all cases which have so far arisen, and it is not desired to extend them at present.

(iii) New Brunswick.—See under A(iii) above.

The Act appears to include seamen: but "navigation" is defined for the purposes of the Act as the "operation of any ship, etc., owned in New Brunswick while such vessels is within the limits of the said province." (Section 2(n)). But the workman could presumably claim the benefit of Section 7(a) which provides that "work part of which is to be performed in this province and part in an adjoining province or country, the work shall be considered as done and performed in this province."

(iv) Nova Scotia.—Refers to constitutional difficulties, since a province of Canada has no jurisdiction outside the Province. But Nova Scotia has made provision for seamen based on legislation with respect to contracts made within the Province. This would not assist, e.g., a British sailor engaged in England for service on a Nova Scotian ship, and legislation to this end would have to be effected by the Dominion Parliament. Refers to desirability of preventing overlapping of legislation.

(vi) Manitoba.—Expresses no opinion as regards seamen. But the position appears at present to be the same as in British Columbia. (See under vii below (Section 3(6) of cap. 159 of 1920 as amended by cap. 83 of 1921.)

(vii) British Columbia.—Compensation is given to a seaman on a vessel outside British Columbia if the seaman is a resident of the Province and the nature of his employment is such that it is to be performed both within and without the Province. This is thought to be as far as the Provincial Legislation is justified in going in the matter.

The provisions of the Act (Section 37) are similar to those of Section 6 of the Ontario Act referred to under B(i) above.

(ix) Saskatchewan.—Does not refer to the position of seamen. The Act (cap. 210 of R.S. 1920) does not appear to include seamen in its provisions.

Note.—The Dominion legislation to which Section 39 (l) of the New Brunswick Act refers is Part V of the Canada Shipping Act (R.S. 1906 cap. 113), which provides for the institution of a Sick Mariners' Fund from levies on ships, from which free medical treatment is provided for seamen on such ships.

8. IMPERIAL ECONOMIC COMMITTEE.

It was decided to adopt the following Resolution:—

"That in the opinion of this Imperial Economic Conference (Canada dissenting)—

(1.) It is desirable to establish an Imperial Economic Committee, comprising representatives of the Governments represented in the Imperial Conference, and responsible to those Governments.

(2.) The function of the Committee should be to consider and advise upon any matters of an economic or commercial character, not being matters appropriate to be dealt with by the Imperial Shipping Committee, which are referred to it by any of the constituent Governments, provided that no question which has any reference to another part of the Empire may be referred to the Committee without the consent of that other part of the Empire.

It was further decided that in the constitution of the proposed Imperial Economic Committee representation should be allotted to the various constituent Governments as follows:—

Great Britain	4 members.
Dominions	2 members each.
India	2 members.
Colonies and Protectorates	2 members.

6TH JANUARY. Confidential. Your telegram 13th December.* His Majesty's Government regret if impression should have arisen that no note was taken of Canadian views on certain points connected with the proposed Committee; they would explain that object of my telegram of the 25th November† was to indicate that His Majesty's Government expressly adopted the proposal of the late Government (subject only to such minor modifications as appear in that telegram) as set out in my predecessor's telegram of 19th June.‡ Whilst question of title for Committee was not specifically raised in latter telegram it was understood from your telegram of 2nd July§ that Canadian Government were in accord with proposals for its constitution; and it will be seen that other Dominions whose replies have already been communicated to Canadian Government have assumed that title would be as proposed at Imperial Economic Conference.

It is gathered from your telegram of 13th December* that provided work of proposed Committee proves satisfactory Canadian Government would be prepared, if other Governments wish, to give favourable consideration to any proposal to refer kindred subjects for examination to the same or similar Committee. Accordingly while they have no wish to attempt to prejudice future consideration as to continuance of Committee after completion of its work on terms of reference at present proposed His Majesty's Government would regard it as unfortunate if, in the event of a decision being taken to continue Committee in being, it should be compelled to change its title and so lose any advantage it might have gained in general goodwill and reputation as a result of success in its first investigations.

His Majesty's Government agree that title suggested in your telegram would satisfactorily describe functions at present proposed for Committee; but on above grounds and also in view of statement made by Prime Minister in the House of Commons on 17th December (substance of which was foreshadowed in his message to your Prime Minister contained in my telegram of 13th December||) regarding recommendations to be invited from Committee they much prefer the title originally agreed upon and they trust that your Government will not press question of alternative title.

11TH JANUARY. Confidential. Your telegram of 6th January,* Marketing Committee, received. My Ministers believe that the considerations against establishing permanent General Economic Committee and in favour of ad hoc Committee to consider specific questions of methods of increasing extent and economic efficiency of the marketing of overseas produce in Britain are conclusive. It is not necessary to repeat these considerations summarized in my telegram of 2nd July† and my telegram of 13th December,‡ particularly as they have not been controverted in any point(s) in your telegram of 25th November§ or your telegram of 6th January.* As to the title of the Committee, the Canadian Government still consider Overseas Produce Marketing Committee or some similar wording preferable. They have taken cognizance, however, of the fact noted in your telegram of 6th January that the Prime Minister, in announcement of 17th December, referred to proposed Committee under the name of the Imperial Economic Committee, and are not disposed to occasion any embarrassment that can be avoided. If, then, it is clearly understood that proposed committee is on ad hoc basis for specific purpose of marketing overseas produce inquiry and that any later proposal to establish similar ad hoc Committees for other inquiries will be considered on merits as questions arise, Canadian Government is prepared to waive objection to giving it the title of Imperial Economic Committee. As to the later proposal to instruct the Committee to inquire into the methods of using the grant of approximately £1,000,000 to further the importation of Dominions produce in lieu of the former preference plan, Canadian members would be prepared to give opinion regarding the feasibility from the Dominions standpoint of the various methods to be considered, though decision as to making any appropriation and as to how to expend it will, of course, rest with the British Government. Please inform my Ministers when it is proposed to begin the sittings of the Committee and probable length of inquiry. They will then nominate representative(s).—BYNG.

NATIONAL FARMERS' UNION to COLONIAL OFFICE.

[Answered by No. 255.]

45, Bedford Square, London, W.C.1, 14th February, 1925.

Imperial Economic Committee.

DEAR SIR,

IN connexion with the Government's policy of assisting the marketing of Empire produce in this country, Mr. Churchill stated in the House of Commons on 17th December last, that "Great care will have to be taken in the administration of this policy, about which full details will be given at a later stage, to make sure that we do not, in so doing, do an injustice to our own domestic producers. We wish to encourage Empire production at the expense of the foreign product, but not at the expense of the domestic producer."

In the reference to the subject which he made at the Annual General Meeting of this Union last month, Mr. R. R. Robbins, our President, stated:—"When a proposal is made for granting financial assistance to Empire producers to facilitate the marketing of their produce in this country, the Union feels justified in assuming that inasmuch as its members are amongst the most loyal of producers a fair share of the grant will be allocated to them."

We note with satisfaction that in a recent speech at the Royal Colonial Institute the Secretary of State for the Colonies, in referring to the scope of the functions of the proposed Imperial Economic Committee, stated that "that Committee might in the utilization of this sum (i.e., the proposed annual grant of £1,000,000), and in many other ways, do a great deal to help to secure the British market for Empire goods—and when I say Empire goods I should like to make it clear that I do not exclude the goods of this part of the Empire and least of all the produce of its agriculture."

Whilst, as I have said, we regard Mr. Amery's statement with satisfaction, I am instructed to say that we hope that this organization will be given due representation on the proposed Imperial Economic Committee, which will deal with the utilization of the grant appropriated by the Government for the assistance of the marketing of Empire produce. Having regard to the views expressed by Mr. Amery, as quoted above, we feel sure that he will appreciate the reasonableness of our request.

Yours faithfully,
J. B. GUILD,
Secretary.

SIR, Government House, Ottawa, 11th February, 1925.
WITH reference to your Confidential telegram of the 24th ultimo,† inquiring as to the appointment of the Canadian representatives on the Imperial Economic Committee, I have the honour to transmit, herewith, copies of the approved Minute of the Privy Council for Canada upon which my telegram of the 6th instant‡ was based.

I have, &c.,
BYNG OF VIMY.

Enclosure in No. 247.

(P.C. 197.)

CERTIFIED COPY OF A MINUTE OF A MEETING OF THE COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL, APPROVED BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL ON THE 5TH FEBRUARY, 1925.

THE Committee of the Privy Council have had before them a report, dated 3rd February, 1925, from the Secretary of State for External Affairs, submitting, with reference to a confidential telegram, dated 24th January, 1925, from the Secretary of State for the Colonies, asking to be informed of the Canadian representatives on the Imperial Economic Committee:—

That in a telegram dated 19th June, 1924, the Secretary of State for the Colonies proposed the establishment of an Imperial Economic Committee on the lines discussed at the Imperial Economic Conference in the preceding year, with four representatives from Great Britain and two from each Dominion and from India, to which would be assigned in the first instance the task of inquiring into the possibility of improving the method of preparing for market and marketing within the United Kingdom the food products of the overseas parts of the Empire with a view to increasing the consumption of such products in the United Kingdom and promoting the interest of both producers and consumers, meat and fruit being first considered and tariff issues excluded.

That in a telegram of the 2nd July the Canadian Government replied welcoming such an inquiry but taking exception to the establishment of a permanent committee in London with a fixed personnel to inquire into all inter-imperial economic questions, and proposing the appointment of an ad hoc committee.

That on the 25th November, after the change of Government, the present British Government repeated the proposal of its predecessors with an alteration in the terms of reference to indicate that any increased consumption of overseas produce is to be at the expense of foreign rather than of home producers, suggesting

* No. 245. † No. 235. ‡ No. 239.

Sir Halford Mackinder as Chairman of the Committee and offering to pay at the outset the whole expenses of the Committee apart from travelling and other personal expenses of the overseas representatives.

That on the 13th December the Canadian Government replied repeating the expression of its readiness to take part in the inquiry, and its objections to a permanent committee, and suggesting that the Committee be entitled the Overseas Produce Marketing Committee.

That on the same date a telegram was received from the Secretary of State for the Colonies intimating that it was proposed to instruct the Committee to inquire into methods of using a possible grant of approximately one million pounds to be made by the British Treasury in lieu of former tariff preference proposals, and to be applied to assisting the marketing of overseas products without injury to British producers; while in a further telegram of the 6th January, 1925, he stated reasons for desiring to adhere to the title as originally proposed, including the fact that it had been announced in those terms by the Prime Minister.

That on the 11th January the Canadian Government expressed willingness to accept the title Imperial Economic Committee, used in the Prime Minister's announcement, if it was clearly understood that the Committee was to be an ad hoc basis for the specific purpose of inquiry into marketing overseas produce, and added that the Canadian members would be prepared to give an opinion upon the feasibility from the Dominion standpoint of various methods of using the proposed grant, though the decision as to making any appropriation and the method of expending it would rest with the British Government.

That in subsequent telegrams of the 20th and 24th January the Secretary of State for the Colonies expressed agreement that the present proposal is to establish a committee with one specific reference, and that any suggestions for a further inquiry by the same or a similar body should be considered on their merits, further stating that the composition of the Committee was nearly completed, that it was hoped to begin sittings very shortly and asking to be informed as soon as possible of the names of the Canadian representatives.

The Minister therefore recommends that the Government of Canada agree to the establishment of a committee on the basis suggested, and that with a view to the most practical presentation of the interests of Canadian producers and to emphasize the ad hoc character of the Committee, representatives closely in touch with the marketing of meat and fruit be selected.

The Minister further recommends, with the concurrence of the Ministers of Agriculture and of Trade and Commerce, that Mr. L. C. McOuatt of the Live Stock Branch of the Department of Agriculture, who is familiar with the meat industry in Canada and Great Britain, and Mr. J. Forsythe Smith, of the Trade Commissioner staff of the Department of Trade and Commerce, with special charge of the interests of Canadian fruit industry in Great Britain, be appointed as the two representatives of Canada on the said Committee, and that due notification of such appointments be made to the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for the Colonies.

The Committee concur in the foregoing and submit the same for Your Excellency's approval.

E. J. LEMAIRE,
Clerk of the Privy Council.

COLONIAL OFFICE to NATIONAL FARMERS' UNION.

DEAR SIR,

Downing Street, 5th March, 1925.

IN further reply to your letter of the 14th of February,* I am desired by Mr. Amery to say that he fears that it will not be practicable to arrange for direct representation of the National Farmers' Union on the proposed Imperial Economic Committee. He wishes me, however, to assure you that the points mentioned in your letter are receiving the most careful consideration of His Majesty's Government.

The Imperial Economic Committee which it is proposed to appoint will not exercise any administrative functions in regard to expenditure. As regards the proposed annual grant, it will, as the Prime Minister announced on the 17th December last, be invited to make recommendations in an advisory capacity regarding schemes intended to secure for producers in the overseas parts of the Empire a larger share of that portion of the United Kingdom market in foodstuffs which has to be supplied by importation from abroad; and Mr. Amery has no doubt that, if and when any proposals are made which may affect the interests of the home producers, the Minister of Agriculture would use every endeavour to see that full consideration is given to their position.

Yours faithfully,

W. C. HANKINSON.

Enclosure in No. 256.

Colonial Office, 5th March, 1925.

IMPERIAL ECONOMIC COMMITTEE.

IN the course of the debate on the Address in the House of Commons on 17th December, 1924, the Prime Minister referred to the constitution of a Committee to deal with the marketing in the United Kingdom of the food products of the overseas parts of the Empire. His announcement followed on discussions between His Majesty's present Government and their predecessors and the other Governments represented at the Imperial Economic Conference, 1923, regarding the Resolution (pages 18-19 of Cmd. 1990) as to the appointment of an Imperial Economic Committee.

It has now been decided to set up a Committee of an ad hoc character to be called the Imperial Economic Committee, representing His Majesty's Government and the Governments of the self-governing Dominions, India, and the Colonies and Protectorates with the following terms of reference:—

* No. 241. † No. 253.

"To consider the possibility of improving the methods of preparing for market and marketing within the United Kingdom the food products of the overseas parts of the Empire with a view to increasing the consumption of such products in the United Kingdom in preference to imports from foreign countries, and to promote the interests both of producers and consumers."

It has also been agreed that the Committee should concentrate its attention first on meat and fruit.

It has further been arranged that the Committee should be invited to make recommendations regarding schemes upon which useful expenditure might be incurred out of the grant which the Prime Minister announced was to be devoted by His Majesty's Government to securing for producers in the overseas parts of the Empire a larger share of that portion of the United Kingdom market in foodstuffs which has to be supplied by importation from abroad.

Sir Halford Mackinder, who is also Chairman of the Imperial Shipping Committee, has, by agreement between the Governments concerned, been appointed Chairman of the new Committee. The other members will be:—

Representing the United Kingdom—

Sir Thomas Allen, Director of the Co-operative Wholesale Society.

Mr. W. S. Crawford, of Messrs. W. S. Crawford, Ltd.

Sir Algernon Firth, Bart., late President of the Association of Chambers of Commerce of the United Kingdom.

Representing Canada—

Mr. J. Forsythe Smith, of the Canadian Trade Commissioner Service.

Mr. L. McQuatt, of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Representing the Commonwealth of Australia—

Sir Mark Sheldon, K.B.E., Chairman of the Australian Bank of Commerce.

Mr. F. L. McDougall, one of the Business Advisers to the Australian Delegation at the Imperial Economic Conference, 1923.

Representing New Zealand—

The Hon. Sir James Allen, K.C.B., High Commissioner for New Zealand.

Mr. R. S. Forsyth, London Manager of the New Zealand Producers Board.

Representing the Union of South Africa—

Mr. J. Dimond, Trade Commissioner for the Union of South Africa in London.

Representing the Irish Free State—

Mr. James McNeill, High Commissioner for the Irish Free State.

Mr. S. J. Meyrick, Secretary, Department of Agriculture, Dublin.

Representing Newfoundland—

Captain Victor Gordon, High Commissioner for Newfoundland.

Representing India—

Sir Abul Chandra Chatterjee, K.C.I.E., High Commissioner for India.

Mr. M. M. S. Gubbay, C.S.I., C.I.E., late I.C.S., formerly Secretary to the Finance Department, Government of India.

Representing the Colonies and Protectorates—

Sir Gilbert Grindle, K.C.M.G., C.B., Senior Assistant Under-Secretary of State, Colonial Office.

(A second representative of the Colonies and Protectorates will be selected from a panel including representatives of certain Associations connected with the Colonies.)

The Secretary to the Committee will be Mr. H. Broadley, Board of Trade, to whom all communications on matters affecting the work of the Committee should be addressed, at the Board of Trade, Great George Street, S.W.1.

29TH JULY. Confidential. Chairman of Imperial Economic Committee has asked me to send following message:—

Begins: Expect Imperial Economic Committee will sign to-morrow General and Meat Reports which it is proposed publish 5th August provided no Government opposes before 4th August. Following summary recommendations. Time ripe for national effort stimulate consumption Empire produce in Great Britain, this scheme to rest on British Government legislation for identification of Empire produce and financial assistance for comprehensive scheme of education and publicity. Proposed legislation provides imported meat and fruit be marked with country of origin or in case of Empire countries the broader designation to suffice.

When exposed for sale must be labelled as Empire or foreign, and where Empire produce at time of importation bears name of country this must also be exhibited on Empire label. Removal of producer's marks of origin from canned goods to be prohibited. Committee also recommend small British Commission to administer annual grant of British Government. This Commission to be charged with conducting educational and publicity campaign to promote trade in Empire produce, to which purpose largest portion of grant is allotted. A scheme for co-ordinated research into production and preservation of foodstuffs is of prime importance and provision made to give this practical effect. Provision made for promoting fruit growing in tropical portions of Empire and carriage of stud stock from Britain to overseas parts of Empire. Recommended that law governing importation of live animals into Britain be amended so as to place all Dominions on equal basis. Governments of the Empire urged to continue to encourage standardization of products to meet market requirements. If no objections registered by 4th August British Government will notify date this epitome released for simultaneous publication throughout Empire. Committee taking further evidence on fruit reference and will report later. Message Ends.

15TH AUGUST. Confidential. My telegram of to-day.† Following from Prime Minister for [your Prime Minister] [President of Executive Council]:—

Begins: His Majesty's Government will take Report of Imperial Economic Committee on Meat most carefully into consideration together with the General Report of the Committee, but they feel bound to state at once that they cannot see their way to adopt the recommendation that the existing legislation regulating the import of live cattle into the United Kingdom should be reconsidered.

This question was fully discussed less than two years ago at the Imperial Economic Conference of 1923, when Sir Robert Sanders explained on behalf of His Majesty's Government that agricultural interests were strongly opposed to any extension of the strict limits imposed by the Importation of Animals Act, 1922, or even to the making of an Order admitting breeding cattle from Canada under Section 2 of that Act.

The Conference recognized that His Majesty's Government were fully entitled to have regard primarily to the interests of their own producers in this matter, and confined its recommendation on this subject to a resolution advocating the promotion of inter-Imperial trade in pedigree stock throughout the Empire on reciprocal terms. Effect has been given to this Resolution, so far as His Majesty's Government are concerned, by the passing of the Importation of Pedigree Animals Act this year.

To-day agricultural interests are as definitely opposed to any extension of the existing system as they were in 1923, and I could hold out no hope that the present Parliament would be ready to take the action required to alter the status quo with regard to the importation of livestock from the Dominions.—BALDWIN. Ends.

TELEGRAM.

7TH DECEMBER. Following from my Prime Minister:—

Begins: Commonwealth Government notes with pleasure advances made towards the furtherance of inter-Imperial trade as evidenced by the publication of recommendations of the Imperial Economic Committee. We note with pleasure affirmation of principle of consumption of Empire produce in the United Kingdom. Desire to know what steps your Government propose to take in connexion with these recommendations. Is it proposed to continue meetings of Committee or form sub-committees to deal with special subjects? If the latter, shall be obliged if you will advise at earliest possible date subjects to be dealt with so that ample opportunity will be given for preparation of material in connexion with the subjects to be considered.

My Government sincerely trust that this important subject will not be allowed to rest at the stage reached, namely, mere publication of Resolution but that such Resolution will be translated into action. We confidently hope that steps will be taken immediately to give effect to the spirit which animated the proceedings of the Conference and setting up machinery for furtherance of inter-Imperial trade. Ends.

23RD OCTOBER. Confidential. My telegram 8th October, 1924.* Understood that Sir William Mercer now anxious to retire from Chairmanship of Pacific Cable Board. The question of appointment of successor therefore arises. As your Prime Minister knows it has not yet been found possible to settle the terms of the proposed legislation to amend the constitution of the Board and the appointment therefore falls to be made under existing legislation. Person who occurs to us as being very suitable candidate for appointment is Sir Matthew Nathan who will shortly retire from the Governorship of Queensland. Should be glad if you would ascertain confidentially as soon as possible your Prime Minister's views so that if he and other Prime Ministers agree steps may be taken to sound Nathan.

Similar telegram sent to other Dominions concerned, and copy being sent to High Commissioner confidentially.—AMERY.

[MY LORD,] [SIR,]

Downing Street, 2nd May, 1925.

WITH reference to my predecessor's [Confidential (2)] [Confidential] despatch of the 13th October* on the subject of the discontinuance of the use of the 450-metres wave length by ships near the coast, I have the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [you,] to be laid before your Ministers, a copy of a Note from the United States Government on the subject together with a copy of a despatch to His Majesty's Ambassador at Washington conveying the views of His Majesty's Government on the proposals contained in the United States Note. A copy of a despatch to His Majesty's representatives in Italy, France, Germany, Holland, Belgium, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Spain and Portugal, is also enclosed.

2. His Majesty's Government would be glad to learn whether your Government desire that steps should be taken for the conclusion of similar formal reciprocal arrangements as between [Canada] [Newfoundland] and the United States (a) in any case as regards the 450-metres wave length and (b) as regards the 300-metres wave length if the proposal is pursued, and also as between [Canada] [Newfoundland] and such European countries as may be disposed to conclude arrangements, as regards discontinuance of the use either of the 450-metres wave length or of the 300-metres wave length, or of both.

[To Canada only: 3. In this connexion I should explain that the phrase "formal reciprocal arrangements" has been used in relation to the 450-metres wave length in paragraph 3 of the draft Note to the United States Government enclosed, as it is gathered from paragraph 3 of Sir Joseph Pope's letter enclosed in your despatch No. 100 of the 11th March, 1924,† that an informal arrangement already exists between Canada and the United States.]

[4.] [3.] Should your Ministers consider it desirable to conclude a reciprocal arrangement on the same lines as between Canada and Newfoundland, to apply to Canadian and Newfoundland ships when off the coasts of Newfoundland and Canada respectively, they will, no doubt, communicate direct with the [Newfoundland] [Canadian] Government on the matter.

[5.] [4.] A similar despatch is being sent to [the Governor of Newfoundland] [the Governor-General of Canada.]

Enclosure 1 in No. 286.

EXCELLENCY,

Department of State, Washington, 9th December, 1924.

I HAVE the honour to refer to your Note No. 884, dated 1st October, 1924, stating that reciprocal arrangements have been concluded between His Majesty's Government and the Government of Canada, whereby all British vessels, including those owned and registered in the Dominion, are prohibited from using the 450-metre wave length, except in so far as this may be necessary for direction finding purposes, when within 250 miles of the British and Canadian coasts. You stated that the object of this agreement was to lessen interference with radio broadcasting programs. You inquired whether this Government would be disposed to co-operate by concluding a similar reciprocal arrangement with His Majesty's Government.

The appropriate authorities of this Government have considered the matter, and I take pleasure in stating that they are favourably disposed towards the conclusion of such an arrangement with His Majesty's Government. A regulation on this subject applying to American vessels was published on page 13 of the Radio Service Bulletin for 2nd June, 1924. The regulation reads as follows:

"The 450-metre wave length should not be used for communicating with stations in this country but may be used in foreign waters. The 800-metre wave length should be used for compass work only in this country, but may be used for other traffic with foreign stations if permitted under foreign regulations. All commercial radio operators will please bear this in mind."

A copy of the Radio Service Bulletin containing this Regulation is enclosed.

It is observed that the proposal you submit provides that the 450-metre wave length may be used for direction finding purposes. The Resolution above set forth does not permit the use of the 450-metre wave length by American vessels for direction finding purposes except in foreign waters.

I shall appreciate it if you will inform me whether your Government would be disposed to prohibit the use of the 450-metre wave length for direction finding purposes when within 250 miles of the coasts of the United States.

From your communication it appears that you propose that the arrangement should be concluded with His Majesty's Government. As Canada has concluded a similar agreement with His Majesty's Government I should be pleased if the reciprocal arrangement could be made broad enough to apply to both His Majesty's Government and the Government of Canada. I shall be glad to receive an expression of your views on this suggestion.

It is believed that it would be desirable to include a provision prohibiting the use of the 300-metre wave length in similar cases. The use of the 300-metre wave length has decreased greatly since the International Radio Convention was adopted in 1912. The entire abolition of its use by ships at this time would affect only a very few vessels. The provisions on this subject contained in Articles II and III of the Regulations annexed to the International Radio Telegraph Convention concluded at London on 5th July, 1912, read as follows:

Article II.

"Two wave lengths, one of 600 metres and the other of 300 metres, are authorized for general public service. Every coastal station opened to such service shall be equipped in such manner as to be able to use these two wave lengths, one of which shall be designated as the normal wave length of the station."

* * * * *

Article III.

"1. Every station on shipboard shall be equipped in such manner as to be able to use wave lengths of 600 metres and of 300 metres. The first shall be the normal wave length and may not be exceeded for transmission except in the case referred to under Article XXXV (Paragraph 2)."

* * * * *

"3. Vessels of small tonnage which are unable to use a wave length of 600 metres for transmission, may be authorised to employ exclusively the wave length of 300; they must be able to receive a wave length of 600 metres."

It is provided in Article 17 of the Convention that the provisions of Article 17 of the International Telegraph Convention of St. Petersburg of 10th-22nd July, 1875, shall be applicable to international radio telegraphy. Article 17 of the International Telegraph Convention reads as follows:

"Article 17.—The High Contracting Parties reserve respectively the right to enter among themselves into special arrangements of any kind with regard to points of the service which do not interest the States generally."

It is believed that an agreement of the character above suggested is warranted under the provisions of Article 17.

With respect to the laws of the United States applicable to this proposal, I may state that the Act of Congress approved 13th August, 1912, provides in Section 4 as follows:

"Every ship station, except as hereinafter provided, and every coast station open to public service shall be prepared to use two sending wave lengths, one of three hundred metres and one of six hundred metres, as required by the International Convention in force: Provided, That the Secretary of Commerce may, in his discretion, change the limit of wave length reservation made by regulations first and second to accord with any international agreement to which the United States is a party."

These requirements may, however, be waived by the Secretary of Commerce under the provisions in the second paragraph of Section 4, which reads:

"The Secretary of Commerce may, in his discretion, waive the provisions of any or all of these regulations when no interference of the character above-mentioned can ensue."

The National Radio Conference, which met in Washington 6th to 10th October, 1924, made the following recommendation regarding the use of the 300-metre wave length:

"In order to do away with the interference in broadcasting by radiotelegraphic code signals used chiefly in marine communication, the conference recommends that 1,000 kilocycles (300 metres) which falls within the above band be discontinued for marine use, this frequency being left exclusively for broadcasting; 667 kilocycles (450 metres), which up to a short time ago was likewise used for marine communication, has already been discontinued."

It is felt, therefore, that consideration may well be given to the negotiation of a special arrangement which would cover both of these wave lengths, such arrangements between individual countries concerned being permitted under the terms of the Radio Convention. I shall be grateful if you will be so good as to take steps with a view to having the matter considered, and inform me concerning the views of your Government regarding it.

I shall also be pleased to receive a draft of the proposed reciprocal arrangement which I believe could be put into effect by an exchange of notes.

Accept, &c.,

CHARLES E. HUGHES.

The Right Honourable

Enclosure 2 in No. 286.

(No. 622.)

SIR,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 21st April, 1925.

HIS MAJESTY'S Government have had under consideration the note from the United States Government enclosed in Your Excellency's despatch No. 1843 of 12th December last, regarding the proposed reciprocal arrangement for the prevention of interference with wireless broadcasting.

2. It appears that the United States Government are under some misapprehension as regards the precise nature of the proposals put forward in my predecessor's telegram of 24th September last and communicated to them by you in your note of 1st October.

3. I shall accordingly be glad if you will address a further communication to them on the lines of the enclosed draft note.

I am, &c.,
(For the Secretary of State),

G. H. VILLIERS.

His Excellency

The Right Honourable

Sir Esme Howard, G.C.M.G., K.C.B.,

&c., &c., &c.

SIR,

State Department, Washington, April, 1925.

HIS MAJESTY'S Government have had under consideration the note which Your Excellency was so good as to address to me on 12th December last, in regard to the proposed reciprocal arrangement for the prevention of interference with wireless broadcasting. It appears to them that the United States Government are under some misapprehension as regards the precise nature of the proposals for such an arrangement which I had the honour to lay before you in my note of 1st October last.

2. The exception therein mentioned that the 450-metre wave should be available for direction finding purposes did not in fact apply to British ships in waters within 250 miles of the East Coast of America, as seems to have been assumed by the United States Government. The agreement arrived at with the Government of the Dominion of Canada provided that the use of the wave of 450 metres should be prohibited for all purposes on ships registered in Great Britain, so long as they were within 250 miles of the coasts of Canada and Newfoundland, on the understanding that ships registered in Canada, when within 250 miles of the coasts of the British Isles, should be forbidden to use that wave except when necessary for the purpose of obtaining bearings from British direction finding stations, which at that time were all working on the 450-metres wave. This exception is no longer necessary as all British direction finding stations have been transferred to other waves.

3. His Majesty's Government are prepared to make similar reciprocal arrangements with the Government of the United States; such arrangements, if made, would apply in the first instance only to ships registered in Great Britain and Northern Ireland. His Majesty's Government understand, however, that similar arrangements have already been introduced as regards ships registered in Canada when within 250 miles of the United States coast. They are in communication with the Governments of Canada and Newfoundland with a view to ascertaining whether those Governments desire to conclude similar formal reciprocal arrangements with the United States Government as regards ships registered in Canada and Newfoundland respectively.

4. So far as His Majesty's Government are aware, the number of British ships, other than those registered in Great Britain and Northern Ireland, Canada and Newfoundland, which visit the Western Atlantic is negligible; but if experience should show that any appreciable interference arose from the transmissions of such ships, His Majesty's Government would be prepared, at the request of the United States Government, to consult the Dominions or Colonies concerned with a view to the further extension of the reciprocal arrangements.

5. His Majesty's Government are favourably disposed to the proposal that the reciprocal arrangements should be extended to cover the 300-metre wave; but as, for the reasons stated below, some difficulties are likely to be experienced in European waters in this connexion, it is suggested that the original proposal should be adopted forthwith and the question of extending it to cover the use of the 300 metre should be pursued independently.

6. Although the 300-metre wave is not used to any large extent by ships registered in Great Britain and Northern Ireland, it is used at present for certain railway ferry services between the British Islands and the continent of Europe. Some continental coast stations and most trawlers and other fishing vessels of French nationality appear to be equipped for the use of that wave and to listen on that wave.

7. The question of the waves to be used for communication to and from ships at sea will no doubt be fully discussed at the next International Radiotelegraph Conference; and it seems doubtful whether any general arrangement for the prohibition for the use of the 300-metre wave could be concluded in advance of that Conference, especially having regard to the fact that the use of the 300-metre wave is specifically provided for in the existing Radiotelegraphic Convention. Apparently, therefore, any such prohibition would necessarily be subject to a proviso permitting the use of the 300-metre wave for the purpose of calling European stations which listen only on that wave. His Majesty's Government are at present endeavouring to arrange for the alteration of the wireless stations connected with the railway ferry services referred to above so as to enable them to use the 800-metre wave; but these arrangements have not yet been completed.

8. In these circumstances it seems questionable whether any advantage would accrue to this country by the immediate conclusion of a reciprocal arrangement between His Majesty's Government and the United States Government in regard to the 300-metre wave, but if, after consideration of these facts, the United States Government still desire to enter into such an agreement subject to necessary limitations, His Majesty's Government would raise no objection.

9. In the meantime His Majesty's Government are ascertaining whether the Governments of the maritime countries of Western Europe are willing to co-operate in a scheme for the discontinuance of the use of the 300-metre wave.

[My Lord,] [Sir,]

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 21st April, 1925.

In order to reduce interference with the reception of programmes broadcast by wireless telephony, His Majesty's Government have concluded an agreement with the Government of the Dominion of Canada under which British ships registered in Great Britain and Northern Ireland are prohibited from using the 450-metres wave within 250 miles of the coast of Canada on a reciprocal undertaking that Canadian ships will be prohibited from using that wave within 250 miles of the British Isles, except in so far as it may be necessary for direction finding purposes. No British direction finding station is now working on that wave.

2. Similar arrangements are also in force as regards Newfoundland and will probably be made in the near future with the Government of the United States.

3. These special arrangements are regarded by His Majesty's Government as being in accordance with the provisions of the International Radiotelegraph Convention, which lays down that the provisions of Article 17 of the International Telegraph Convention of St. Petersburg, 1875, shall be applicable to international radiotelegraphy, and consequently the contracting parties have the right to enter, among themselves, into special arrangements of any kind with regard to points of the service which do not interest all the contracting parties.

4. The Government of Canada have expressed a desire that a similar reciprocal arrangement should be concluded with the governments of the maritime countries of Western Europe. It has moreover been suggested that the arrangements should be extended to cover the use of the 300-metre wave, and should, if practicable, be brought into operation in advance of the next International Radiotelegraph Conference, at which no doubt the general question of the waves to be used for ship and shore communication will come under review.

5. His Majesty's Government would suggest that arrangements might be made for the provisional adoption by the principal countries concerned of a spark wave of 220 metres, which was specifically reserved for ship communications in the Draft Regulations prepared at the Washington Conference of December, 1920, for the use of fishing and other vessels, in lieu of the 300-metre wave referred to in Article 3 (paragraph 3) of the International Regulations annexed to the 1912 Convention.

6. I shall be glad if [Your Lordship] [Your Excellency] [you] will communicate the foregoing to the Government to which you are accredited and will invite their views in the matter. You should explain that in so far as ships registered in Great Britain and Northern Ireland are concerned, there would be no serious difficulty in giving effect to the proposals at short notice, on the understanding that it might be necessary for ships to use the 300-metre wave for the purpose of calling any European stations which continued to listen only on that wave, until such time as the listening wave for those stations could be altered to the 600-metres or 800-metres wave, and you should add that steps are being taken to ascertain the views of the Governments [omit in each despatch the Government to which the addressee is accredited] of Italy, France, Germany, Holland, Belgium, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Spain and Portugal in the matter.

SIR,

Ottawa, 23rd June, 1925.

WITH reference to your Confidential despatch of the 2nd May,* on the subject of the discontinuance of the use of certain radio wave lengths by ships near the coast, I have the honour to inform you that the Canadian Government would be glad if His Majesty's Government would take steps to conclude formal reciprocal arrangements between Canada and the United States, and also between Canada and Italy, France, Germany, Holland, Belgium, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Spain and Portugal:—

(a) In respect of discontinuance of the use of the 450 metre wave length;

(b) in respect of discontinuance of the use of the 300 metre wave length;

the reciprocal arrangements in each case to be similar to the arrangements which have been or which may be entered into between His Majesty's Government and the countries above mentioned.

* No. 286.

In accordance with paragraph 4 of your despatch under reference, the Dominion Government is communicating directly with the Government of Newfoundland in regard to the conclusion of a similar reciprocal arrangement between Canada and Newfoundland.

[MY LORD,] [SIR,]

Downing Street, 7th August, 1925.

WITH reference to my Confidential despatch of the 2nd May,* [To Canada: and to the Deputy Governor-General's Confidential despatch of the 23rd June,†] I have the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [you,] to be laid before your Ministers, a copy of a note from the United States Government on the subject of the proposed reciprocal arrangement for the prevention of interference with wireless broadcasting.

2. The terms of the reply to the United States note are still under consideration here; but it is hoped that it will be found possible to secure that the proposed arrangement as between the United States and Great Britain and Northern Ireland should come into force as from the 1st September.

[To Canada: 3. At the same time steps would be taken, as requested in the Deputy Governor-General's despatch of the 23rd June,† to conclude a similar arrangement on behalf of the Canadian Government as between the United States and Canada, to take effect from the same date; a further communication will be sent to you by telegraph on this point.]

[4.] [3.] I take this opportunity to enclose a copy of a note received from the French Government on the subject of the similar arrangement proposed to them.

I have, &c.,
L. S. AMERY.

[33337]

Enclosure 1 in No. 288.

SIR,

Department of State, Washington, 1st July, 1925.

I BEG to refer to Sir Esme Howard's note No. 475 dated 9th May, 1925, and to this Department's note dated 23rd May, 1925, concerning the proposed reciprocal arrangement for the prevention of interference with radio broadcasting by prohibiting vessels of the United States and of Great Britain from using the 450 metre wave length while within 250 miles of the coasts of the United States and of Great Britain.

I have received communications from the interested departments of this Government regarding the matter, and I am now prepared to state that this Government desires to have an arrangement with Great Britain and Northern Ireland and with Canada and Newfoundland as soon as possible, whereby the use of the 450 metre wave length will be discontinued for maritime service within 250 miles of the coasts of the United States, and of the other Governments concerned.

With regard to the proposal to prohibit the use of the 300 metre wave length, I am informed that at the Third National Radio Conference in the United States it was found that the 300 metre wave length was no longer necessary on American ships, and it was recommended that the use of this wave length by American ships be prohibited. The Department of Commerce no longer requires American ships to be equipped to use the 300 metre wave length. As the 300 metre wave length is within the band devoted to radio broadcasting in the United States, the use of it within 250 miles of the coasts of the United States causes serious interference with that important public service.

Although it may be necessary to make exceptions respecting the prohibition of the use of the 300 metre wave length to allow for situations in Europe and elsewhere it is considered highly desirable that the arrangement shall also prohibit the use of the 300 metre wave length within 250 miles of the coasts of the United States.

In the circumstances, I suggest that the proposed arrangement prohibit the use of both the 450 and 300 metre wave lengths by ships registered in Great Britain and Northern Ireland when they are within 250 miles of the coasts of the United States, that the use of the 450 metre wave lengths by vessels of American registry shall be prohibited when they are within 250 miles of the coasts of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and that the use of the 300 metre wave length by American vessels shall be prohibited within the same distance of these British coasts except for zones or areas to be designated by your Government. In case this proposal is accepted, I shall be glad to be informed whether you will be good enough to send me a draft for the proposed arrangement, as I understand that similar arrangements have already been concluded by your Government on this subject.

With reference to the statement in Sir Esme Howard's note dated 9th May, 1925, that communications have been addressed to the Governments of Canada and Newfoundland with a view to ascertaining whether these Governments desire to conclude similar formal reciprocal arrangements with the United States as regards ships registered in Canada and in Newfoundland respectively I, shall be grateful if you will inform me whether replies have been received to these inquiries.

Accept, &c.,

[MY LORD,] [SIR,]

Downing Street, 17th August, 1925.

WITH reference to my Confidential despatch of the 7th August,* and previous correspondence regarding the prevention of interference with wireless broadcasting, I have the honour to request [Your Excellency,] [you,] to inform your Ministers that arrangements are being made for the prohibition on and after the 1st September of the use of the 300 metres wave by ships, the wireless installation on which is operated under licence from the Postmaster-General, within 250 miles of the coasts of Canada and Newfoundland.

[To Canada: 2. It is assumed, in the light of the Deputy Governor-General's Confidential despatch of the 23rd June,† that this arrangement is in accordance with the wishes of your Ministers, and that they would be willing to issue similar instructions prohibiting the use of the 300 metre wave by Canadian ships within 250 miles of the coasts of this country.]

[To Newfoundland: 2. It is assumed that your Ministers will see no objection to this arrangement, which is supplementary to the arrangement referred to in paragraph 2 of my predecessor's Confidential despatch of the 13th October, 1924,‡ regarding the 450 metres wave; and it is hoped that your Ministers will agree to arrange for the discontinuance of the use of both the 450 metres and the 300 metres wave by Newfoundland ships when within 250 miles of the coasts of this country.]

3. In this connexion I should explain that the exception originally proposed to the restriction on the use of the 450 metres wave near the coasts of this country, viz., that that wave might be used for direction finding purposes, is no longer necessary since all British direction finding stations which formerly worked on the 450 metres wave have now been transferred to other waves.

4. I take this opportunity to enclose a copy of a note received from the Belgian Government on the subject of the proposed arrangement with Belgium regarding the discontinuance of the use by ships of the 450 and 300 metres wave lengths.

I have, &c.,

L. S. AMERY.

MONSIEUR LE CHARGÉ D'AFFAIRES,

Le 25 juillet, 1925.

Me référant à la lettre que Sir George Grahame a bien voulu adresser à mon prédécesseur, le 23 avril dernier, j'ai l'honneur de vous faire connaître que l'Administration des télégraphes et des téléphones de Belgique ne voit pas d'inconvénient à interdire l'usage de l'onde de 450 m. à moins de 250 milles des côtes pour les communications autre que celles relatives au service radiogoniométrique.

La situation est différente pour l'onde de 300 m. car le trafic dans la mer du Nord est trop intense pour que cette longueur puisse simplement être supprimée. Il faudrait la remplacer par une autre (celle de 220 mètres par exemple), mais cela entraînerait d'importantes et coûteuses modifications aux divers postes côtiers et flottants. Les frais seraient réellement trop élevés pour que l'Administration précitée puisse imposer ces modifications aux navires de faible tonnage, en vue de transformations qui seraient, en réalité provisoire.

L'emploi de l'onde amortie de 220 m. serait d'ailleurs de nature à nuire, en Belgique, au développement de la télégraphie et de la téléphonie sans fil aussi bien pour les besoins industriels et commerciaux, auxquels une longueur d'onde de 150 à Les émissions des bateaux de pêche (postes à étincelles) interféreraient notamment avec celles de la station belge de diffusion (longueur d'onde 265 m.).

COPY OF A COMMUNICATION FROM THE DANISH MINISTER FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS ADDRESSED TO HIS MAJESTY'S MINISTER, DATED 4TH SEPTEMBER, 1925.

MY LORD,

PAR une note en date du 28 avril dernier vous avez bien voulu me demander de vous renseigner sur l'attitude du Gouvernement Royal envers la proposition du Gouvernement de Sa Majesté Britannique quant à la conclusion entre les pays maritimes de l'Europe occidentale d'un accord provisoire interdisant l'usage—dans une distance de moins de 250 milles des côtes—d'une longueur d'ondes de 450 m. éventuellement aussi d'une longueur de 300 m. à la radiophonie dans la navigation.

Ayant communiqué le contenu de Votre note aux autorités compétentes j'ai l'honneur, en réponse, de vous faire savoir ce qui suit :

* No. 286.

La longueur d'ondes de 300 m. n'étant presque plus en usage dans la navigation danoise, rien ne s'oppose à l'abolition de cette longueur; d'autre part l'on n'a aucun désir d'y substituer une longueur de 220 m. surtout pas comme disposition obligatoire. Quant à la longueur de 450 m. elle tombe de plus en plus en désuétude et n'est à présent employée qu'au relèvement et à d'autres trafics spéciaux; or, le relèvement se fait aussi bien et même mieux avec l'autre longueur d'ondes employée à cet usage, c'est-à-dire celle de 800 m. Au lieu d'abolir la longueur de 450 m. l'on aimerait plutôt seulement en restreindre l'usage à la radiophonie sur certaines distances de la côte la plus proche (comme indiqué dans la proposition Canado-Britannique) et à des heures fixées où le trafic en question n'est pas effectué, par exemple entre minuit et midi, ce qui permettrait aux navires de se servir—en dehors de ces distances et périodes—de toutes les longueurs d'ondes entre 400 et 600 m.

Les autorités compétentes danoises ont encore fait valoir qu'une modification comme celle proposée dans votre susdite note nécessite des changements radicaux des appareils installés tant dans les navires qu'aux stations télégraphiques côtières.

Pour ces raisons lesdites autorités, en considérant les difficultés techniques et économiques, hésitent à adhérer à la proposition et se demandent s'il n'y aurait pas lieu d'ajourner la décision de la question jusqu'à la réunion prochaine du congrès international de radiotélégraphie (à Washington le printemps 1926).

Veuillez agréer, etc.,
C. MOLTKE.

ON receipt of your despatch No. 97 of 21st April respecting interference with the reception of programmes broadcast by wireless telephony I duly inquired the views of the Swedish Government on the proposal to prohibit ships within 250 miles of the coast from using the 450 and 300 wave lengths, and to use a spark-wave of 220 metres instead.

2. I have now received a reply from the Swedish Government of which I have the honour to enclose a copy, herewith, in which they inform me that they see no objection to agreeing to this proposal on the assumption that it does not apply to ships of war, and that coast and shore stations called by a 220 metres wave length will be able to reply with a wave length of 600 metres. The note adds that Swedish coast and shore stations have already been instructed to make use of 450 and 300 wave lengths in cases of urgency only.

MONSIEUR LE MINISTRE,

Stockholm, le 1er septembre, 1925.

PAR lettre du 11 mai dernier, vous avez bien voulu demander à Monsieur Undén si le Gouvernement Suédois serait disposé à adhérer à un arrangement international proposé en vue d'interdire aux navires se trouvant à moins de 250 milles marine de la côte d'employer pour le service de la correspondance radiotélégraphique une longueur d'onde de 450 et de 300 mètres. Selon ledit projet d'arrangement, l'usage d'une longueur d'onde de 220 mètres serait prescrit en lieu de 300 mètres dans le cas prévu par l'article 3, alinéa 3 du règlement de service annexé à la Convention radiotélégraphique internationale du 5 juillet, 1912.

En réponse à cette lettre, j'ai l'honneur de vous faire connaître que le Gouvernement du Roi ne voit aucun obstacle à l'adhésion de la Suède à un arrangement de la nature susvisée. Le Gouvernement croit cependant devoir faire remarquer qu'il présume que ledit arrangement ne sera pas applicable aux navires de guerre (voir art. 12 de la Convention radiotélégraphique internationale) et que les stations côtières ainsi que les stations de bord appelées par une longueur d'onde de 220 mètres auront la faculté d'y répondre par une longueur d'onde de 600 mètres.

Je crois en outre devoir vous faire connaître que l'Administration centrale des télégraphes suédoise a déjà prescrit que les stations côtières et stations de bord suédoises auront seulement en cas d'urgence le droit de faire usage d'une longueur d'onde de 450 et de 300 mètres.

M. LE CHARGÉ D'AFFAIRES,

WITH reference to His Excellency's letter of 27th April, No. 145—(149/2/25), I have the honour to state as follows:—

(1) The position with regard to wireless communications on busy routes at sea, for instance in the North Sea or the Channel, have altered considerably since the International Wireless Telegraphy Agreement of 1912 came into force. More especially in view of the great increase in the use of wireless at sea and by coastal stations, the use of wireless for direction finding and the extension of broadcasting to regular shipping routes would indicate the necessity of taking certain urgent measures to improve wireless telegraphic communication with ships at sea on busy routes even in advance of the next International Wireless Agreement which should come into force in two years' time. It is agreed, as stated in paragraph 3 of the letter of 27th April, that Article 17 of the Petersburg International Telegraphic Agreement of 1875, the provisions of which also apply to international wireless telegraphy, provides authority for such provisional arrangements.

As far as the North Sea and the Channel are concerned there is urgent need from the German standpoint of measures of the following kind:—

(a) Drastic curtailment of the use of the 600 metre wave. Correspondence was exchanged on this subject between the English and German postal authorities in the months of January and February of this year at the instigation of the latter. It was proposed on the German side that the 600 metre wave should in future, except in cases of distress at sea, be confined to calling signals between wireless stations, subsequent intercommunication being carried out by higher waves, say, 660, 706, and 750 metres. The English postal authorities likewise regarded the curtailment of the use of the 600 metre wave as desirable. At the same time the English coastal stations, with the exception of the Lizard, are continuing to use wave 600 for direction finding. The German postal administration cannot endorse this action of the English postal administration, inasmuch as in the Washington Draft Agreement of 1920 (which Great Britain herself was mainly instrumental in drawing up) it was proposed that the 800 metre wave should be used for direction finding because this wave length was already being used by all the German and North American and numerous French stations for that purpose. It proved to be specially suitable for direction finding in the North Sea, so that all the German direction receivers are now tuned to that wave.

(b) The use of communication waves of 300 and 450 metres should be discontinued at once. With regard to this the following arrangement has been adopted for German wireless stations:—In order to counteract the interference of ships' wireless with the ever-increasing broadcasting stations the German postal authorities have arranged that the German coastal stations will in future abstain altogether from using wave 450 metres, and only use wave 300 metres in the case of distress at sea when satisfactory communication on wave 600 metres is impossible. Again, the stations on German ships have been instructed to make no use of wave 450 metres within the radius of German coastal stations, and to confine their use of wave 300 metres in German coastal waters to cases of distress at sea (compare notification No. 172 of the International Bureau of the World Telegraphic Union, Berne, 10th June, 1925).

(2) As regards the use of wave 220 metres instead of wave 300 metres as contemplated in Article III, paragraph 3, of the regulations for putting the International Wireless Agreement of 1912 into practice we wish to state as follows:—

Pursuant to the decision of the European Broadcasting Union at Geneva in July, 1925, where England was also represented, it may be assumed that broadcasting in European countries will be effected within waves 500 and 200 metres. If wave 220 metres is to be substituted for wave 300 metres in the case of small craft, it is absolutely certain that similar disturbances will take place as were the subject of complaint at the time on waves 300 and 450 metres. A lower wave of about 160 metres or less appears, however, to be impracticable for these ships, as the efficiency of quenched gap spark or even toned C.W. sets* on such short waves is very poor. It is also to be assumed that traffic on such a wave will probably interfere with the coming short wave wireless service. As the wireless equipment at present in use on some small ships only rarely permits the use of short waves by mere switch adjustment it would appear to be more expedient in their case too to consider the use of waves up to 600 metres. The fact that the 220 metres wave is specified for small ships in the Washington Draft of 1920 is beside the point to-day in view of the altered circumstances, as in 1920 neither the development of broadcasting nor wireless communication on short waves had been foreseen.

(3) It may be pointed out that the arrangement made by Germany in regard to wireless communication as well as direction finding for the North Sea is the same as that on the North American coast. This seemed indispensable, because the use of wireless by ships, both in the case of American ships in European waters as well as European ships in American waters, is so extensive to-day that it appeared impossible that different regulations should obtain on the coasts of the two hemispheres as it would undoubtedly lead to great uncertainty in wireless intercourse. Consequently for this reason it would appear to be urgently advisable that the other states principally concerned should adopt the American usage.

I have the honour, &c.,
KOPKE.

WITH reference to your Note of the 8th May relative to the conclusion of an agreement on a reciprocal basis in order that ships of the contracting countries should not use near the coasts wave lengths which interfere with the reception of programmes broadcast, I have the honour to inform you that the Government of the Republic are prepared from the present date to prohibit the use by Portuguese ships of the 450 metres wave within the zone of 250 miles from the coasts of Canada and England, provided it be guaranteed that English ships will, within the zone of 250 miles of the coast of Portugal, not use the wave length which will be notified to them when the conditions under which wireless communication is to be carried on in Portugal have been defined by law.

The Government of the Republic cannot, however, agree to the proposal of His Britannic Majesty's Government that, before the next International Radio-telephony Congress, the 220 metres wave length should be provisionally used instead of the 300 metres prescribed by the Convention, as only a new International Conference will be in a position to express the general opinion in a matter which is now so complex, and then only after the proposals and schemes submitted to it have been studied and discussed.

This Government's understanding of the matter is that the Danish Government have no objection to the abolition of the use of 300 metres by ships within 250 miles of the Canadian coast, also to the restriction of the use of 450 metres to the period when it is not likely to interfere with Canadian broadcasting.

* No. 298. † No. 294.

Ministry for Foreign Affairs have the honour to inform His Britannic Majesty's Embassy that, at first sight and in principle, the Royal Italian Government sees no objection to examining the desirability of prohibiting merchant vessels from using the 450 metre wave in proximity to foreign coasts, on condition, however, that the same prohibition should be imposed upon foreign merchant vessels navigating within a radius of 250 miles from the Italian coasts.

Such prohibition should, however, not be extended to the radio-goniometric service.

In spite of every good wish it would on the other hand not be possible to agree to the proposals of the Canadian Government respecting the analogous prohibition of the 300 metre wave, this wavelength being among the regular wave lengths prescribed by the International Radio-telegraphic Convention, and there being reasons of a technical nature against its abolition.

Nor is it possible to agree to the other proposal for the provisional employment by the vessels of the principal countries interested of a spark wave of 220 metres in place of the 300 metre wave referred to in Article 3 of the International Regulations annexed to the Agreement of 1912, inasmuch as the 220 metre wave has been assigned to the radio-telegraphic service of the Royal Army, by agreement between the Royal Navy and the Royal Department of Communications.

For the rest, on the other hand, the Royal Government expresses the opinion that it would be expedient to put off until the next radio-telegraphic conference all decisions required by the actual state of affairs under consideration.

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

Ministry of State, Madrid, 16th October, 1925.

IN continuation of the Note from this Ministry dated 16th August last, regarding the prohibition of the use of the 450 metre wave, I have the honour to inform Your Excellency that, according to information received by this Ministry from the Home Office, Spanish merchant ships only use the 600 metre wave in territorial as well as foreign waters, the 450 metre being used for direction-finding purposes.

In regard to any modification in the wave-length of wireless installations on ships, the above-mentioned Department is of the opinion that it would be better to wait for the next International Conference, at which these points will be considered and dealt with.

MEMORANDUM.

WITH reference to the letter from the British Minister dated the 27th April last, No. 90, in regard to the use of various wave lengths for wireless communications, the Minister for Ways and Communications ("Waterstaat") reports that the Director-General of Posts and Telegraphs has requested the companies which work Dutch wireless stations on board ships to observe the following regulations:—

1. From 7 p.m. to 11 p.m. (local time) Dutch wireless stations on board ships shall not use a wave length of 450 metres within 250 miles of the British, Canadian or Newfoundland coasts, except when it is required for wireless direction-finding purposes, while this wave length shall be used as little as possible during the other hours of the day.

2. From 7 p.m. to 11 p.m. (local time) Dutch wireless stations on ships shall not use a wave length of 300 metres within 250 miles of the British, Canadian or Newfoundland coasts, while this wave length shall be used as little as possible during the other hours of the day.

The use of a wave length of 300 metres within 250 miles of the British coast shall still be permitted for communications with Dutch coastal stations, but it must be employed as little as possible.

It should be observed in this connexion that the regulations under paragraph 2 do not apply to tugs, fishing vessels, yachts and such like. It is, namely, not feasible to limit these vessels in the use of the 300 metres wave length particularly as regards their communications with each other, while a change to a wave length of 220 metres would hardly be possible on account of technical reasons.

The following information is submitted in regard to naval communications:—

1. The wave lengths of 300 and 450 metres are normally not employed by naval vessels and coastal stations in their communications with each other.

2. In public communications, it occasionally happens that 450 metres is employed for wireless direction finding purposes, but no interference of any importance need be expected on this account, as the 800 metres wave length is being more and more employed for this purpose.

3. It is however not possible in Holland entirely to give up as well the use of the 400 metres wave length, which probably gives rise to interference, but efforts will be made to restrict the use of communications on this wave length as much as possible, particularly on board of ships in the vicinity of the English coast.

4. It is not likely that, in general practice, this wave length of 400 metres will be used in the neighbourhood of the Canadian or Newfoundland coasts.

SIR,

General Post Office, London, E.C.1.

26th October, 1925.

WITH reference to your letter of the 10th October forwarding a translation of a note from the Government of Portugal to His Majesty's Ambassador at Lisbon regarding the proposed reciprocal arrangement to prevent ships' wireless transmissions from interfering with the reception of broadcast programmes, I am directed by the Postmaster-General to say, for the information of the Secretary of State, that he notes that the Portuguese Government cannot agree, pending the next International Radio-telegraph Conference, to the suggestion that ships should use the 220 metres wave instead of the 300 metres wave prescribed by the Convention.

The Postmaster-General notes, however, that the Portuguese Government are prepared to prohibit the use by Portuguese ships of the 450 metres wave when within 250 miles of the coasts of the United Kingdom and Canada on condition that "English ships" (which expression is presumably intended to cover ships registered in the United Kingdom or Canada) are prohibited from using within 250 miles of Portugal a wave which has not yet been decided on but which will be notified when the conditions of wireless communication in Portugal have been defined by law.

The Postmaster-General thinks that it would be undesirable to give a general undertaking to prohibit the use on British ships of a wave not specified, and he suggests that further consideration of the question of concluding an agreement with Portugal on the subject should be postponed until it is known definitely what wave is to be notified by the Portuguese Government.

Copies of this letter have been sent to the Dominions Office and the Imperial Communications Committee.

I am, &c.,

F. W. PHILLIPS.

Note from Norwegian Foreign Minister to H.M. Chargé d'Affaires, 12th October, 1925.

MONSIEUR LE CHARGÉ D'AFFAIRES,

I HAD the honour to receive Minister Lindley's despatch of 4th May in which, on behalf of His Britannic Majesty's Government, he proposed to the Norwegian Government that an agreement should be concluded between the two countries to prevent interruption in broadcasting, whereby Norwegian and British ships should not use a wave length of 300 and 450 metres when they find themselves within a radius of 250 English miles from Great Britain and Norway respectively.

In this connexion I have the honour to state that the ordinary wave length for ships' installations is 600 metres. It nevertheless occurs that wave lengths of 300 as well as of 450 metres are used. Especially where traffic is large, it is regarded as an advantage to transfer to one of these wave lengths so as to avoid interruption. Moreover, it should be added that as a result of the information I have received, the cost of the alterations in the ships' apparatus involved by the adoption of the wave-length suggested by Great Britain would be very heavy.

In consequence of the above and in view of the fact that the question at issue will probably come up for discussion at the International Wireless Telegraphy Conference to be held at Washington in the spring of 1926, the Norwegian Government for its part suggests that the matter should be left to be dealt with at this Conference.

I have, &c.,

27TH FEBRUARY. Your telegram of 23rd February.*

My Ministers appreciate the courtesy of the British Government in forwarding copy of communication from the Chamber of Shipping of the United Kingdom to the President of the Board of Trade intimating that the North Atlantic lines would cordially welcome searching investigation by Imperial Shipping Committee into certain charges reported to have been made by W. T. R. Preston and pointing out that the British Government would be glad to give any facilities in their power for complete and expeditious hearing if my Ministers concur in the desirability of such an investigation.

* No. 311.

The decision of the Canadian Government to introduce Bill to aid in controlling Ocean rates originated with investigation and report of select special Committee of the House of Commons appointed in 1923 to inquire into agricultural conditions. Committee found that combine existed in the North Atlantic trade and recommended that action be taken to control its operations. In the discussion which has been set for an early date it is the intention of the Canadian Government to propose to the House of Commons to refer the Bill in question to a special committee of the House before which all interested parties will be given opportunity to appear. To this committee supplementary Preston report, to which reference is made by the Chamber of Shipping, will be submitted along with other documents. Canadian Government will welcome before the Committee to be appointed by the House representatives from the Chamber of Shipping of the United Kingdom and will be obliged if the Chamber can be so advised. If for any reason the British Government should conclude that in addition to this inquiry it would be desirable to have an investigation by Imperial Shipping Committee, my Ministers would not wish their course of action, which was decided on some time ago, to deter in any way such further investigation.—BYNG.

WITH reference to Your Excellency's telegram of the 13th of March,* and previous correspondence, I have the honour to transmit to you, to be laid before your Ministers, the accompanying copy of a letter from the President of the Board of Trade to the Chairman of the Imperial Shipping Committee requesting the Committee to investigate the question of North Atlantic shipping rates.

I have, &c.,

Enclosure in No. 316.

SIR,

13th March, 1925.

My attention was drawn by the Chamber of Shipping of the United Kingdom and the Liverpool Steam Ship Owners' Association, in a letter dated 20th February, to certain charges against the lines interested in the North Atlantic traffic reported to have been made to the Government of Canada by Mr. W. T. R. Preston. The letter stated that the North Atlantic Lines would cordially welcome a searching investigation of the charges by the Imperial Shipping Committee.

A copy of this letter was at once telegraphed to Canada with an intimation that, if the Canadian Government concurred in the desirability of such an investigation, His Majesty's Government would be glad to give any facilities in their power for a complete and expeditious hearing.

On the 27th February the Canadian Government telegraphed in reply that their decision to introduce a Bill to aid in controlling ocean rates originated with the report of a Select Committee of 1923 into agricultural conditions, and that they intended to refer the Bill to a Special Committee of the Canadian House of Commons before which all interested parties would be able to appear. The Preston report, with other documents, would be referred to this Committee. The Canadian Government would welcome representations from the Chamber of Shipping before this Committee, and asked that the Chamber might be so informed. The reply further stated that if the British Government for any reason considered that in addition to this inquiry it would be desirable to institute an investigation by the Imperial Shipping Committee, the Canadian Government would not wish to deter such further investigation in any way.

* No. 314.

The Chamber of Shipping and the Liverpool Steam Ship Owners' Association were informed of the purport of this message, and replied that they would accept the invitation to be represented before the Canadian Select Committee, but they reaffirmed the desire of the Lines that the matters in question should be investigated by the Imperial Shipping Committee, and expressed the hope that His Majesty's Government would invite the Imperial Shipping Committee to undertake such investigation.

After careful consideration I have come to the conclusion that it will be of great advantage if the issues raised are investigated by the Imperial Shipping Committee.

I therefore request that the Imperial Shipping Committee will be so good as to investigate the question of North Atlantic shipping rates and their effect on Empire trade, with special reference to the influence of the Conference system or of other forms of association on these rates and on the service provided.

I am, &c.,

P. CUNLIFFE-LISTER.

The Chairman,
Imperial Shipping Committee.

MERCHANT SHIPPING (EQUIVALENT PROVISIONS) ACT, 1925.

6347

No. 317.

BOARD OF TRADE to COLONIAL OFFICE.

[Answered by No. 318.]

Mercantile Marine Department, Board of Trade,
3, Sanctuary Buildings, Great Smith Street,
London, S.W.1, 9th February, 1925.

SIR,

I AM directed by the Board of Trade to enclose herewith a draft of a Bill which it is proposed to introduce for the purpose of taking power to make arrangements with foreign countries for the mutual acceptance of shipping regulations. The main reason for the introduction of this Bill is the fact that the Merchant Shipping Wireless Telegraphy Act, 1919, contains no provision similar to those which exist in the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894 and 1906, with reference to the acceptance of foreign tonnage, passenger and loadline certificates and of foreign regulations regarding life-saving appliances on ships. The question of making a similar arrangement regarding wireless telegraphy apparatus has arisen in connexion with the recent Decree of the French Government concerning wireless telegraphy on ships which comes into force next month (March), but as the French regulations are not in exact conformity with those in force here it has been found impossible, at the present moment, to accept the proposal of the French Government that the regulations of the two countries should be regarded as equivalent, and that an agreement for mutual recognition should be concluded.

In connexion with the draft Bill, the Board had under consideration the question of limiting the application of Clause I (b) to British ships registered in the United Kingdom, but they came to the conclusion that this is not necessary and would possibly be a disadvantage. Agreements of the kind contemplated would be agreements for the recognition of the equivalence of regulations applying to ships, and accordingly the question of the port of registry of a ship which complies with the British Regulations would not be of importance. It is the fact, for example, that the passenger ships of the Australian Commonwealth Government Line are, as a rule, surveyed in this country and hold passenger certificates from the Board of Trade, and it would be reasonable to expect a foreign Government to accept these certificates on a ship registered in Australia as readily as on one registered in the United Kingdom.

The Board have also considered the question of including in the draft Bill similar provisions for mutual recognition in regard to the shipping laws and regulations of the Dominions and Colonies; and they have come to the conclusion that it would be undesirable to deal with such a question in a Bill of this kind. The Merchant Shipping Acts already contain provision for the recognition of legislation by His Majesty's Dominions and Colonies such as, for example, Section 284 of the Merchant Shipping Act relating to passenger certificates. In that case, however, the approval of the Dominion or Colonial Regulations is not confined to their application on a ship registered in the particular Dominion or Colony concerned but applies to any ship. It is true that under the Merchant Shipping Wireless Telegraphy Act, 1919, a ship registered out of the United Kingdom is treated in the same way whether it is a British or a foreign ship, but in actual practice no difficulty has arisen under that Act, and no other matter has arisen in which extended powers in connexion with Dominion and Colonial ships has arisen. For these reasons, therefore, the Board do not think it would be desirable to extend the Bill to deal with other than foreign ships.

The Board would be glad to know at as early a date as practicable whether the Secretary of State has any observations to make on the questions raised in this letter.

I have, &c.,

G. E. BAKER.

Enclosure in No. 317.

DRAFT OF A BILL

TO PROVIDE FOR THE EXEMPTION, IN CERTAIN CIRCUMSTANCES, OF FOREIGN SHIPS FROM THE PROVISIONS OF THE MERCHANT SHIPPING ACTS.

Be it enacted, etc.

1. (1) Where His Majesty is satisfied that—

- (a) ships of a foreign country are required by the law of that country to comply with any provisions which are substantially the same as or equally effective with any provisions of the Merchant Shipping Acts which apply to foreign ships while they are within a port of the United Kingdom; and
- (b) that country has made or has undertaken to make provision for the exemption of British ships, while they are within a port of that country, from the corresponding requirement of the law of that country;

His Majesty may, by Order in Council, direct that any such provisions of the Merchant Shipping Acts as aforesaid shall not apply to any ship of that country within a port of the United Kingdom if it is proved that the ship complies with the corresponding provision of the law of that country applicable to that ship.

(2) In this Act the expression "the Merchant Shipping Acts" means the Merchant Shipping Acts, 1894 to 1923, and includes any Order in Council, rule or regulation made thereunder, and the expression "United Kingdom" means Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

2. This Act may be cited as the Merchant Shipping (Foreign Ships) Act, 1925, and shall be construed as one with the Merchant Shipping Acts, 1894 to 1923, and those Acts and this Act may be cited together as the Merchant Shipping Acts, 1894 to 1925.

No. 318.

COLONIAL OFFICE to BOARD OF TRADE.

Sir,

Downing Street, 23rd February, 1925.

I AM directed by Mr. Secretary Amery to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 9th February,* regarding the draft Merchant Shipping (Foreign Ships) Bill, and to request you to inform the Board of Trade that in Mr. Amery's view there are two points to which further consideration should be given before the Bill is introduced into Parliament.

2. In the first place it appears to Mr. Amery that the expression "British Ships" in Clause 1 (1) (b) of the draft Bill is too wide. It is conceivable that there may be British ships which do not conform to the requirements of the Imperial Merchant Shipping Acts (e.g., as regards wireless telegraphy, ships registered in Canada which need only comply with the Canadian legislation unless they visit this country), and to which, therefore, a foreign country might not wish to grant exemption from its requirements. If such a case should occur, it would seem that by Clause 1 (1) (b) of the draft Bill, His Majesty's Government would be debarred from concluding a reciprocal arrangement with such a foreign country, since it would not be possible for them to be satisfied that the country concerned has made provision for the exemption of British ships. It may be remembered that an analogous difficulty occurred in the course of the recent negotiations with the United States Government under the powers accorded to His Majesty's Government by Section 18 of the Finance Act, 1923, for the reciprocal exemption of shipping from taxation. The United States Government felt some difficulty as to the application of their legislation, which referred to "... ships documented under the laws of a foreign country which grants an equivalent exemption to citizens of the United States ...," on the ground that for the purpose in question the term "foreign country" meant the British Empire and not the United Kingdom, and that unless the whole Empire joined in the agreement it could not be made. The difficulty was surmounted by the United States Government agreeing to accept the United Kingdom as a "foreign country" for the purpose, but only after considerable delay; and the instance may serve to illustrate the kind of difficulty which might arise from the present wording of the draft Bill now under consideration. Other recent cases have occurred tending to show that it is not possible to conclude special shipping agreements with foreign countries on the basis that the foreign country is to treat all British ships alike, unless the ships of such countries receive the stipulated treatment throughout the Empire.

3. In the second place Mr. Amery's attention has been called to the terms of the despatch from the Governor-General of Canada of the 12th December, 1923,* of which a copy was enclosed in Colonial Office letter of the 12th January, 1924,† and to the reference in paragraph 3 of the Secretary of State's despatch in reply thereto of the 15th July, 1924‡ (which received the concurrence of the Board of Trade—see your letter of the 8th July§) to the impracticability of legislation on the subject of the modification or suspension of the Merchant Shipping (Wireless Telegraphy) Act, 1919. In view of this correspondence, it appears to Mr. Amery that it would be desirable to consider further whether the present opportunity might not be taken to modify the position as to the application of the Merchant Shipping (Wireless Telegraphy) Act, 1919, to British ships registered elsewhere than in the United Kingdom. For this purpose it would appear sufficient to amend Section 2 of that Act to provide that, if the legislature of a part of His Majesty's Dominions outside the United Kingdom has passed legislation under which provision regarding wireless installation is made substantially equivalent to that under Section 1 of that Act, His Majesty may by Order in Council provide that the provisions of Section 1 shall on a basis of reciprocity not be applied to a ship registered in such part of His Majesty's Dominions while within a port of the United Kingdom if it is proved that the ship complies with the corresponding provision of the law of such part applicable to that ship. A further clause would also be required making provision to enable similar treatment to be accorded to British ships registered in places outside His Majesty's Dominions where His Majesty has jurisdiction.

4. It should be added that Mr. Amery, while noting that Clause 1 of the draft Bill refers to all provisions of the Merchant Shipping Acts which apply to foreign ships while within a port of the United Kingdom, has confined the suggestion in paragraph 3 of this letter to the question of Wireless Telegraphy, on the assumption that the latter is the only point not adequately covered by existing law which need be taken into account in considering the treatment in United Kingdom ports of British ships registered outside the United Kingdom.

I am, &c.,

E. J. HARDING.

DEAR HARDING,

As I arranged with you this morning, I am sending you a copy of the correspondence with Liddell about the draft Merchant Shipping Bill on the subject of exemptions.

I think we must accept the second point raised in your official letter,|| and insert a clause empowering us to accept Dominion legislation on the subject of wireless. By the Bill we are taking power to accept foreign legislation, and we must, I think, take power to accept Dominion legislation also so far as wireless is concerned.

We can settle the form of the clause with you later on. It might be convenient to word it so that it would cover legislation by Colonies as well as legislation by Dominions, but that we can talk about later on.

On the first point raised in your official letter I am much more doubtful. Technically I expect you are right, but practically I think it may prove a very great nuisance to Dominion shipping if we are to be forced each time we have any negotiation with any foreign country about reciprocal recognition of shipping certificates to call the attention of the foreign countries to the fact that they must deal with the Dominions separately.

* 62223/23, † 62223/23, ‡ 25400/24, § 32446/24: not printed; the despatch from Canada suggested the desirability of reaching general international agreement regarding wireless telegraphy requirements on merchant ships; the reply commented, inter alia, on the difficulty of amending the Merchant Shipping Acts so as to modify British requirements on this point. || No. 318.

The foreigner will generally, unless he has some special grudge against, say, Canada or Australia, be quite willing to exempt all British ships from the particular restriction, and I think it would be a sound thing to get the concession in general terms where we can.

Moreover, if the language of the clause is quite general, it would permit France to take exception to the Canadian regulations if they wish to and exclude Canada from the reciprocal arrangement.

From the practical point of view, therefore, I think it would be better to leave the clause as it stands at present.

Yours sincerely,

C. HIPWOOD.

BILL FOR THE EXEMPTION OF FOREIGN SHIPS FROM THE REQUIREMENTS OF THE MERCHANT SHIPPING ACTS.

ORIGINALLY the first clause of the draft Bill was as follows:—

1. (1) Where His Majesty is satisfied that—

(a) ships, etc., etc., and

(b) that country has made or has undertaken to make provision for the exemption of British ships registered in the United Kingdom while they are within a port of that country, from the corresponding requirement of the law of that country.

The accompanying correspondence took place on the underlined words.

DEAR LIDDELL,

WITH reference to my letter of 23rd January, regarding the draft Bill dealing with the power of making reciprocal arrangements with foreign countries concerning Shipping Regulations, the President would like your further views on the question of the foreign exemption. The point is whether if we omit the words "registered in the United Kingdom" we should be debarred from making an agreement with a foreign country if that country did not, for example, recognize either a United Kingdom Certificate or an Australian Certificate on an Australian registered ship on the ground that Australia did not recognize her certificates. As an example of what we have in mind, I may mention that the passenger ships of the Australian Commonwealth Line, which are registered at Australian ports, take their passenger certificates from us as a rule and get an emigration clearance when "emigrant ships," although they may occasionally take out Australian passenger certificates. It might be the case that the Australian Government would not accept, say, the French Regulations, and the French, in consequence of that, refuse to accept Australian Passenger Certificates, or even our passenger certificates on an Australian registered ship. Would that fact prevent us from making an agreement with the French for the recognition of United Kingdom Certificates either on United Kingdom registered ships only, or on all British ships?

Section 445 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, contains a proviso regarding the non-application of the Section to countries which do not extend corresponding treatment to British ships. In making agreements with foreign countries for the mutual recognition of Loadline Certificates, we have never gone into the question whether those countries recognize Loadlines assigned by Straits Settlements, Australia or Hongkong, which are the only three Dominion and Colonial Regulations we recognize ourselves.

I shall be much obliged if you will let me have your views on this point.

Yours faithfully,

C. HIPWOOD.

Sir Frederick Liddell, K.C.B.

Office of the Parliamentary Counsel, Whitehall, S.W.1.

DEAR HIPWOOD,

4th February, 1925.

I AM inclined to think that the words "registered in the United Kingdom" could be safely omitted from clause 1 (1) (b) of the proposed Bill. Even if the exemption granted by (say) France was limited to ships registered in the United Kingdom, I do not think it could be contended that this was not exemption of "British ships" within the meaning of the paragraph. Of course, the insertion of the words "registered in the United Kingdom" would put the matter beyond all doubt; but it is inexpedient that the language of the Bill should differ from that Section 445 of the Merchant Shipping Act, and possibly the Dominions might say that by limiting the Bill to ships registered in the United Kingdom we were disregarding the interests of Dominion shipping.

Yours sincerely,

F. F. LIDDELL.

DEAR HARDING, Great Smith Street, London, S.W.1, 5th March, 1925.

I ENCLOSE the New Clause* which Liddell has drafted for insertion in the Bill which gives us power to accept equivalent foreign regulations.

Liddell has also altered the title of the Bill, which now reads as follows:—

MERCHANT SHIPPING (EQUIVALENT PROVISIONS) BILL.

A Bill to provide for the exemption in certain circumstances of foreign ships and British ships registered outside the United Kingdom from certain provisions of the Merchant Shipping Acts.

Would the Colonial Office kindly look at Liddell's draft clause, and would you kindly tell me as soon as possible whether they agree?

Yours sincerely,

DEAR HIPWOOD,

Downing Street, 7th March, 1925.

THANK you for your letter of the 5th† about the Merchant Shipping (Equivalent Provisions) Bill. We concur generally in the draft clause enclosed in your letter, but suggest that it might be extended to deal with British ships registered outside His Majesty's Dominions by the addition to the draft of the words underlined in the enclosed revised draft. This, we think, would meet the point raised in the last sentence of paragraph 3 of our official letter of the 23rd February.‡

Yours sincerely,

E. J. HARDING.

in Council, direct that any such provisions of the Merchant Shipping Acts as aforesaid shall not apply to any ship registered in that part of His Majesty's Dominions or in that port whilst within a port in the United Kingdom if it is proved that the ship complies with the corresponding provision of the law of the part of His Majesty's Dominions or the law in force in the port in which the ship is registered.

25TH JUNE. Confidential. My despatch 3rd March, Dominions 91, Confidential.* Activities of United States Customs Agents in this country. United States Government have now addressed to His Majesty's Government and to various European Governments official request for recognition of such agents as members of diplomatic body. His Majesty's Government are about to reply in concert, it is hoped, with other Governments concerned, that they are unable to grant request on the grounds (a) that these agents do not seem to be connected with, or necessary to the discharge of, the normal diplomatic functions of a diplomatic representative, and (b) that in any case certain of the activities of these officials are open to strong objection (i.e. their demand to be furnished with particulars of cost of production under threat that importation of goods will be prohibited if particulars withheld). His Majesty's Government propose at the same time in separate communication to United States Government to set out what they understand to be proper limits of the functions of such agents, viz., inquiries into home consumption value, export value, and United States value of goods exported from this country to United States. In this connexion United States officials in informal communications on the subject have referred to the work in the United States of the Customs Agents of Canada and the Commonwealth of Australia. His Majesty's Government would like, therefore, to include some reference to what are understood to be the duties of such agents. The following paragraph has been drafted for this purpose based on information supplied in latter part of 1923 by High Commissioners for Canada and the Commonwealth in reply to inquiries made when difficulty first arose in case of Singer Company. See my despatch 7th August, 1924, Dominions 375, Confidential†:—

Begin: Before closing this note I think it well to remove the misunderstanding which seems to exist in the minds of the United States Government as to the activities of the Customs Agents of Canada and the Commonwealth of Australia in the United States. I have the honour to point out that these agents do not extend their activities so far as to demand particulars as to costs of production of individual firms though it may happen that on occasions they ask whether a firm is prepared to volunteer information on the subject. There is further this great difference between their requests and the demands sometimes made by the United States Customs representatives, viz., that the sanction involved in the exclusion of a firm's goods from the Dominion concerned does not follow on a refusal to give the information. Ends.

Enclosure 1 in No. 328.

(No. 39.)

SIR,

London, 18th May, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to state that by an Act of Congress approved 13th January, 1925, it was provided that agents of the Customs Division of the United States Treasury stationed abroad and hitherto entitled Customs Representatives should be regularly and officially attached to American Diplomatic Missions. The title of Customs Attaché has been provided for them, and I am directed to inform you of the appointment of the following Customs Attaché and his assistants, whose headquarters will be at 11, Haymarket, S.W.1. I am further directed to request their recognition in their respective capacities by the appropriate British authorities:

C. Bernard Wait, Customs Attaché.

Thomas P. Drew, Assistant Customs Attaché.

Norman E. Kane, Assistant Customs Attaché.

Francis B. Laughlin, Assistant Customs Attaché.

Roy W. Fischer, Assistant Customs Attaché.

In this connexion I venture to refer to correspondence which has passed between my Government and His Majesty's Embassy at Washington, in particular a note dated 31st March, 1925, from Sir Esmé Howard and the reply of Mr. Kellogg. My Government expresses the hope that the tentative attitude of His Majesty's Government towards the appointment of these Attachés may be modified in view of the full explanation which I propose to enter into concerning their activities.

The duties of these Attachés will be in general the following:

Under Section 402 of the United States Tariff Act of 1922 they ascertain the facts relative to the "market value" of merchandise exported to the United States from the countries to which they are assigned; the conditions of sale and shipment thereof; the correctness of invoices executed by shippers; and any other facts deemed necessary to a proper appraisal, examination and classification of the merchandise. This information is embodied in reports submitted to the Secretary of the Treasury for reference to appraising and other customs officers at ports of importation in the United States. They advise foreign exporters and shippers as to the United States Tariff Law and invoice requirements. By direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, upon request from appraising officers, or upon their own motion when they have reason to believe that fraud or undervaluation exists, they make special investigations in the above subjects as well as other violations of the Customs Revenue Laws and improper invoicing of merchandise, and, when necessary, inquire into the cost of production of merchandise. The facts ascertained and reported by them are also used in connexion with the enforcement of the statutes of the United States intended to prevent dumping of foreign merchandise into the United States at less than a fair value.

I have the honour to express the hope that His Majesty's Government will find agreeable the proposed procedure and will accord recognition to the Customs Attachés as desired. I hold myself in readiness to discuss this matter, which my Government considers of great importance, at any time which is convenient to you.

I have, &c.,

A. B. HOUGHTON.

The Right Honourable

Austen Chamberlain,

&c., &c., &c.

Enclosure 2 in No. 328.

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 1st July, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of Your Excellency's note of the 18th May, in which you informed me that by an Act of Congress of 13th January, 1925, it was provided that agents of the Customs Division of the United States Treasury Department stationed abroad should be regularly and officially attached to the United States Diplomatic Missions under the title of Customs Attachés. In the same note you further informed me of the appointment of one Customs Attaché and four Assistant Customs Attachés as members of your diplomatic staff and requested that they should be accorded recognition by His Majesty's Government in their respective capacities. In a subsequent note dated 11th June you notified to me the appointment of a fifth Assistant Customs Attaché for whom recognition was also requested.

2. I have the honour to inform you that His Majesty's Government much regret that they are unable to accede to the request of your Government for recognition of these agents as members of the Diplomatic Body in this capital. It is the practice of His Majesty's Government to accord diplomatic privilege to foreign representatives in this country for the purpose of carrying out diplomatic duties. His Majesty's Government further extend the diplomatic privilege to such members of the staff of a foreign representative as may be required to assist him in carrying out these duties. It does not seem from the terms of your note of 18th May that the duties assigned to the officials whom it is proposed to attach to your staff as Customs Attachés are of a diplomatic character or are connected with, or necessary to, the discharge of the diplomatic functions attaching to the position of an ambassador. The duties assigned to them appear to arise rather from the domestic legislation of the United States and to be of a purely administrative and fiscal character. I must point out that to grant the request of your Government would imply an unlimited extension of diplomatic functions and immunities.

3. For this reason alone His Majesty's Government would find themselves reluctantly compelled to decline the request of the United States Government. But there are certain aspects of the duties of the customs agents to which, as you are aware, His Majesty's Government have felt bound to take strong exception. I regret that the proposed new procedure, particulars of which were semi-officially communicated to this department by your Embassy on 18th May, has not removed the objections which my Government entertain to these activities, and for this reason also they are unable to recognize the officers in question as members of your diplomatic staff.

4. On this aspect of the matter I shall have the honour to address to you a separate communication, setting out in detail, on the one hand the attitude of His Majesty's Government towards certain types of inquiry carried out by the agents of the Customs Division of the United States Treasury Department in this country, and on the other a solution which would appear to His Majesty's Government both equitable and practical.

I have, &c.,

His Excellency

The Honourable Alanson B. Houghton,
&c., &c., &c.

Enclosure 3 in No. 328.

YOUR EXCELLENCY,

Foreign Office, S.W.1, 1st July, 1925.

IN connexion with the note which I have had the honour of addressing to Your Excellency under to-day's date regarding the request of the United States Government that diplomatic status should be granted to the representatives of the Customs Division of the United States Treasury Department, I beg leave to inform you that His Majesty's Government have given careful consideration to the character of the duties performed by these officials in this country.

2. His Majesty's Government observe from your note of 18th May that it is one of the duties of the officials in question to inquire into the cost of production of merchandise exported to the United States, if information on this point should be considered necessary for appraisement purposes under the United States Tariff Act of 1922.

3. You are aware that His Majesty's Government have already found it necessary to protest against the prosecution of this particular form of inquiry. The inquiry amounts to a demand on British firms to divulge trade secrets, accompanied by a warning that, if the demand is not complied with by the exporting firm, the goods of that firm may (under the interpretation given to section 510 of the Tariff Act) be denied entry into the United States. I invite your attention to Sir Esmé Howard's note to your government of 12th July, 1924, and the semi-official communication which I had the honour to address to your predecessor on 17th February last.

4. So far the representations of His Majesty's Government have not resulted in agreement to suspend the activities to which His Majesty's Government must take exception on principle. But the United States Government have now proposed a new procedure (details of which have been furnished to me unofficially by your embassy) which they hope may lead His Majesty's Government to modify their attitude.

5. I regret to inform you that a careful study of the proposed new procedure has failed to remove the objections felt by His Majesty's Government.

6. The proposal, if I have understood it correctly, deals with two alternative contingencies: (1) the case of His Majesty's Government granting general permission for the representatives of the Customs Division of the United States Treasury Department to inquire into the cost of production of exporting British firms for purposes of appraisement; (2) the case of His Majesty's Government declining to grant such permission.

7. In the first case the proposed procedure would be as follows. The United States Customs representatives would, when they deemed it necessary, approach the exporting firm with a request to investigate their costs of production. Should the exporting firm refuse, the refusal would be reported to you. You would then make representations to His Majesty's Government, upon whom would be placed the duty of overcoming the firm's objections. If the efforts of His Majesty's Government proved fruitless, the Customs representatives would refrain from making further demands for investigation, merely reporting the refusal to the United States Customs authorities.

8. I regret to inform you that this procedure would not meet the objections felt by His Majesty's Government. These objections apply in principle to the prosecution of this form of inquiry with its element of compulsion, and make it impossible for His Majesty's Government to grant authority of the kind contemplated. We are led, therefore, to the consideration of the second contingency.

9. According to the proposal now made with a view of inducing His Majesty's Government to modify their attitude, the United States Government would give instructions that inquiries into the cost of production should not be attempted in the event of His Majesty's Government withholding their permission. It is, however, made clear that the inability of the Customs representatives to obtain information regarding the costs of production (where they consider such information necessary) would in any given case involve the exclusion of an exporter's goods from the United States.

10. His Majesty's Government regret that this new procedure does not appear to show any advance in substance on the old. In the first place, it is, of course, clear that even in the case of the original procedure, the United States Customs agents would not have prosecuted the inquiries into costs of production if His Majesty's Government had found it necessary to place an embargo on this part of their activities. In the second place, the intention of the United States Government to give instructions that the inquiries shall not be made, is scarcely material since the sole result would be the automatic exclusion from the United States of the goods of any firm whose costs of production the United States authorities would otherwise have investigated.

11. His Majesty's Government are most anxious that the United States Government should remove this penalty, the severity of which they cannot but think excessive. Though the proposals now conveyed to me by you contain no suggestion that the United States Government are ready to do this, yet, in my desire to reach some solution satisfactory to both parties, I venture to recall to your attention the suggestion made in the memorandum accompanying my semi-official note of 17th February to which I have already referred.

12. In that memorandum the following passage occurred:—

"When the Safeguarding of Industries Act, 1921, was before Parliament a similar question was raised in this country with regard to the assessment of dumping duty in the ordinary sense. There was then a considerable body of opinion both in the country and in Parliament prepared to acquiesce in the imposition of a dumping duty when foreign goods were sold in this country below their actual cost of production, on the ground that to sell below the cost of production was in fact dumping as commonly understood, whereas to sell at a price lower than the selling price in the country of origin but not below the cost of production need not necessarily be so regarded, but His Majesty's Government felt that it would be impossible to require that British official representatives should make investigations of such a character in a foreign country where His Majesty's Government had no jurisdiction. While therefore in the Act the expression 'Cost of Production' was retained, it was defined arbitrarily as the 'Current sterling equivalent of 95 per cent. of the wholesale price at the works . . .'

His Majesty's Government of course do not desire to offer any objection to the requests of the United States Authorities for such information as they may deem necessary so long as there is no compulsion on British manufacturers to disclose information which they regard as secret and would object to disclose to British officials.

Other governments faced with the difficulty that goods may be undervalued do not resort to the penalty of prohibiting the importation of the goods of the particular manufacturer, but themselves, if in doubt, appraise the goods at what they consider a fair valuation, and indeed a fair valuation can usually be made. If the valuation is too high, it is for the exporter to satisfy the authorities concerned that it is too high.

His Majesty's Government would therefore most strongly urge on the Government of the United States the desirability of suspending the penalty of prohibition on importation in Section 510, and replacing it by some such method as that above indicated."

13. In order that the friendly disposition of His Majesty's Government may be quite clear, I would explain that His Majesty's Government do not desire to raise any unnecessary objection to the reasonable prosecution of investigations, the purpose of which is to establish the foreign value, the export value or the United States value of goods exported to the United States. The objections of His Majesty's Government apply particularly to demands addressed to individual firms for details of the costs of production of particular articles, accompanied as they are by an explanation that a refusal will result in the goods of such firms being refused entry to the United States.

14. His Majesty's Government would further suggest that, if the United States Government find it impossible in any particular case to fix an appropriate valuation for any goods without satisfying themselves as to the cost of production, they should consider whether they could not adopt for the purpose, the report of a chartered accountant of recognized standing, approved both by the United States Government and the firm in question. The accountant would examine the books of the firm and give a certificate of the cost of production of the goods.

15. Such a procedure does not appear to be inconsistent with the provisions of the United States Tariff Act, which requires the United States authorities in a limited class of cases to be satisfied as to the cost of production of the goods concerned, but does not, if His Majesty's Government rightly interpret its provisions, prescribe the way in which such cost is to be ascertained and in particular does not appear to require that the books of the manufacturer or exporter must be inspected for the purpose, although it contemplates the possibility of such inspection in certain cases, and prescribes a penalty where a demand for inspection is made and refused.

16. I have to express the hope that the United States Government will furnish me with their observations on the foregoing suggestions, which I trust it may be possible for them to accept. I need not assure you that they are offered with the sincere desire to reach a practical agreement upon this matter.

17. Before closing this note I think it well to remove the misunderstanding which seems to exist in the minds of the United States Government as to the activities of the Customs agents of Canada and the Commonwealth of Australia in the United States. These agents of the Dominions do not demand particulars as to costs of production of individual firms, though it may happen that on occasions they ask whether a firm is prepared to volunteer information on the subject. There is further this great difference between their requests and the demands sometimes made by the United States Customs representatives, viz., that the sanction involved in the exclusion of a firm's goods from the Dominion concerned does not follow on a refusal to give the information.

The Honourable

Alanson B. Houghton,

[MY LORD,] [SIR,]

WITH reference to my Confidential despatch Dominions No. 321 of the 29th of July,* I have the honour to transmit to [Your Excellency,] [you,] to be laid before your Ministers, the accompanying copy of a note from the United States Ambassador replying to the notes addressed to him on the 1st of July regarding the activities of the agents of the Customs Divisions of United States Treasury Department in this country.

Enclosure in No. 329.

(No. 322.)

SIR,

London, 12th October, 1925.

REFERRING to your note of 1st July, 1925, with regard to the status and activities in Great Britain of the Customs Representatives of the United States Treasury Department, I have the honour, under the instructions of my Government, to comment as follows upon paragraphs 12-15 inclusive of the note under acknowledgment.

The Tariff Act of 1922 definitely fixes and determines what shall constitute "value" of imported merchandise, including cost of production, and no discretionary authority is left to the Secretary of the Treasury arbitrarily to define it. The law requires that the basis of appraisement shall be just, impartial, and uniformly applied to all imported merchandise from every country.

The appraising officers cannot arbitrarily appraise merchandise at what they consider "a fair valuation" without some legal basis for such appraisement. If an arbitrarily high valuation were placed on any merchandise the Appraiser's act could be set aside by the Courts on the production of admissible evidence as to the correct market value of the merchandise in question. Such arbitrary action would cause unnecessary litigation, expense, and embarrassment to the importer as well as the Government. It is held that the production of evidence should be in advance of the act of appraisement to assist the Appraiser in fixing the value. The Tariff Act only contemplates the collection of duty at the legal rate based on a proper valuation.

The principle of Section 510, to which the British Government objects, is not entirely new legislation, but gives to the Appraiser a more adequate means of securing information necessary to appraisement than heretofore existed, undoubtedly for the reason that previous legislation failed to produce the desired results, and also makes more effective other provisions of the same act requiring such information to be furnished. Section 510 supersedes paragraph U of Section III, of the Tariff Act of 1913, which in practically the same language provided that in cases where shippers and others sending merchandise to the United States failed or refused to submit to the inspection of a duly accredited investigation officer of the United States when requested to do so any or all of their books, records and accounts pertaining to the value or classification of such merchandise, the Secretary of the Treasury "in his discretion" was authorized, while such failure or refusal continued, to levy an additional duty of 15 per cent. ad valorem on all such merchandise imported into the United States. It will be noted that the imposition of the penalty provided in Section 510 is mandatory upon the Secretary of the Treasury instead of being discretionary as in the case of paragraph U.

Section 500 of the present tariff act provides that it shall be the duty of the Appraiser to appraise imported merchandise by ascertaining or estimating the value thereof by all reasonable ways and means in his power, any statement of cost or cost of production in any invoice, affidavit, declaration, or other document to the contrary notwithstanding. Section 499 provides that "imported merchandise, required by law or regulations made in pursuance thereof to be inspected, examined, or appraised, shall not be delivered from Customs custody, except as otherwise provided in the act, until it has been inspected, examined or appraised and is reported by the appraiser to have been truly and correctly invoiced and found to comply with the requirements of the laws of the United States." Inasmuch as the appraiser is responsible for determining in the first instance the correct dutiable value of imported merchandise, he may, even without the authority of Section 510, cause the delivery of merchandise to be withheld in any case where satisfactory information cannot be secured to enable him to make a legal appraisement thereof.

Respecting the suggestion that the report of a chartered accountant of recognized standing be accepted in establishing the cost of production, the following observation is made. This question has been previously submitted and decided in the negative for the reasons, inter alia, that the Tariff Act only contemplates that reports, certificates, or depositions be made by American Consuls, customs agents, or other officers of the United States Government, and that copies of official documents, to have full legal effect, must be certified by an official duly authorized to that effect by the Secretary of the Treasury; that any chartered accountant would necessarily have to be thoroughly familiar with the technical provisions of the tariff law and intricate court decisions as to what constitutes "market value;" that each such chartered accountant would have to be commissioned as an officer of the United States Government; that it would require a number of such men in each country with considerable travel, with technical difficulties; that a practice or method adopted with respect to the importations from one country would necessarily have to be uniformly applied; that, while such a practice, if permissible under the law, might work well respecting one country, there would be serious difficulties in applying the same methods to the imported merchandise from all countries for obvious reasons.

POSITION OF FOREIGN CONSULS IN THE DOMINIONS.

1565

No. 331.

COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL to THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

(Received 12th January, 1925.)

[Answered by No. 333.]

(No. 339.)

SIR,

Governor-General's Office, Melbourne, 6th December, 1924.

I HAVE the honour, at the instance of my Prime Minister, to inform you that the Commonwealth Government has lately given consideration to the question of the rights, privileges and status of Foreign Consuls in Australia and the other Dominions. It is felt that the time has arrived when the whole position should be reviewed in the light of recent events, which have appreciably affected the status of the Dominions and increased the importance of the duties discharged by the Foreign Consuls.

The procedure which is at present followed is that laid down in a Circular despatch dated 1st June, 1906,* from the then Secretary of State for the Colonies, the Earl of Elgin. This despatch, in turn, quotes as a precedent for the treatment of Consuls a decision given as early as 1856. It is set out therein that, as regards the transaction of public business, Consuls should under no circumstances be permitted to approach the local Governments except on matters connected with the personal welfare of their countrymen as individuals, and that they are not entitled to any special privileges beyond those extended to any prominent inhabitant of the Colony. It is further stated in this despatch that it would prove in the highest degree inconvenient if, in British Colonies, Consuls of Foreign Powers should be permitted to acquire a claim to the privileges or immunities of diplomatic agents, or to assume in any other respect a footing different from that which they hold in the United Kingdom.

Before proceeding to suggest some improvements in the present position, my Ministers have traversed in detail, as follows, the two outstanding reasons why, in their view, the instruction referred to above should now be cancelled and a revised procedure substituted.

1. The greater participation of the Dominions, as self-governing nations, in foreign affairs.
2. The fact that in actual practice the instructions contained in the above-mentioned despatch have long since been exceeded.

With regard to 1, it will, Ministers think, be conceded that, since the date quoted, the self-governing Dominions of the Empire have advanced appreciably, both in their relations with Great Britain and with Foreign Countries. Their direct interest and participation in foreign affairs since the signing of the Treaty of Versailles, and their responsibilities as individual States through the League of Nations, have placed the Dominions in an entirely different position from that which they occupied when the general instructions regarding Consuls were issued.

As an indication of this advance, Ministers mention the Resolution passed at the Imperial Conference, 1923, with regard to the negotiation of Treaties by the Dominions direct with Foreign Powers.

Acting in conformity with this Resolution, the Canadian Government has recently taken steps to consummate a Fisheries Treaty direct with the United States of America.

As a further evidence of the progress made, Ministers mention also the principle which has been affirmed by His Majesty's Government, in connexion with Canada and the Irish Free State, of direct diplomatic representation in the United States. Ministers state that there are indications that certain Dominions will at no distant date take advantage of this lately conferred right and be directly represented at Foreign Capitals.

* 10959/06: not reprinted.

Consequent on the acceptance of the principle under which the Dominions have direct relation with Foreign Powers, and after having observed its operation in actual practice, Ministers are of the opinion that circumstances must inevitably arise when expediency and efficiency will lead to the conduct of detailed negotiations through local Consular representatives. In those circumstances it would be impossible to carry out the instructions laid down in Lord Elgin's despatch.

With regard to 2, the following instances may be mentioned as indicating how the Dominions, as well as Consular representatives, have already departed from the instructions laid down.

In 1904 the Commonwealth Government negotiated directly with the Japanese Consul-General in Australia on the question of admitting Japanese merchants, students and tourists to Australia temporarily without their being subjected to immigration restrictions. In 1922 the French Government invested the French Consul-General in Australia with full powers to negotiate and conclude a Commercial Treaty with Australia. Both these matters would, in the ordinary course between fully independent Sovereign States, have been settled through the diplomatic channels.

In 1906 the Canadian Government negotiated direct with the Japanese Consul-General, and later sent a Canadian Minister to Japan to conclude an arrangement with respect to immigration. Commercial Treaties have also been negotiated by Canada with France, the United States of America, Germany and Italy, either through the Consuls-General or through Canadian Ministers direct with the Foreign Countries concerned.

It will be seen, therefore, that, while it has been expressly laid down and is the practice in International Law that there should be no distinction of treatment between Consuls in Britain and in the Dominions, the Consuls-General in the Dominions have, in the exercise of their functions, carried out duties of a much more important nature than was originally contemplated.

The fact that there are no diplomatic representatives of Foreign Powers in Australia has rendered this development to a certain extent inevitable. As a result, the Consuls-General have been inclined to consider their position as superior to that of their colleagues in other countries such as Britain, where a Minister is specially assigned for the conduct of diplomatic negotiations, and this has led to several requests for recognition of a status and grant of treatment consonant with the duties they discharge. My Ministers regard this contention as having a certain justification, particularly in those cases where Consuls-General have acted as intermediaries between their own and Dominion Governments.

The Commonwealth Government, after the fullest consideration, is of opinion that, subject to the observance of the general principle governing the despatch of 1906—that there must be unity in Imperial policy on all matters of common interest—something more should be done for Consuls-General in the Dominions than has hitherto been deemed necessary or expedient.

It is considered, however, that in dealing with this question of the extension of privileges, regard must be paid to the present status of Consular representatives. Foreign Consuls in Australia at the present time belong to two categories:—

1. Professional Consuls (Consuls de carrière) who are specially sent from the country they represent, and who are not engaged in other than official business.
2. Non-professional Consuls, comprising those of foreign birth as well as Australian citizens, who are engaged in business other than official business.

While there is no distinction in International Law between the different classes of Consuls in so far as their rights and privileges are concerned, it is felt by the Commonwealth Government that, as the professional Consuls in practice exercise a greater authority than the other Consuls, they have a just claim to special treatment.

The Commonwealth Government is further of the opinion that where Foreign Countries pay Australia the compliment of a direct professional representative, national courtesy as well as expediency suggest that there should be some degree of recognition and reciprocation. In this respect the Commonwealth Government cannot ignore the fact that its own representatives travelling in foreign countries have on numerous occasions in the last few years been granted many diplomatic courtesies.

Enclosed herewith are two lists,* in one of which are set out in full the names and designations of the Consular representatives at present in Australia, and in the other the names and designations of the Consuls de carrière in Australia.

* Not printed.

Consuls now enjoy the following privileges in the Commonwealth:—

1. Exemption from Customs duties.

- (a) All uniforms, flags and office requisites for official use imported by a Consul who is not a British subject or engaged in trade are free by law.
- (b) Passengers' furniture and household goods which have been in actual use by such passengers for at least one year, not exceeding £100 in value for each adult passenger, are exempt from duty. A liberal view is taken in assessing the value, and two members of a family being children are reckoned as one adult.
- (c) Personal effects are admitted free of duty without limitation as to value.

2. Exemption from the provisions of the Navigation Act.

Consular representatives of Foreign Countries, and their families, are also exempt from certain provisions of the Commonwealth Navigation Act, in that they may travel from port to port in Australia in ships of the country of which they are representatives. The approval of the Deputy Director of Navigation in the State in which the Consul resides must be first obtained by the Consul, and a form permitting him so to travel is issued.

3. Exemption from Federal taxation.

Exemption of Consular Officers in Australia from Federal taxation is laid down in the Income Tax Assessment Act, 1922, as follows:—

Section 14.—(1) The following incomes, revenues, and funds shall be exempt from income tax:—

- (h) The official salaries of foreign Consuls and the Trade Commissioners of any part of the British Dominions.

Section 15.—With respect to income which, under the last preceding section, is exempt from income tax, the exemption shall be limited to the persons specified in that section, and shall not extend to the salaries and wages of persons employed by such persons, although such salaries and wages may be paid wholly or in part out of the income, revenues or funds so exempt.

The terms of these sections are in accordance with the practice followed in regard to foreign Consular Officers in England.

It is suggested by my Ministers that consideration should now be given to the question of extending these privileges in the following directions, and that all the Dominions should be consulted concerning the proposal, in order that uniformity of procedure may be observed. In their view, however, these added privileges should be confined to Consuls-General who are nationals of the countries they represent, and who are engaged wholly in duties connected with such representation.

1. Consuls-General of the above category to be accorded a definite place in the Table of Precedence.
2. Dominions to be asked to extend exemption (subject always to the discretion of the Dominion Governments) from Customs duties on all household and official effects imported during term of office.
3. A general ruling to be given that in all matters affecting the interests of the Dominions and any Foreign Country it shall be left to the discretion of the Dominion Government and the Foreign Government concerned to say how far negotiations shall be conducted direct with the Consul-General. This ruling to be always subject to the guiding principle that unity in Imperial policy on all matters of common interest should be maintained.

As this principle is the basis of the resolution with regard to the negotiation of Treaties direct with Foreign Countries, it is believed that in practice no harmful results will ensue from such an innovation.

The points raised in this despatch are regarded by the Commonwealth Government as important, not only because in practice the Dominion Governments have long since been obliged to depart from the instructions originally laid down, but because, in the opinion of Ministers, the time has arrived when the principal Consular representatives of Foreign Countries should be accorded a status in keeping with the functions they are actually called upon to perform.

The subject is, too, of sufficient local importance to affect the attitude adopted by these representatives towards the question of residence in the Federal Capital, to which, it is anticipated, the Government of the Commonwealth will shortly be transferred.

In these circumstances my Ministers would be glad if early consideration could be given to the points raised in this despatch, and a decision conveyed to the several Dominion Governments in due course.

I have, &c.,
FORSTER,
Governor-General.

[Answered by No. 336.]

SIR,

Australia House, Strand, London, W.C.2, 27th June, 1925.

I DESIRE to inform you that I have received a communication from the authorities in Australia, indicating that representations have been made to them by the Consular representatives of foreign countries in the Commonwealth to secure exemption from the payment of licence fees on their motor-cars.

I should, therefore, be glad if you would kindly advise me, as early as possible, what is the position in this respect of Foreign Consuls in Great Britain, as well as of British Consuls in foreign countries.

I am, &c.,
E. A. J. HOGBEN,
Official Secretary.

No. 333.

COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE to THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

(No. 193.)

MY LORD,

Downing Street, 8th July, 1925.

I HAVE the honour to request Your Excellency to inform your Ministers that His Majesty's Government have had under consideration your despatch No. 339 of the 6th December, 1924,* regarding the position of Foreign Consuls in the Dominions.

2. His Majesty's Government appreciate the view of your Ministers that circumstances have changed since the position of Consular Officers in the Dominions was last reviewed. In particular they agree that the extent to which negotiations as regards matters affecting the interests of foreign countries in the Dominions should be conducted direct with the Consular representative of any particular foreign country is a matter for the decision of the Dominion Government and the foreign Government concerned. Indeed, as suggested in your despatch, procedure of this kind would seem to follow naturally from the principles laid down in the Resolution of the Imperial Conference of 1923 on the subject of the Negotiation, Signature and Ratification of Treaties which, as your Ministers are aware, has been accepted by His Majesty's Government and the Governments of all the Dominions. I would only observe in connexion with Section 1 (1) of the Resolution in question that His Majesty's Government would be interested in, and glad to be informed of, the progress of any negotiations which the Commonwealth Government may arrange to conduct in the manner suggested.

3. As regards the exemption of Consular Officers from taxation and customs duties, the practice in this country is to allow to all foreign Consular Officers, including honorary Consular Officers of British nationality, relief from income tax in respect of their official salaries and of fees paid to them in their official capacity. Articles required for official use of foreign Consular Officers are in practice exempt from customs duties owing to the fact that the articles in question are not subject to any duty on importation into this country. In the case of articles subject to duty which may be imported by foreign Consular Officers for personal use, exemption is confined to the Consuls-General and (in certain cases) Consular officers de carrière of a limited number of countries with which there exist special arrangements based on reciprocity, and in these cases the concession is granted only in respect of articles imported on first arrival. The practice in the case of foreign Consular Officers in other Dominions as regards Income Tax and Customs Duties varies to some extent. The latest particulars in the possession of His Majesty's Government are given in the memorandum* enclosed. His Majesty's Government doubt whether it would be desirable to endeavour to secure exact uniformity of practice. So far as they are concerned the existing practice as regards exemption of official salaries from Income Tax appears satisfactory; they would also see no objection to the continuance of any exemptions already granted in respect of articles imported by Consular Officers de carrière for their official or personal use at any time during their tenure of office or to the grant of exemptions in respect of such articles where these are not already granted.

4. As regards precedence, foreign Consular Officers have not been granted any place in the Table of Precedence in this country, and it has been found that great difficulty would arise in attempting to lay down any rules for according them formal precedence here or in distinguishing between the position of Consuls de Carrière and other Consular Officers. His Majesty's Government feel that they would have even greater difficulties in offering any suggestions as to the principles which might govern the grant of formal precedence to foreign Consular Officers in the Dominions, and they would prefer, if your Ministers agree, to leave this question open until the whole position can be discussed at an Imperial Conference.

5. I am communicating a copy of your despatch and of this reply to the Governments of the other Dominions and the Secretary of State for India.

MEMORANDUM REGARDING THE EXEMPTION OF CONSULAR OFFICERS FROM PAYMENT OF INCOME TAX AND CUSTOMS DUTIES IN THE DOMINIONS.

(a) INCOME TAX.

Canada.

THE Income War Tax Act 1917 as amended by 13 and 14 Geo. V, Chap. 52, section 5 (b) (i) exempts

New Zealand.

It was stated in a despatch from the Governor-General, No. 115, dated 26th May, 1921,† that "the position in the Dominion of New Zealand is that foreign Consuls . . . are by the Comity of Nations exempt from personal taxation. They are thus free from income tax."

" . . . Consular Agents who are permanent residents in New Zealand and carry on other business here, whose consular duties are thus merely incidental to their private businesses, do not enjoy similar privileges to those set out in the above paragraph."

(b) CUSTOMS DUTIES.

Canada.

The Customs Act, 1907, Article 706 (6-7 Ed. VII, Chap. 11) exempts "Articles for the personal or official use of Consuls-General who are natives or citizens of the country they represent and who are not engaged in any other business or profession."

New Zealand.

The Customs Amendment Act, 1921 (No. 19 of 1921) Third Schedule, exempts "Official supplies, uniforms, flags, and such other articles as may be approved by the Minister for the official use of Consular Officers, Trade Commissioners, and other accredited representatives of any British or Foreign Government."

Union of South Africa.

The Customs Tariff Act, 1914, Section 14 (No. 26 of 1914) provides that "the Governor-General may by Proclamation declare . . ."

"that there may be allowed a rebate or refund of the duty which would be payable in respect of articles (not being private wearing apparel or effects, food or drink, or tobacco in any form) for the official or private use of Consuls who are subjects of the Governments represented by them and are not engaged in any other business, profession, or occupation in the Union."

Proclamation dated 3rd July, 1914, made under Act No. 26 of 1914, after reciting the above quoted paragraph (inter alia), declared rebates or refunds of duty on the following:—

MEMORANDUM.

GENERALLY speaking, the only privileges conceded to foreign Consular Officers in this country (apart from the exemptions in relation to income tax and customs duties referred to in the despatch to the Governor-General of the Commonwealth of Australia of the 8th July*) are—

(i) Exemption from the billeting of troops (see section 104 (2) (g) of the Army Act, 1881).

(ii) In the case of Consuls de Carrière and their wives, exemption from the provisions of the Aliens Order 1920 as to registration of aliens (see attached extract from a Home Office Circular to Chief Constables of the 29th March, 1920).

No demand for free railway passes appears to have been made and, if any such request were to be brought to the notice of His Majesty's Government, it would be regarded with disfavour. Similarly His Majesty's Government would not expect a foreign Government to issue a free pass for railway travel to a British Consular Officer and would not support a British Consular Officer in making any such claim or any other claim for privileges of a kind which could not be allowed to foreign Consuls in this country.

It appears that on the whole the Consular Body in this country have not made many claims for special privileges.

EXTRACT FROM HOME OFFICE CIRCULAR TO CHIEF CONSTABLES OF 29TH MARCH, 1920.

14. Exemptions.—Under Article 14 of the Order the Secretary of State has power to direct that any person or class of persons shall be exempt either unconditionally or subject to conditions from all or any of the provisions of the Order. Under this Article the Secretary of State is pleased to direct that the following three classes of persons shall be exempt from registration as aliens—that is to say, (1) persons naturalized as British subjects in any British Possession, (2) foreign Consular Officers, whether former enemy aliens or not, who are Consuls "de carrière," i.e., paid officials whose whole time is devoted to their Consular duties, and (3) the subjects of Native States in India. If the Police have reason to think that any colonially naturalized British subject or subject of an Indian Native State is to be regarded with suspicion and ought not to enjoy the exemption, they should make application to the Secretary of State for the imposition of special restrictions under Article 11 of the Order. The wives of persons exempt will benefit by their husbands' privileges.

SIR, Government House, Wellington, 14th October, 1925.
I HAVE the honour to acknowledge the receipt of, and to thank you for, your despatch No. 123, of the 8th July,† forwarding a copy of correspondence with the Governor-General of the Commonwealth of Australia regarding the position of Foreign Consuls in the Dominions.

2. The despatch was referred to my Prime Minister who, in reply, makes the following observations:—

"The New Zealand Government is not entirely in accord with the views of the Government of the Commonwealth with regard to the class of subject matter which may properly be discussed between Consular representatives of foreign countries and the Government of a Dominion, but is glad to learn that no objection will be offered by His Majesty's Government to the exchange of communications between this Government and Consular representatives of foreign Governments on minor matters which can be more conveniently dealt with here than through the medium of His Majesty's Foreign Office, such, for example, as the matters relating to the private estates and status of foreigners in New Zealand, and mere details of commercial transactions.

* No. 333. † No. 335.

The New Zealand Government has certainly no intention of entering into any treaty of commercial arrangement with a foreign country by arrangement with a foreign Consular officer, or otherwise than through His Majesty's Government.

With regard to the mandate which New Zealand holds for Western Samoa by the delegation of His Majesty: questions of various kinds relating to Samoan properties and the Administration, and the rights of foreigners in Samoa, arise from time to time, and this Government may find it convenient to discuss and arrange such questions with the recognized Consular representatives of foreign Powers. It is hoped that that course will have the approval of His Majesty's Government.

As to precedence, it is not considered that any difficulty will arise in New Zealand where a distinction has always been made between the Consular representatives who are salaried officers of their own country and the more general class of subjects of His Majesty, who receive Consular Warrants and are remunerated by fee."

I have, &c.,

CHARLES FERGUSON,
Governor-General.

PLEASE communicate following to your Prime Minister:—

Begins: Very Confidential. His Majesty's Government view with some concern the pressure on the London market for overseas loans. The figures of the United Kingdom balance of payment suggest that United Kingdom may be lending more than she has available for the purpose from savings, and overlending will burden the exchanges to the disturbance of trade. This will be the more undesirable now that in harmony with the Dominions we have adopted the gold standard.

His Majesty's Government are anxious that the London market should at all times give financial facilities to the Dominions to the utmost extent possible; but if the market is overstrained the reaction will be detrimental to all.

They would therefore welcome any action Dominions can take to diminish for the present their demands on London for loans. They would also be glad to receive as long notice as may be possible of any loans which it may be essential to place in order that these issues may be co-ordinated with other essential financial operations. Similar telegram sent to other Dominions. [To Commonwealth of Australia only: States of course are equally concerned but it is not proposed to make any communications to them pending reply from you as we do not know whether there have been any recent discussions between Commonwealth and States as to limitation of overseas borrowings.]

18TH JUNE. Very confidential. Following from my Prime Minister:—
Begins: With reference to your telegram of 15th June,* Loans. Council comprising Commonwealth Treasurer and Treasurers of the States met to-day to discuss loan programme for the year ending June, 1926. Commonwealth Government most anxious to reduce borrowings as far as possible and in any case desire to limit them to forty millions which is approximately the total of loan expenditure in the year just closing. After fullest pressure upon the States to eliminate all postponeable items there remains a total of about fifty millions of new money which will have to be borrowed for developmental purposes. No further reduction could be brought about without imperilling the continuance of the Loan Council, all the States of course having sovereign jurisdiction and absolute powers. Estimated not more than ten millions can be borrowed in Australia without serious financial disturbance. This leaves 40 millions to be borrowed abroad for the programme for the year. Loan Council agrees that overseas borrowing should be in London if reasonable terms obtainable, also that if America is to be approached for loans, borrowings should be carried out by Commonwealth Government as single borrowing authority for all. States requested Commonwealth to ascertain (?manner in which) total overseas borrowing should be allocated between London and America if full amount not available in London. Information in my possession indicates position of London market would not enable full amount to be issued there. Shall be obliged if you will let me have views of your Government as to possibility and desirability to endeavour to obtain all the monies London. Also whether in view of probability of part of requirements ordinarily satisfied by London market being diverted to America steps are contemplated for issue of Anglo-American loan by co-operation between London and New York groups. This of course appears desirable, but if no steps are being taken in this direction Australia ?will ?have to fill requirements not satisfied in London by direct borrowings New York. In the past Australia has financed through London, but if commencement now made in regard to direct independent borrowings in New York this practice will probably be continued. Australian public opinion in favour of continuance of British finance. Glad if you would treat foregoing as strictly confidential and should appreciate your reply earliest possible date. Ends.

YOUR telegram of 18th June. Very Confidential.† Following from Chancellor of Exchequer for your Prime Minister:—

Begins: 1. We understand from your cable that you count on meeting in Australia maturing domestic debt, Commonwealth and State, plus £10,000,000 of new money and that your total requirement, Commonwealth and States, outside Australia in twelve months from 1st July, 1925, will be £40,000,000. This does not include any of the sums recently raised in London.

Is this correct or have you in addition maturities, Commonwealth or State in London?

2. Of the £40,000,000 how much do you require to raise before 31st December, 1925?

3. We entirely agree on the importance of a single borrowing authority for negotiation with America.

4. We also favour co-operation between London and New York by simultaneous sterling and dollar issues.

5. Probably arrangements for American co-operation can best be made in London. Who do you wish to represent you in London? Ends.

loans on the London market, I have the honour to report that my Ministers have been devoting very earnest attention to the financial position of New South Wales—particularly in view of the representations contained in your telegram above quoted.

2. It is imperative that this State—if only for the carrying out of developmental works of an urgent and important character—must have access to a financial market and, failing the British market, the alternative would appear to be to turn to the United States of America for financial accommodation. My Ministers are opposed to this course and express the view that it would be time enough to consider having resource to New York when they find London definitely and finally closed to them. They feel that the stringency now being experienced in London will pass off and that it would be a mistaken policy to break the long tradition of New South Wales financial connexion with London on account of a temporary difficulty that may disappear a few months hence. Ministers point out that the London market has never yet refused to finance New South Wales requirements and that the financial connexion between Great Britain and this State has been mutually beneficial, for while New South Wales has been granted the financial assistance required the bulk of the money has remained in England being used for the purchase of British goods, etc.

3. Ministers have definitely decided to refrain from joining the Australian Loan Council. There is a strong diversity of opinion as to the wisdom of this action, but Ministers are of opinion that in order to finance the large operations in this State they must be armed with absolute freedom in connexion with the raising of all loans. Whatever advantage the Loan Councils arrangements might have in avoiding competition between States are outweighed, in the estimation of Ministers, by the possibility of New South Wales being limited in its amount of borrowing either in London or locally.

Begins: Press Cables are somewhat misleading. There is no new embargo but a continuance of the conditions which have prevailed since the Spring. It has been necessary to limit Overseas Loans in order to avoid over-lending here, with consequent pressure on Exchange, and increase of money rates here to the general disadvantage. It was never the intention to maintain permanently an embargo, and we are anxious to bring it to a close as soon as may be possible. Mr. Bruce will remember that, in March last, with the general approval of the Dominions and to the great advantage of Australian Exchange, we returned to the gold standard. This has necessarily been a somewhat delicate operation, and we have to move very circumspectly more particularly until the effects of the Autumn Exchange pressure can be fully weighed. It is for this reason that we have been proceeding, and feel bound to proceed, with great care, so far with success. We hope we may see our way to take further steps before long, but, for the moment, the position, particularly having regard to uncertain conditions in America, is delicate and continues to impose great caution on us.

MR. HARMSWORTH (by Private Notice) asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether the recent decision to remove the embargo on Dominion and Foreign loans being raised in this country provided for guarantees that money loaned should be expended entirely upon goods produced or manufactured within the United Kingdom?

MR. CHURCHILL: I would refer my hon. Friend to what I said at Sheffield on this subject. [An Hon. Member: "When?"] Last week. Once the so-called embargo has been removed it is not practicable to prescribe exact conditions to the market. It must either be removed or maintained, and I am satisfied that at the present time the right course was removal. All loans must ultimately go out in goods or services.

SIR H. BRITAIN asked the Prime Minister whether the question of holding the next Imperial Conference in one of the Overseas Dominions has been considered by the Cabinet, and whether such a suggestion would meet with favourable consideration.

THE PRIME MINISTER: His Majesty's Government would, of course, always be ready to consider, in consultation with the other Governments concerned, whether it would be practicable to hold a meeting of the Imperial Conference in one of the Overseas Dominions; but arrangements for these Conferences depend so much on the circumstances in which they are called, that I fear it is impossible for me to give a definite reply to my Honourable Friend's question.

24TH DECEMBER. Your telegram of 21st December. Confidential.* Next Imperial Conference. Following for Prime Minister from my Prime Minister:—

Begins: Your telegram of 21st December,* my Government very strongly of opinion that the Imperial Conference should be called in 1926, and indeed we cannot see how the same can be delayed. The Locarno Treaty has been hailed as the most important and far-reaching Treaty of recent years. The Australian people are waiting for some declaration from Government in regard to it. Official pronouncements from your Government have emphasized the importance of the Treaty and the necessity for an early Imperial Conference to discuss it. On the 18th of November* you cabled that it seemed to you that before arriving at any final judgment Dominion Governments would desire the fullest possible information as to the situation created by the Treaty in relation to the whole field of foreign policy and defence. In the statement made in the House of Commons on that date the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs said that it was recognized that only Dominion Governments acting with the approval of their Parliaments could undertake on their behalf the obligations which His Majesty's Government asked the Imperial Parliament to undertake and that your Government hoped to discuss matters with the Dominions at the next Imperial Conference which should not be too long delayed. Further, that it was not thought possible to discuss questions of such importance and covering so wide a field by despatch or telegraph. These statements have received wide publicity and naturally aroused considerable interest in the Treaty. To now put off the Conference until 1927 is to completely destroy this effect and create the impression that the Treaty is relatively unimportant despite your Government's assurance to the contrary, and that the principle of consultation on such matters is a comparatively unimportant formality. My Government is convinced that only by personal consultation between Prime Ministers at the Imperial Conference can a basis for united Empire action in regard to the Locarno Treaty which is vital be arrived at, which will be acceptable to and receive the endorsement of the Parliaments of the self-governing Dominions. Failing an Imperial Conference in June, various Parliaments will of necessity have to consider the attitude toward the Locarno Treaty with extreme probability of different decisions being arrived at which would present the appearance of disunity in the Empire on a fundamental and vital question. This most essential to avoid. As to the Treaty itself, from cables exchanged between us we are convinced that it is now and in its ultimate effect of paramount importance to the Dominions. Your telegram above quoted suggests that it has created a new situation with regard to foreign policy and defence.

These are the conclusions formed by my Government, and indeed we feel convinced that as a direct and logical result of the Treaty new proposals will be formulated in the direction of defence (?). Any such development particularly in regard to naval limitations is of vital interest to the whole Empire, and especially to those portions of the Empire contiguous to the Pacific. On such a matter we must be consulted.

In short, we feel that the Locarno Treaty in itself is of sufficient importance to render an early Imperial Conference essential, and that it carries with it a suggestion of further development upon which it is imperative that the Empire should be consulted and speak with a single voice. The moral effect of a united Empire declaration in regard to these matters is in our opinion profound, and my Government considers that on every possible occasion the Empire should so speak. It is impossible to ignore the fact that the question of inter-Imperial consultation has reached a very interesting and delicate stage, and it is highly desirable in the interests of the Empire that the advances we have already made in this connexion should be consolidated. To delay the Conference until 1927 especially when there are so many important matters to be discussed would be a retrograde (?) step of a most dangerous character. My Government therefore considers it is most desirable that an Imperial Conference should be held in June, 1926, and trusts that it will be found possible to so arrange. Ends.
